Cast: Hal LeRoy, Rochelle Hudson, Patricia Ellis, Guy Kibbee, Hugh Herbert, Hobart Cavanaugh, Chic Chandler, Eddie Tamblyn, Douglas Dumbrille, Clara Blandick, Mayo Methot, Richard Carle and Charles Wilson.

There was a swell juvenile comedy for the screen in Carl Ed's comic strip of "Harold Teen." This was demonstrated when it was originally made by First National with Arthur Lake in the title role, having emerged as a memorable farce of high school days. Much to everyone's surprise, the current version by Warners is a BACKSTAGE MUSICAL COMEDY. This version will get by as a program attraction. But no more.

The original treatment of the story based upon these nationally known cartoon characters has been discarded in its entirety—which would have been all right had the present adapters substituted anything half as good. They didn't and story difficulties constantly hamper director and cast. Murray Roth, directing, accomplished a workmanlike job with what he had to work with. But that wasn't much.

Obviously, the whole aim of the production is to introduce Hal LeRoy, now playing Harold, as an extraordinary dancer. He is one of the fastest men on his feet the screen has ever seen and his specialty at the close of the picture will bring down any house anywhere. The trouble is they have tried to get a feature picture out of a single dance.

For story there is a phoney menace to the love affair of Harold and Lillums offered by a banker and his daughter. The audience never knows how menacing this menace will become, nor for that matter does the menace seem to know. All that it leads up to is an amateur show put on by the high school lads and lassies in which the hit is of course furnished by Harold, who learned dancing by mail. Audiences unacquainted with Hal LeRoy's stage reputation will be astonished by how well he learned.

LeRoy makes an excellent appearance as Harold and handles his dialogue well. He is a bit out of character in the opening reels, being played too heavily as a dolt. That, too, is story fault.

Rochelle Hudson is a perfect Lillums, revealing an unexpectedly good singing voice. Patricia Ellis registers briefly as the vamp and Douglas Dumbrille does well by her banker father. Hobart Cavanaugh as Pops, the Sugar Bowl proprietor; Guy Kibbee and Clara Blandick, Lillums' parents, stand out. Hugh Herbert has no chance and whoever assigned Chick Chandler a part as a high-schooler deserves an A in imagination. He must have been a very backward student to have taken so long to graduate.

Your plug is, of course, the draw of the comic strip. But don't promise too much. It is mild entertainment at best.

Secret Service

Joe Connor, famous government sleuth, is in Hollywood working under cover in one of the studios. He is said to be working as a mechanic and getting lowdown on code violations which might cause a sensation later when his reports are acted on in Washington. Studio officials are checking frantically to locate him. Thus far they draw a blank.

Two Start Monday At 20th Century

Twentieth Century busts into activity on Monday with the starting of two pictures. Actual shooting will start on "Bulldog Drummond," the Ronald Colman feature, while rehearsals will get under way on the next George Arliss feature, "The Head of the Family."

Studio workers are doing a rave over what they have seen of the first George Arliss, "The House of Rothschild."

Writers Guild Pulls Five From Academy

The Screen Writers Guild was enthused last night over the fact that five of the members of the Academy and Guild who had been named by the Academy for possible appointments to code positions resigned their Academy honors.

The writers who have withdrawn from the Academy slate are Harlan Thompson, Samson Raphaelson, Kubec Glasmon, Bess Meredyth and Houston Branch. They constitute five of the thirteen Guild members who were on the Academy list of nineteen.

Rogers and Title Only Highlights

"DAVID HARUM"
Fox

Direction .....James Cruze
Author.....Edward Noyes Westcott
Adaptor .....Walter Woods
Photography .....Hal Mohr
Cast: Will Rogers, Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Stepin Fetchit, Charles Middleton, Sarah Padden, Kent Taylor, Noah Beery and Roger Imhof.

Everyone knows what a Will Rogers picture is, and "David Harum" is almost too much of the same old thing. It is just too homely and wholesome and quaint, and it is also frightfully slow.

It is so slow, in fact, that the few really good comedy sequences stand out almost hilariously. The picture lags badly in the beginning, then breaks into a gentle trot, balks a few times, and ends in a pretty good run.

There is practically no story. It is, rather, a series of episodes . . . horse trading, helping poor widows with mortgages, and straightening out a tottering love affair. Will Rogers, of course, fits perfectly the character of David Harum.

The several horse trades between Rogers and Charles Middleton are classics. Their endless whittling, which starts out nonchalantly and gets more furious as the deal grows hotter; their beating around the bush, and their gleeful, turn-about gyping of each other is all very amusing. The horse race at the end, with the balky trotter who won't budge unless his driver sings "Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay," is hilarious.

Evelyn Venable is charming as Rogers' young friend who needs his help to win the bank clerk, Kent Taylor. Louise Dresser is perfectly cast as Rogers' sister, and Stepin Fetchit is a distinct hit in his role. Charles Middleton is swell as the trading deacon, Sarah Padden is beautifully outstanding in a small role; Kent Taylor is rather stiff, and Noah Beery and Roger Imhof are seen briefly.

Walter Woods has kept the essentials in his adaptation of the Edward Noyes Westcott book; James Cruze directed well, especially the horse trading and the race sequences; and Hal Mohr photographed.

The picture has good, authentic atmosphere, and the exciting finish is in its favor. Rogers fans will be pleased but unexcited by it.

Lowe Up for 'U' Lead

Report has it that Edmund Lowe will be the man chosen by Universal to play opposite eight (count 'em) women in "Frailty," which Ed Marin will direct for Universal. Picture is from the play, "The Women in His Life."

Phillips Holmes Back

Phillips Holmes arrived in town yesterday. Starts work immediately in the M. H. Hoffman production "No Ransom."

Buck Jones Set for Ken Maynard Spot

Those on the inside say that Buck Jones will probably be Universal's western star when Ken Maynard finishes his present picture, "Doomed To Die."

This picture, his eighth on present contract, is also the last on this contract. It is reported that Maynard isn't very anxious to renew with Universal, and it is rumored that Universal isn't so hot to have him. Already studio is said to be dickering with Buck Jones to slip in and furnish the westerns for the "U" program.

Two Studios Seeking Deal on Joel McCrea

Joel McCrea is being sought by two studios on a one-picture loanout deal from Radio. Warners want him for the lead opposite Kay Francis in her next picture "The Firebird," and Charles Rogers wants him for the top spot in "Canal Boy," opposite Dorothy Wilson.

The studio plans to loan him out for one of these pictures, but has not yet decided on which one.

Miss MacDonald East

Jeanette MacDonald left by train last night for a two weeks' trip to New York. She will make several radio broadcasts over CBS and return in time to play the feminine lead in "The Merry Widow." Miss MacDonald was accompanied by her manager, Robert Ritchie, who leaves from New York for two months in Europe.

Lasky Wants Kruger

Jesse L. Lasky yesterday placed a bid with MGM for the loan of Otto Kruger for a top spot in "Forgotten Lips," formerly titled "Springtime for Henry," at Fox.

Academy affairs under new lease of life are going along so nicely at present that the special "steering committee" will pass up its regular weekly meeting slated for tomorrow.

which he might be fitted, at a salary he was worth, but he objected strenuously to Elliott at this time, with all the talk of movie salary control, and protection of stockholders, being tagged with a thousand a week ticket.

Bluntly, it is put that the President's thoughts were: "You know you are not worth a thousand a week in a picture job now. If there is any opening out there for you that is legitimate, take it, at a salary that is legitimate."

The importance to Hollywood in the story is the fact that it isn't going to help the industry's cause any in arguing against salary control to have a specific case of four-figure offers so close to the President's own knowledge and acquaintance of the value of services.

GOOD DAME will take its place alongside some of the best contributions B. P. Schulberg has made to the business in his long career.

VARIETY

Sylvia Sidney and Fredric March are co-starred for happy results in GOOD DAME, a breezy, fresh, well-sustained comedy which can be labeled sock entertainment for any theatre . . . freshly treated, and spiced with lines and business which keeps up a constant tattoo of solid laughs. Add to this intelligent, zestful direction of Marion Gering, and a fine balance between action, drive and comic variety and the b. o. should register no complaints . . .

Different type role becomes March very well, and Miss Sidney has seldom been more effective than in the combination of wistful, resentful and fantastic comedy love making which this part permits her.

schedules, give people rests between pictures, have more time for preparation, does not make the Warner ideas the correct method for turning out pictures, but rather shows up the production staff of the other plants who spend more money and should make the Warner gang look like a quickie outfit when comparing the quality of their respective output.

But, right or wrong, somebody in Warners deserves plenty of applause for keeping an organization working the way that crowd does. We believe Zanuck started it, put the fire into the pack, gave them ambitions and enthusiasms that no other production crowd had in this town, and since Zanuck's departure Hal Wallis has kept that fire flaming.

And it demands a lot of fire for some of the things that are asked. We heard of a director who came home late one night recently, just having completed a picture that day, and found a script with a note attached to it, informing him that he had to be on the set the following morning at nine, to start another picture. He had never seen the script before, knew nothing about the story, had no idea of who had been cast for the picture; but put in his appearance. Walking on the set he found two or three hundred people. He did not know who was who or what they were there for, but recognizing a face here and there asked them "What part are you playing?" Shooting started promptly and the picture will, no doubt, be finished on schedule and as good as most of them coming out today.

In what other studio could you hand a script to a man who had just finished work on another picture that day and have him start work on the new one within six hours from the time he got the story?

Does this prove anything?

Mark Sullivan Also Sees Supreme Court

New York.—An important angle on possible code developments came in a speech today by Mark Sullivan, famous political writer, before Williams University yesterday.

Sullivan declared: "I doubt whether the Supreme Court will uphold the validity of the NRA codes, as drawn up by thirty or forty men in various industries who are not ELECTED representatives of the American people."

Want Gary Cooper for 'Pursuit of Happiness'

Arthur Hornblow is trying to get Gary Cooper for the starring role in "Pursuit of Happiness," his first production under the Paramount banner.

Cooper has not yet signed the three picture deal that has been discussed at Paramount for some time, but is expected to place his signature on a contract before long.

Forty for 'U's' List In 1934-35 Season

New York.—Universal is stepping it up for next season. That's the first result of the enthusiastic conferences just held here by the Laemmles, the Cochranes and J. R. Grainger. This year's program of thirty-six pictures is to be boosted to forty.

A radical step in the making up of the selections for the forty pictures will be meetings this week-end in four important district zones at which suggestions on types of pictures and personalities will be asked from the sales force.

Sullavan Mystery Just Good Gag

New York.—And now the big city is convinced that all the mystery about the goings and comings of Margaret Sulllavan is just a publicity stunt.

The reason for the decision is the information that Universal gave the gal a leave of absence last Christmas and just asked her to keep in readiness for a call. She finally got the "official" call yesterday and will now fly to the Coast Sunday. Next picture is "Little Man, What Now?"

company's "specials," with Berman heading the producers for the remainder of this year's program.

In other words, the whole matter is still up to Cooper and will remain so until he comes back, with the organization, as it is now constructed, carrying on with the production of the remainder of this year's program, about 14 pictures.

Berman's deal, which will be signed today, is contingent for its complete definition of his activities, on Cooper's return and what he decides to do. However in either case, "Pan" sticks on and will get the prize pickings for the remainder of this production year.

Kahane and McDonough will start today with an attempted complete analysis of the rest of the production organization and sifting out the applications of outsiders who have put in bids for production berths at that spot.

It is expected that McDonough will issue a statement today that will take care of the anxiety that has been running high on the lot since his arrival and that of Aylesworth.

It is understood that Aylesworth will leave tonight. Word was passed along that he did that last night, but a phone call to the Ambassador brought the information that he had not checked out, but was not in his room at the time of going to press.

ROOSEVELT DENIES OFFER

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

●THE other night, after the preview of Frank Capra's latest picture for Columbia, "It Happened One Night," a group of producers working in other studios, happened to gather around the table at one of Hollywood's night spots and discussed the merits of that certain-to-be-a-hit picture. All of them agreed that Frank Capra is about the best director in the motion picture business.

Long after the argument had died down, the head of one of the largest studios in town, broke the silence with "I'd give $1,000,000 for the contracts of Frank Capra, Bob Riskin and Sam Briskin" and there was a simultaneous reply from most of those present which read, "For a few dollars more you could have the whole Columbia outfit."

All of which may or may not be true, but the fact remains that Capra, Riskin and Briskin are three very able workers and well worth the $1,000,000 offer and more.

Just where Bob Riskin started and finished with his work on that story and how much Capra had to do with the actual writing or the inspiration for it, will never be known. Capra will tell you that he had nothing to do with the writing other than to agree or disagree with any part of its treatment. Riskin will say that "without Frank, it could not have been." So, as far as story is concerned, we have to credit them both.

BUT—

That story in hands other than Frank Capra's would have been as nothing, even worse, probably than MGM's "Fugitive Lovers" or Universal's "Cross Country Cruise," both subjects around the same idea. But with Capra dictating all the movements, telling the artists how to read their lines and how to react with such readings, it became one of the most interesting and fascinating pictures we have seen in many days and one certain to do BIG BUSINESS wherever it is played.

We have never seen a picture with such easy movement, such utter relaxation in telling and one that was so easily believed. There were times when you would say, "Here's the spot where they are going to flop and that flop is going to ruin the picture, for they can't go on and on twisting an

WARNERS' 'HEAT LIGHTNING' ENJOYABLE ENTERTAINMENT

LeRoy Direction and Dialogue Good

"HEAT LIGHTNING"
(Warners)

Director .....Mervyn LeRoy
Story .....Leon Abrams and George Abbott
Screen Play.....Brown Holmes and Warren Duff
Photography .....Sid Hickox
Cast: Aline MacMahon, Ann Dvorak, Lyle Talbot, Glenda Farrell, Allen Jenkins, Preston Foster, Theodore Newton, Hobart Cavanaugh, Maidel Turner, Ruth Donnelly, William Robertson.

"Heat Lightning" unfolded at a first preview as an original, entertaining program picture. Starting with a story that was no wow, they stepped up a few pegs by adding dialogue that is exceptionally good, and finished with Mervyn LeRoy directing a poignant, simple thing with a style that is artfully artless.

What charm the picture has may be given to its simplicity, the absence of a "studio" feeling about it. It balances tragic moments well done, with the expert comedy that might be expected from Glenda Farrell, Ruth Donnelly and Frank McHugh.

The story tells of Aline MacMahon, who runs a combination auto camp, gasoline station and lunch room in the heart of the desert. Her kid sister, played by Ann Dvorak, becomes tired of the dull existence and longs to taste life.

Preston Foster and Lyle Talbot, bank robbers trying to get across the border into Mexico, happen by. Foster is a former sweetheart of Ann's. Glenda Farrell and Ruth Donnelly enter the plot as two wealthy and silly divorcees from Reno who are forced to stay overnight when the car develops engine trouble.

Foster decides to relieve the ladies of their jewelry, on the same night that Ann sneaks out for a rendezvous with Theodore Newton. She returns at dawn in time to see Foster emerging from her sister's room, and the result is a tragic scene between Aline and Ann, well played, and well handled. Later, Foster and Talbot, opening the safe, are discovered by MacMahon, who shoots Foster down.

The tragic drabness of the atmosphere and story needed the sprightly comedy of Glenda Farrell and caustically amusing Ruth Donnelly, with McHugh aiding and abetting them as chauffeur, maid, personal servant and comptroller.

Aline MacMahon gives conviction to a part that was made for her, with Ann Dvorak a capable foil. Preston Foster and Lyle Talbot turn in neat jobs.

All in all, while it won't start any raves, it's an evening of pleasing entertainment, offering a new atmosphere and background to audiences weary of seeing the same sets. And a yucca plant to Mervyn LeRoy for not bringing in a single, solitary dance in any shape or form.

'REGISTERED NURSE' GETS BY: 'MADE HER BED' HOKE MELLER

Cast and Direction Lift Loose Yarn

"REGISTERED NURSE"
Warners-First National

Direction .....Robert Florey
Screen Play: Lillie Hayward and Peter Milne.
Play by: Wilton Lackaye and Florence Johns.
Dialogue Direction: Arthur Greville Collins.
Photography .....Sid Hickox
Supervision .....Sam Bischoff
Cast: Bebe Daniels, Lyle Talbot, John Halliday, Irene Franklin, Sidney Toler, Gordon Westcott, Minna Gombell, Beulah Bondi, Vince Barnett, Phillip Reed, Mayo Methot, Renee Whitney, Virginia Sale, Ronnie Crosby, Ed Gargan, Gordon Elliott, George Humbert.

"Registered Nurse" checked in a good response at preview, in spite of the fact that nurses and doctors will be inclined to giggle rather than gasp over certain hospital scenes.

Tale starts with Bebe Daniels getting ready to divorce a drunken husband and go back to nursing. A motor accident sends him to an insane asylum. Three years later practically the whole hospital is in love with Bebe. She makes it seem reasonable. She is tender with children, tough with a tempestuous gangster, firm with his moll, and reserved with the medical staff.

She grabs a few months of illicit romance with a young doctor. It seems that she cannot get a divorce because her husband is insane. Even if that law holds good in every state in the Union, there still is Mexico. But some women just aren't quick thinkers.

When her husband turns up she is required to decide between the dangerous operation which may save his mind or cause his death, and his return to the asylum. There the gangster reveals his heart of gold. Under the guise of aimless gossip, he suggests a jump out of the window, which the husband obligingly does, when they leave him all, all alone, as is the habit in hospitals with violent mental cases.

Gordon Westcott does one of the finest, most reserved and convincing pieces of work seen in a long time as the husband. A word dragged just a trifle here, a tiny blank pause there, a slight tension in gestures indicate the lack of balance. It's good work.

John Halliday turns in a brilliantly smooth performance as the restrained head of the hospital. Lyle Talbot is engaging as the young doctor who is the nurse's choice. Sidney Toler contributes some wild fun as the big shot who takes his gang with him to the hospital when he starts a rough house. And one of the funniest scenes of muddled meanings in a long time is the conversation between Irene Franklin, as a battered and belligerent madame, and Beulah Bondi, cool, sedate and concerned as the head nurse.

Minna Gombell turns in an excellent job as the nurse whose policeman sweetheart, played by Ed Gargan, is killed. Mayo Methot makes a smallish part seem important. Virginia Sale contributes solid comedy as a probationer. A little boy makes one scene charming. If he can keep it up, he is another Dickie Moore.

A scene of purely hoke laughs should not be overlooked. It is the violent mixing of two wrestlers who are glad to be in a hospital by the time they have decided which one is to win their next match.

Cutting muffed several scenes which lose tension through abrupt transitions, but all together, Robert Florey's direction has done well by a none too closely knit tale.

Sedgwick of Age

Director Ed Sedgwick will celebrate his twenty-first anniversary in the picture business this week. His first job was as an actor in the Lubin one-reeler "The Battle of Getty's Goat." He is now directing "I'll Tell the World" at Universal.

'Three Wks.' Up for Swanson First MGM

After many weeks of discussion, Gloria Swanson placed her signature on a long term contract at MGM. Irving Thalberg is seriously considering the Elinor Glyn novel "Three Weeks" as the first starring vehicle for Miss Swanson.

The Glyn novel was made as a silent film by MGM about twelve years ago with Conrad Nagel and Eileen Pringle in the top spots.

'Anthony Adverse' May Be in 2 Parts

New York.—The report here is that Warners have come pretty close to a definite decision to make "Anthony Adverse" in two parts of ten reels each, with a single version in twelve reels.

RKO Office Not Moving

the RKO-Radio Pictures unit, will hereafter, as president of the latter, spend approximately eight months of the year in Hollywood.

B. B. Kahane, as president of RKO Studios, will function as operating head of the production plant.

Merian C. Cooper will retain the title of vice president in charge of production, but will actually be free to gratify his desire to make pictures abroad or at the studio as he cares to, through the elevation of Pan Berman to an executive producer's title, Berman remaining at the studio all the time.

Ned Depinet, newly elected president of the RKO Distributing Corporation, will also spend more time at the studio than in the past, conveying the field force's ideas on pictures.

Cooper leaves for Honolulu for a rest soon, and on his return will reach a decision about his first special production.

Eilers, Armstrong, Arlen Rate Bows

"SHE MADE HER BED"
(Rogers-Paramount)

Direction .....Ralph Murphy
Story by.....James M. Cain
Adaptation .....Casey Robinson and Frank R. Adams
Photography .....Milton Krasner
Cast: Sally Eilers, Richard Arlen, Robert Armstrong, Grace Bradley, Rosco Ates, Charlie Grapewin and Richard Arlen Jr.

Paramount has a vivid (and unpleasant) melodrama in "She Made Her Bed," nee "The Baby in the Icebox."

Directed and acted less capably, the picture would have been merely unpleasant. As it is, it holds your reluctant interest to the bitter end, in spite of the fact that it needs cutting badly in the beginning.

Based on a good old reliable formula, the story is colored by a unique setting—the Pomona Fair—the main locale being the auto camp near by.

Robert Armstrong and his wife, Sally Eilers, run the auto camp. He is a strutting, vain, impossible fellow, whose policy is to be as frequently unfaithful to his wife as possible, and to show off at every opportunity by cracking his whip over his poor, little, intimidated bob cats which he keeps in a cage to draw the crowd.

In spite of the fact that his wife knows all about his many and varied shortcomings, she refuses to run away with Richard Arlen, who plays the lovable Doc, who travels around peddling snake oil for what ails you and hits Pomona once a year to race his trotter.

However, Armstrong promotes himself in his own estimation and that of the ladies by getting a real and savage tiger—and he becomes so impossible that Miss Eilers finally consents to go away with Arlen. But she learns that she is going to have a baby, and she stays, hoping that the child will bring her husband closer to her.

The ending of the picture is as exciting as anyone can stand. The tiger gets loose and makes for the baby while Armstrong is out playing around. This part of the picture, extremely well directed, and completely breathtaking, is nevertheless pretty cheaply sensational. However, it is the film's big moment—and it certainly needs it.

Armstrong gives a brutal, strong performance, and Richard Arlen turns in a beautiful characterization of the Doc. Sally Eilers has a terribly difficult role and she gives it everything she has. She is entirely convincing. Rosco Ates and Charlie Grapewin are both swell in comedy roles, Grace Bradley is completely seductive as the reason for Armstrong's main stray, and Richard Arlen Jr. and the tiger are outstanding.

Ralph Murphy directed well; Casey Robinson and Frank R. Adams made the adaptation of James M. Cain's story, and Milton Krasner bent a clever camera upon the picture.

Your audience will like the characterizations here; they will take the story with a grain of salt, and they will all go home to a bad night's sleep. The tiger business is pretty bloodcurdling.

You've got pretty good names on this one, and a marrow-freezing ending to a more or less routine story. The sophisticates won't like it. But the easily impressed will.

YESTERDAY IN New York

The picture business may soon have another socially prominent New Yorker working behind its gates. "Liz" Du Pont, local sassiety gal, has packed her bags and jumped a Hollywood train hoping to crash the movies with a part in Lewis Milestone's Russian picture that he is to make for Columbia. "Liz" has been to Hollywood before but never with a picture ambition.

Clifton Webb entertained a bunch of his friends the other evening with ever so much charm and now that the festivities are over it is furnishing Broadway with plenty of gossip. Among others that were there was Ina Claire, who is taking "Biography" to London; the Clark Gables looking quite happy in that atmosphere; Louis Bromfield; Elsa Maxwell, fresh from Palm Beach; William Rhinelander Stewart; Evelyn Laye, Dwight Wiman, Cobina Wright, Max Gordon, who is so excited about Walter Huston and everything connected with his production of "Dodsworth" that he's predicting a super-sensational success for it.

Roland Young left the Webb party for a few minutes to walk down to his own house for a nip of brandy and when people start walking places for something you know you are in New York. . . . Helen Hayes gets snickers, by telling those stories of how "uncivilized Hollywood really is" and she means it.

Colleen Moore is still forsaking the movies to bounce around town with her hubby, Al Scott. Colleen, Al and Joe Schnitzer have been doing the late spots together. . . . Wally Beery will land in Hollywood any minute with about seventeen different surprises for his wife. . . . Monte Brice held a requiem at "21" before hopping the train for Hollywood and a directing contract. . . . The play that Moss Hart and George S. Kauffman will write in Palm Springs, and they are really going there to write after Moss sold George the idea to forget about England for the job, will be of a serious nature and quite a departure from the scrivening they have been identified with in the past.

In case you are interested the Phil Holmes-Florence Rice romance is not even warm any more and Broadway is talking about the Harry Ruby divorce. . . . Lionel Barrymore doing a personal at the Capitol in connection with the MGM picture "You Can't Buy Everything," attracted $22,000 worth of customers last Saturday and Sunday. . . . Clark Gable follows him in next week after having done a sensational opening day at Baltimore.

AN OPEN LETTER

Baby LeRoy, Esquire

Sir:

Going about panning me is going to do you no good Supposing I should go about the countryside telling people you were a MILK-SOT. I've seen you carried off the set many times.

Please realize I was in show business before you were born. . . . You're all wet.

With renewed assurance of my greatest esteem.

CREATORS INTERESTED IN REPORTER AWARD PLAN

Messages commending The Hollywood Reporter Award of Merit competition, in which the entire production personnel of the industry selects the outstanding achievements of the year, continue to come from men and women in all branches of the industry.

The Reporter has already mailed booklets containing the names of the pictures released in 1933 which are eligible for the awards. Ballots accompanied the booklets, with full explanation as to voting procedure. When these have been returned, a special committee selected from the industry will count the ballots and make the awards. The Reporter will present gold medals to the winners.

Here are a few of the comments that arrived yesterday:

"I think The Hollywood Reporter plan for determining the most outstanding creative achievement in the industry is a marvelous one. When the industry votes as a whole it really means a lot to the winner.

"CHARLES BEAHAN,
"Columbia Producer."

"Three cheers for The Hollywood Reporter's Award of Merit plan. At last we have a system whereby we can tell what the industry as a whole thinks of our work.

"DOUGLASS MONTGOMERY."

"At last, a practical method of selecting outstanding motion picture achievement that is really representative has been hit upon, and I want to congratulate The Hollywood Reporter on its awards plan.

"KARL FREUND,
"Universal Director."

"Let me add my praise to that of countless others who feel that The Hollywood Reporter has evolved the only all-embracing system for giving credit for creative work in the industry. Your idea is a grand one.

"WILLIAM GOETZ,
"Asso. Producer at 20th Century."

"I am a firm believer in Democracy. Therefore, I certainly feel that The Hollywood Reporter's plan for selecting outstanding achievements by vote of ALL the people in the industry is one to be commended. That is the democratic and fair way of determining who merits awards.

"SYDNEY FOX."

"I congratulate The Hollywood Reporter upon its method of selecting those to be honored for outstanding achievement in the creative field of motion pictures. If ALL our fellow workers vote we certainly will, for once, get the real opinion of the picture industry.

"ALICE WHITE."

Hurlbut on Termer

William Hurlbut was placed under long term contract by Universal yesterday following a group of consecutive picture-to-picture deals. Writer is the second scrivener on the lot to hold an extended ticket, L. G. Blochman hold the other. The Small-Landau office negotiated the Hurlbut contract.

Caldwell Play Set

Anne Caldwell has completed her new play, "Manhattan Marriage," and Harry Wurtzel has set it for a New York production. It will hit the boards next fall.

Is It New?

We are told that Roy Del Ruth heard it on the set yesterday. First Goil: "Didja hear that Abe Kabinski is keeping a budget?" Second Goil: "And a wife, too?"

Probe Majors Chain Methods of Buying

New York.—Details of the acquisition of theatre circuits by the majors and the methods of arranging long term franchise agreements for product occupied the time of the hearings in the Rembusch anti-trust suit yesterday.

Ed Grainger of Fox, Willard MacKay of Universal, Leon Netter of Paramount and Harold Bareford were the witnesses.

Look To England For 'Jane Eyre' Lead

Trem Carr, Monogram head, cabled Norton Ritchie, foreign representative for the company who is in London, to test as many English players as are available for the feminine lead in "Jane Eyre." Carr figures the picture will rate bigger returns from the United Kingdom with such a player in the lead. Studio had planned to use Heather Angel but she is busy at Fox.

Paramount Sued Over 'September Morn' Buy

George R. Bentel filed court action against Paramount yesterday on a complaint that the producing company had failed to carry through on the purchase of his story "September Morn."

Company is claimed to have dropped the purchase deal after a Hays office objection to the "implied nudity" of the famous painting inspiring the story. Sam Wolf is handling the action.

Universal Plays Firestone

With Dick Linthicombie, U.C.L.A. All-American last year, in the line-up for the studio, Universal Pictures basketball team meets the Firestone aggregation at the Hollywood Athletic Club tonight. This is the second game of the series. If Universal wins tonight another game will be played to determine the superior five.

'Happy Family' Starts

Warners will put "The Happy Family" into production Monday with Aline MacMahon and Joan Lowell in the leads and Al Green directing. Guy Kibbee, Allen Jenkins, Frankie Darro, Hugh Herbert and Joan Wheeler have already been cast for featured roles.

Rambeau Returns in May

Marjorie Rambeau, now in Florida for a rest, is due back in Hollywood in May, at which time she will reenter the free lance field, having washed up on her four-picture deal with Edward Small.

audience; it must go "movie" now, and right at that spot your enthusiasm would mount higher for the simple reason, the very thing you thought would be done, had to be done, WAS NOT DONE. The charm of the picture, the fine entertainment, was brought about by writing that continually tricked you, making it impossible for you to get ahead of the story, as is not the case with 99¾ per cent of all pictures.

If we had a studio we would COMPEL everyone in our employ to see "It Happened One Night." We would stage a lecture after the showing, point out how easily it could have been ruined and why it was not ruined. That picture is an object lesson, a full manual, on the making of motion pictures as they should be made. It is a masterpiece of writing, excellently acted by artists who have never been so good, magnificently directed and all that it takes to make a good picture.

Congratulations to Capra and all who had any part in its making.

that I was to take up motion pictures as my business. That was far from the truth. I became connected with the Gilpin Airlines immediately after my arrival and was appointed aviation editor of the Hearst papers.

"My trip to Washington recently had to do with the aviation industry. Never at any time during that trip, before or since, has my father or myself discussed any offer that had been made from a picture company, mainly for the reason that none has been made and especially because I have been and hope to continue to be identified with aviation.

"I am at present representing a group of manufacturers in their foreign and domestic sales in so far as such representation does not conflict with the United States Government in aviation."

Goldsmith Leads Set

Wallace Ford and June Clyde were signed yesterday by Ken Goldsmith for the top brackets in "I Hate Women," a Mary McCarthy screen play which Aubrey Scotto pilots.

LOCAL NRA HEAD KICKS TO 'ROSY' ON CODE DELAYS

First official steps to start the various NRA committees functioning in the film industry were taken this week.

These steps consisted of a lengthy report to Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt from Charles W. Cunningham, Los Angeles County NRA Administrator. Cunningham in his report complained of the delays on the part of two of the committees—the Studio Labor Committee, headed by Al Berres, and the Extras Committee, headed by Mrs. Mabel Kinney.

As told in the Hollywood Reporter some days ago, Mr. Cunningham informed Rosenblatt that complaints have been piling up before these committees, but thus far they have failed to act on any of them.

Berres yesterday continued his custom of having no comment to make to the press. But Mrs. Kinney declared that the blame is in the lap of the Government because of the red tape that must be unraveled in order to get quarters and stationery. Yesterday her committee headquarters were moved to the Guaranty Building. She had been using an office loaned by the Academy in the Professional Building.

Mrs. Kinney declared that she expected everything would be ironed out by Monday, and that the committee will then swing into action on the numerous complaints of the extra people.

No one can even guess when the labor committee will get going. Organizations that have filed complaints say that they get nothing but the stall, with no indication of action.

Buchman Signs 1-Year Ticket at Columbia

Sidney Buchman has been signed by Columbia to a one-year writing ticket which becomes effective after he finishes a one-picture assignment for Radio. Buchman is now at Columbia writing the screen play of "Whom the Gods Destroy" and will swing over to Radio on completion of that assignment for one picture, after which he will return to Columbia. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Montgomery Returns

Douglass Montgomery returned yesterday from New York. He starts work next week at Universal in the Margaret Sullavan picture "Little Man, What Now?"

Title Mitchell-Durant

First of the Mitchell and Durant pictures at Fox is scheduled under the title "On the High Seas." Joel Sayre is on the script.

A. T. and T. Sued Over Sound Parts

New York.—Claiming that exhibitors are forced to pay extortionate and arbitrary prices for sound parts, a local company, Theatre Electrical Service, has filed suit for $3,000,000 against the A. T. and T.

Henry D. Behr, formerly connected with the sound research department of Paramount, is prominent in the suing company. The complaint alleges "restraint of trade in the manufacture and distribution of talking picture equipment."

Lesser Remakes Harold Bell Wright Novel

Sol Lesser will remake the Harold Bell Wright story "When a Man's a Man," which he made and released as a silent through First National in 1924. Edward Francis Cline, who will direct "Peck's Bad Boy" for Lesser, directed the silent version of "When a Man's a Man." Picture will not get under way until June or later.

Keene Thompson to Rest

Keene Thompson, having finished the screen play on "Springtime for Henry," with Frank Tuttle for Jesse L. Lasky at Fox, leaves Saturday for Palm Springs to write the screen play of "Grand Canary" with Humphrey Pearson, Lasky's next picture to hit the stages for Fox.

LINDSEY PROMISES SPEED

TRADEVIEWS by W.R.WILKERSON

•WHY not a Hollywood theatre?

Why not a show-window here for the purpose of permitting producers to examine stories and players?

We have asked that question, up and down the line, for the past year or more and have yet to find a person, of any importance, who could pick a flaw in the idea. And all were most enthusiastic about it.

But still there is no theatre of any importance. True one or two are trying to do it with a store show and with makeshift organizations and with no one of any great importance contributing plays or talent.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer got all hot and bothered about the idea a year ago, in fact had Edgar Selwyn running around in circles getting things together. But it never came off. But MGM grabbed the full importance of the idea. They saw in such a procedure a great avenue for future screen plays and felt the importance of seeing their stars, near stars and doubtful players in various roles that may be transferred to the screen. This in addition to the fact that it would keep both feet of their players here in Hollywood instead of having one on the Chief at all times with that hope of going to New York to do a play.

Someone with the ABILITY, some cash and a little guts could net a nice tidy fortune for himself through the creation of a Hollywod theatre. One of the larger agencies should back it because of the possibilities of selling the play and the people. But if not that, some individual. The thing is a cinch to be a success from every angle. BUT it must be done by a person who KNOWS HIS BUSINESS, has taste and plenty of production inspiration.

Where is there such a man? Hollywood will welcome him, maybe not with the idea in talk, but certainly after it is put in practice.

Go over the lists of authors whose brains are available for such an idea. Go over the lists of possible casts for good plays, then take every studio in Hollywood and watch their mad scramble for the plays AND the casts.

It's a swell idea and should be done.

Picture Bets In B'way Openings

New York.—Of the five plays that opened on Broadway during the past week three are without any picture angle that will make good productions, one has a fair chance and there is another that is a cinch.

Of the three that are flop ideas, "Queer People" is the standout, followed closely by "Sing and Whistle" and "Legal Murder." "Richard of Bordeaux" looks okay if given a good production with expert treatment and "The Shining Hour" seems to have everything that producers may want to make a good picture.

New York REVIEWS

"MADAME SPY"

Universal prod.; director, Karl Freund; writers, William Hurlburt, Johanna Brandt, Joseph Than, Max Kimmich

Roxy Theatre

Mirror: Karl Freund, long famed as an ace cameraman, directed this conventional spy melodrama. His imaginative treatment and a splendid cast compensate for the conventional pattern of the plot and make the film pleasantly exciting and amusing.

American: It is pretty much blue-print as to story but there is plenty of action and dramatic episode. It is satisfactory entertainment.

World-Telegram: Although it is capitally acted by a cast of players who are more than kind to it, "Madame Spy" is only routine entertainment, the better for some exciting moments toward the end. The cast is good—the production tasteful.

News: The plot is artificial and follows the conventional lines of most of the plots that have to do with spies. But in spite of its superficialities it contains plenty of suspense and excitement and its principal roles are acted with sufficient competence by Miss Wray, Mr. Asther, John Miljan and Edward Arnold to hold the interest of the audience throughout its showing.

Herald-Tribune: It may be the script which keeps the photoplay from unwinding fluently; but certain faults are also attributable to the principals, who fail to achieve subtlety in the performance. Certainly it is not a dull picture; rather it is an experimental one; without so banal a plot, Mr. Freund might have really done something with it.

Times: Mr. Freund reveals his fine hand in the magnificent scenes. It is a romantic melodrama which, notwithstanding that it is scarcely credible succeeds in tickling one's fancy. If there be a weak spot Mr. Freund atones for it by his direction and his remarkable eye for camera angles. The star of the picture is really its director who long ago made the camera talk without the aid of the microphone.

Journal: An entertaining melodrama. Smoothly directed by Karl Freund and nicely acted by an attractive cast. While the story follows a conventional formula, it's been shrewdly handled and you'll find it diverting.

Sun: "Madame Spy" is a typical spy picture, neatly contrived, credibly acted and directed and photographed with a keen eye to pictorial value as might be expected from a film directed by that most excellent ex-cameraman, Karl Freund. Movie stuff that it is, it is never dull.

"SEARCH FOR BEAUTY"

Paramount prod.; director, Erle C. Kenton; writers, David Boehm, Maurine Watkins, Frank Butler, Claude Binyon, Schuyler Grey, Paul Milton.

Paramount Theatre

Mirror: Those of us not blessed with beauty contest winners in the family or the neighborhood may find "Search for Beauty" a little dull.

Sun: Seven authors, no less, are accredited with work on this; but, it emerges as though the thirty contest winners had whipped it up between them. It has a musical comedy plot, but, until the last reel, no musical comedy and a rather annoying emphasis upon the silly plot. Most of the picture is just handsome photography of handsome, uninteresting faces and bodies.

Journal: There's a lot of wise-cracking in the piece and plenty of bathing suit display. It's diverting program fare, with Larry Buster Crabbe and Ida Lupino in the Olympic champion roles.

Times: The story, composed under a compulsion similar to that which prompted the production of the film, is excellent from the standpoint of a writing job fulfilled under difficulties and depressing from any other point of view.

World-Telegram: Unimaginatively directed and loosely written, this "Search For Beauty" has little in it to recommend as grown-up entertainment. However, the film is enlivened somewhat by the presence in its cast of those two sterling comics, Robert Armstrong and James Gleason, and the beauty of its young leading lady, Ida Lupino, does much to help matters along.

News: A neat little comedy. If you're in a critical mood, you'll find loose ends to pick at in "Search for Beauty," but if you're in search for light entertainment, this introduction of the magazine racket will interest you.

Herald-Tribune: On the whole, an unhappily feeble sort of narrative.

Post: This idea might have been entertainingly developed, but unfortunately there is heavy humor in the writing and a shaky hand in the direction, with the result that it falls off into a murky grope for comedy. Even the usually amusing James Gleason is swamped by the obvious and tired dialogue. The search for beauty idea seems unnecessary when the producers had Ida Lupino to start with. She is an alluring and personable actress, a contest winner in her own right. She deserves to have a picture that makes sense

BORZAGE'S 'GREATER GLORY' FINE PICTURE OF BOY LIFE

Breakston, Script, Director the Tops

"NO GREATER GLORY"
(Columbia)

Director .....Frank Borzage
Story by.....Ferenc Molnar
Screen play by.....Jo Swerling
Photography by.....Joe August
Cast: George Breakston, Jimmie Butler, Frankie Darro, Jackie Searl, Donald Haines, Lois Wilson, Ralph Morgan.

With a little cutting, Columbia's "No Greater Glory" has distinct possibilities. Frank Borzage took two gangs of kids, a great many sandbags, and a pathetic but heroic youngster, George Breakston, mixed them together and turned out a picture that will give reviewers a chance to use a few of the better adjectives.

Individual credits are lost sight of when the picture is well along because one is more and more interested in the plot, which reaches a climactic fight between the Paul Street gang and the Redshirts. Though one can't forget Captain Nemecfec and General Boca; Jimmie Butler has a fetching smile and a gallant manner, and it is up to George Breakston, as Nemecfec, to provide the heroism, the staunch courage and the kindliness that should make an audience slightly weepy—and all over juvenile adventures in back lot warfare.

But it is back lot warfare of a high type, with the young soldiers trained to a curt precision of action and manner that would be funny if it did not suggest the tragedy of actual war.

Jo Swerling, who made the screen adaptation of Ferenc Molnar's story, apparently set about to show how the allegiance of boys to their leaders is akin to the patriotism that makes men fight for their countries. He succeeded in showing that the emotional fervor of youthful combat is pitched as high as the fervor of real warfare and he demonstrated clearly that all fighting has its tragic implications and its heartbreaks.

The opening scene, the traditional World War battlefield effect was soon compared to the fights between gangs of boys. The Paul Street gang attempts to rescue a stolen flag from the Redshirts. After almost too many adventures the flag is finally recovered by Nemecfec, whose daring wins the love and honor of his friends and of enemies. Nemecfec is ducked once too often by the enemy, and just as he is about to become a captain he falls deathly ill.

The fight in which the heroic youngster gives his life because he cannot be kept in bed is a thrilling one in which the rival gang is cleverly trapped. The ending was dramatically suggestive of the irony of war.

Lois Wilson and Ralph Morgan play the adult roles capably in a story that naturally subordinates adults to the boy theme. Breakston, as mentioned, is the heart of the picture, and the one who will start the weeps. Jackie Searl, Jimmie Butler, Frankie Darrow, deserve mention among a host of youngsters upholding a misguided cause of youth.

MGM Censorship

FLOOD OF PRAISE FOR REPORTER AWARD IDEA

The flood continues—the flood of letters from stars, executives, directors and technical experts of the industry, congratulating the Hollywood Reporter on its new system for giving awards for outstanding creative achievement in the industry.

Judging from the letters, the industry as a whole has long felt the need for a democratic method of giving credit to those who earn it. The Reporter system of having everybody vote instead of just a group seems to have filled that need. Here are a few of the comments that came yesterday:

"I wish to congratulate the Hollywood Reporter on its policy of prize awards, knowing full well how important it is for any artist to receive appreciation for his creative efforts from his fellow workers. The realization that his efforts are something more than a 'cry in the wilderness' is a great incentive to a creative worker.

"WILLY POGANY,
"Art Director, Warner Bros."

"Any plan that will serve to reward sincere effort is a good thing, and the Hollywood Reporter Medal for Merit is bound to produce incentive to better attainment.

"JOHN M. STAHL,
"Universal Director."

"The Hollywood Reporter plan to award a medal for excellence in moving picture art is a generous idea and should result in a great good to the industry as a whole.

"STANLEY BERGERMAN,
"Universal Asso. Producer."

"It is almost impossible to tell who the finest actors and directors are since pictures from different studios cater to so many different audiences, and success is considerably a matter of what circuit of theatres presents one's best performance. The Hollywood Reporter contest should bring out some interesting and undoubtedly some surprising facts which the industry should watch with eagerness.

"EDWARD BUZZELL,
"Universal Director."

Isabel Jewell will also go on the air with Tracy on the same program. Both tickets were sealed through Walter Kane of the Weber office.

Acad's Band Problem

Academy is having a difficult time trying to line up a "name" band for the annual awards banquet to be held March 16. Tried to get Ted FioRito, but musician tilted price too high for one evening's entertainment. Those close to the situation say Ted must have figured banquet would last a week.

Radio Player Clicks

Louis Mason, whom Radio took from broadcasting for the hill-billie role in "Spitfire," was signed yesterday by MGM for a similar characterization in "Coming Round the Mountain." Player made the character famous on the ether for three years.

Lindsey Promises Speed

as possible to investigate every labor complaint that is filed. And I shall see to it that a speedy hearing is given every complainant. It is the job of everybody to see that there are no delays in settling these matters.

"If complaints are made, they should not be put on the shelf and left there to go stale. They should be handled as quickly as possible and a decision handed down. I shall attempt to keep everything going in as orderly and rapid a manner as possible."

Sound union has been burned for some time, for the matter of a wage scale hangs in the balance in the complaint they filed with the Studio Labor Committee before Rosenblatt left Hollywood. Harold V. Smith, business agent of the union, said that Rosenblatt assured him that if his organization could prove to the committee that there were certain existing contracts with independent producers, that the scale in those contracts would be the general scale for the major lots. Thus, as the independent scale is higher, the men want the matter settled so they can get more money.

A score of other complaints are shelved with the same committee.

Mrs. Mable Kinney, head of the Extra's Committee, after a week in Sacramento, said that her committee would start to function next week. Extras have been squawking loudly over inactivity and have been complaining of alleged NRA violations.

GORDON'S 'SHINING HOUR' MISSES ITS OPPORTUNITIES

But Offers Great Bet For Screen

"THE SHINING HOUR"

By Keith Winter; presented by Max Gordon at Booth Theatre; staged by Raymond Massey; setting by Aubrey Hammond. Cast: Adrienne Allen, Marjorie Fielding, Cyril Raymond, Derek Williams, Gladys Cooper and Raymond Massey.

New York.—This play started out with all the promise of a tense submerged drama and then broke through this frame and form and went completely hysterical in its treatment. Introducing for the first time to an American audience one of England's favorite stars, Gladys Cooper, and presenting again to his admirers, Raymond Massey, his very effective wife, Adrienne Allen, and an interesting juvenile named Derek Williams, Max Gordon's play attracted an audience who had come there with the purpose of reveling in a great play with a great cast.

Regarding the cast—Miss Cooper, who after years of success in the London playshops suddenly dared brave the judgment of an impartial New York audience, is to this observer a competent, beautifully equipped, effective actress. However, entirely lacking in that quality which Hollywood always denotes as "glamour." Miss Allen, absent from these shores since her performance in "Cynara," returns again to repeat a telling performance. As for the performance of her husband, played by Massey, all that can be said is that no actor could have done the part justice. He does very well.

The play concerns a middle-class English farmer family, consisting of three brothers, a sister and the wife of the second brother. Into this well-established, ordered environment, the rather phlegmatic, simple-minded oldest brother brings his worldly, highly sensitive, rather intellectually inclined newly-married wife. Possessed of all the qualities usually attributed to attractiveness, the intrusion of this outsider results in confusion involving all the members of the family. The central situation revolves around the discovery and recognition of the love that arises between the visiting bride and her highly sensitive neurotic brother-in-law.

As a third element to this triangle we have the simple, self-sacrificing, understanding wife of the second brother, who had married her husband knowing he does not love her and who, on recognizing the fact that an important love has come into his life, eliminates herself by the very easy device of suicide. The penultimate act in its vain search for dramatic effect is concerned with the attempt on the part of the lovers to eliminate the sombre devastating overpowering effect of this suicide on their relationships.

Here is a play that has enough elements in it never to be dull. On the other hand, and in spite of moments of real understanding, honesty and keen emotional observation, and despite the fact that it degenerates into a muddy pool of theatricalism, hysteria and obvious emotional effects the play seemed to please the first night's audience and the critics as well. Hysteria is no substitute for deep feeling and no amount of finished acting can cover up an artificial situation.

The interesting thing about the results of this play on unseasoned as well as tried and experienced critics is that the material which in itself is slightly maudlin and in its very nature completely theatrical, is made to appear really genuine and important as a result of sensitive, shrewd and highly realistic performances by a cast of actors who have power, ability and sincerity of approach. The author's play "The Rats of Norway" was much finer, tighter drawn and more definitely conceived than this loosely drawn and hysterical conception.

Strangely enough, the most obvious faults of this play will greatly enhance its picture value because all the theatrical devices used will tend to give the picture version of the play an effectiveness that a more honest treatment of the subject matter on the stage would not convey.

Tut! Tut!

Paul Lukas is a bit fussy about his working hours. The other evening as he was preparing to leave the set an executive approached him with a sheepish smile, saying:

"We'll have to work a little overtime tonight, Mr. Lukas. I hope you'll play ball with us, yes?"

"I'm an actor, not a ball player," said Lukas, as he walked off the set.

Martin Smith Heads Ohio Indie Exhibs

Columbus.—Martin G. Smith has been elected president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio, representing about 300 theatres in the state.

Elmer Shard and Sam Lind were chosen vice presidents, M. B. Horwitz treasurer, and P. J. Wood secretary and business manager.

Still Add to Harold Lloyd's 'Catspaw' Cast

Grace Bradley was borrowed from Paramount yesterday by Harold Lloyd to play the second feminine lead in "Catspaw," which is now in production. Lloyd originally tried to get Miss Bradley, but she was not available at the time he made the bid. Noah Young has been added to the cast.

Sam Taylor has returned to resume direction of the picture after a few days' illness. Lloyd directed during his absence.

Dot Lee in Denver

Dorothy Lee opened yesterday at the Orpheum, Denver, for a week's personal appearances. Harry Santley of the William Morris office set the deal.

Warners Starting Week with Seven

When "Doctor Monica," the Kay Francis picture, and "Happy Family," the Aline MacMahon starring vehicle, go into work Monday morning, Warners will have seven pictures in production.

The other pictures in production are "Sawdust," the Joe E. Brown starring vehicle, "Return of the Terror," with Lyle Talbot, Mary Astor and John Halliday; "Without Honor," the James Cagney-Joan Blondell picture, and "The Key" with William Powell, Edna Best and Colin Clive.

Although Warners stated some time back that there would be no shutdown this year, the feeling around the lot with all these pictures shooting and more to go in very soon is that the studio will shut down the same time this year as it has done in previous years.

Montgomery Out, Duffy Seeks Young for MGM

Henry Duffy, unable to secure Robert Montgomery for the top spot in the stage production of "Men in White," which he will produce at El Capitan, is negotiating with MGM for Robert Young. Young has okayed the idea and Duffy is now awaiting MGM's approval.

Mary Brian has returned from New York, having seen the Broadway production of the play, and will likely sign for the feminine lead this week.

Warners-W. E. Suit Set

Rosita Moreno Returning

Rosita Moreno is en route from a vacation trip through Argentine, Uruguay and Chile. She arrives here March 5. Will go into a new Spanish musical at the Fox studios on the 15th.

U.A.'s Pictures Tops On Bway Last Week

New York.—The weather can't be used as an alibi this past week on Broadway, because real attractions in the motion picture houses pulled them in, while the others were only so-so.

"Nana" in its second week at the Music Hall did $93,000. "Moulin Rouge" did $37,700 first week at Rivoli, and second week looks like $28,000. "Madame Spy" took $22,500 at Roxy. The "Big Shakedown" was good at the Mayfair with $15,500. "Devil Tiger" at the Rialto did $22,000 first week and first three days of second has done $6,000, with $14,000 estimate for the week. "Search For Beauty" at Paramount pulled only $25,900, and "Hi Nellie" in second week at Strand took $11,250, while "This Is Heaven" at Capitol brought in $35,000. Looks like a $15,000 week for "Catherine the Great" for week ending Thursday at the Astor.

Decision Soon On $10,000,000 Para Suit

New York.—Decision will be given in about two weeks on the attempt of Attorney Zirn, acting for creditors, to set aside the transfer of assets of about ten million to the Film Productions by the old Paramount organization.

Both sides argued the case yesterday before the Appellate Division on points of law, with the final action being to give Attorney Zirn until Monday to file an additional brief of his appeal papers.

Jean Muir in 'Monica'

Jean Muir has been assigned an important role with Kay Francis in the latter's next picture, "Dr. Monica," which will get under way Monday under the direction of William Keighly for Warners. Joel McCrea is no longer under consideration for the male lead.

Col. Changes Title

Columbia has changed the title on "Storm at Midnight" to "Headed for Trouble." Picture was completed under C. C. Coleman's direction about a month ago with Tim McCoy and Billie Seward in the leads.

Eddy Gives Recital

New York.—Nelson Eddy, slated by MGM to appear soon in "Prisoner of Zenda," gives his first local song recital tomorrow at Town Hall. Program in German, Russian and English.

PATHE-CONSOL. LAB. WAR OFF AND TRUCE DECLARED

New York.—Reported friction between the Pathe laboratory and Consolidated, which this week threatened far reaching reactions involving the Du Pont and Eastman raw stock companies, was learned to be without basis yesterday.

Pathe in its recently completed series of financing deals was said to have instructed its west coast producers to hand their work over to the Davidge plant for their dailies, Consolidated doing a burn until it disproved the report. Pathe is interested only in its release printing and is side-tracking any battles with its rival. Consolidated, however, has all its producers in whom it is financially interested do their work only at its own laboratories.

Du Pont and Eastman raw stock is used by both laboratories, but had Pathe passed the word around against Consolidated a laboratory and raw stock war threatened, with Consolidated a cinch to shut out Du Pont film in preference to Eastman.

Two New Contests For Novelists - Playwrights

There are two contests announced this week—one for novelists, and one for playwrights.

Dodd, Mead and Company of New York, and Cassell and Company Ltd., of London, are offering a prize of one thousand pounds for the best novel submitted in an international competition which closes September 1, 1934.

No manuscript previously submitted to a publisher will be considered. The winning author is guaranteed royalties at 15 per cent of the published price. There are, apparently, no restrictions as to the type of novel, and the contest is open to all authors.

The second contest is sponsored by Theatre Union, which is looking for unpublished one-act plays "that deal critically with present day society." Contest closes April 1. Address 104 Fifth Avenue, New York.

There are a great many books concerning Russia and Russians coming out these days. Witness: "My Russian Neighbors," by Alexander Wicksteed, an Englishman who has lived ten years in Russia; "Moscow, 1911-1933," by Allan Monkhouse; "From Broadway to Moscow," by Marjorie E. Smith; "The Evil Empress," by the Grand Duke Alexander; "The Crucifixion of Liberty," by Alexander Kerensky (formerly announced as "The Fight for Freedom"); "Russia Today: What Can We Learn from It?" by Sherwood Eddy; "Russia Challenges Religion," by George Mecklenburg, and "Russian Medieval Architecture," by D. R. Buxton.

Besides all these, Covici Friede is publishing on the 23d of this month what is probably the first systematic effort to outline Russian literature from the revolution up to the present day. The book will be titled "Soviet Literature," and will be edited and translated by George Heavey and Marc Slonin. The volume will contain fiction, verse, criticism, biographical data, notes and a glossary. Among the authors represented will be Zamyatin, Pilnyak, Kataev, Babel, Zoshtchenko, Fadeyev, Blok, Biely and Mayakovsky.

This week has seen a very wide assortment of books published, with several interesting ones to report:

"In The Face of the Sun"
Author .....Birdsall Briscoe
Publisher .....Edward J. Clode

A romantic saga of the Southwestern border that is rich in plot and writing—a western adventure story par excellence.

Mr. Briscoe writes of Gregorio Ruiz, a Mexican bandit general; of Don Luis Romero, whose ambition it is to create "The Republic of the Rio Grande"; of Bill Clay, a Texas Ranger, who disappears while trying to find where the large shipments of arms are being stored; of Captain Lewis Randon, a state ranger with fantastic courage who comes looking for Bill; and of Estrella Romero, the beautiful elusive senorita.

This is a grand yarn, with plenty of dash and color and gallantry.

"The Storm Blows Over"
Authors .....Judith Ravel and Lowell Brentano
Publishers .....Covici, Friede

Three Chinese students, two English spinsters, a German priest, four Americans—and Varvara Philipovna, the irresistible White Russian. All are passengers on a freighter sailing from Yokohama to Genoa.

No man could resist Varvara's charms, and thereon hangs the tale of her romantically busy voyage.

"Pease Porridge Hot"
Author .....Nalbro Bartley
Publisher .....Bobbs Merrill

There is not a single character in "Pease Porridge Hot" who deserves one little bit of sympathy or admiration or even consideration.

They are mean, stupid and selfish, and they do things all through the book in keeping with their characters. Ross Dunlevy jilts Collins Basset at the altar and runs off with her cousin Linda and the Basset fortune. Collins marries Jim Kincaid and takes her spite out on him. Then Ross comes back determined to marry Collins, in spite of the fact that she has meanwhile come to love Jim.

Oh, well—

"Farewell Victoria"
Author .....T. H. Howe
Publishers: Harrison Smith and Robert Haas

Here is an utterly simple, unaffected tale of Munday, a groom who was born in a feudal atmosphere and never questioned the superiority of his masters or his own placid stupidity.

Horses were his passion . . . until he married Ellen, who was "even more beautiful than a horse." He fought the Zulus; his wife left him; he entered the service of the Countess Sophie Jaresky who was seven feet three inches tall and who had no friends but her servants. He married the cook; talked to the Countess and cared for her horses. And he finally died at the age of eighty-three, still placid, still stupid and not a bit changed, spiritually or mentally.

A fine book.

"Sea Plane Solo"
Author .....Francis Chichester
Publisher .....Harcourt, Brace

Francis Chichester attempted a well-nigh impossible solo flight, and lived to write about it in a book that is so exciting that it will raise goose-pimples all over America. He flew in a rattly little plane from New Zealand to Australia, a distance of 1,450 miles, and his plane had a range of 950 miles.

Don't miss this one.

"The Unforgotten Prisoner"
Author .....R. C. Hutchinson
Publisher .....Farrar and Rinehart

Mr. Hutchinson has written a novel of degradation, of hatred, and of industrial chaos that is a frightfully strong indictment against war.

Written with a swinging, mounting power, the book is the outpouring of a man who hates war and what war does with all his heart. It is the story of the tragedy that overtakes a German girl and an English boy and their child.

Hutchinson writes, lavishly and beautifully, compressing within this one book enough material for four ordinary novels.

"Queen Elizabeth"
Author .....J. E. Neale

An absorbing biography is Professor Neale's quiet, authoritative word picture of the great English queen and her times.

Carefully avoiding all the usual romantic legends; almost completely ignoring the pros and cons on the subject of Mary Stuart, the author is interested only in giving a pure, simple history of Elizabeth, her virtues and her faults.

He succeeds admirably.

"The Hawk and the Tree"
Author .....Patrick Carleton
Publisher .....E. P. Dutton & Co.

Bill Harfott, a teacher in a boys' school, is a rebel against the English social pattern and the limitations imposed upon him because he is an "English gentleman."

So he decides one day that he is no gentleman, leaves the school and forthwith sets out to puncture what he calls "the spiritual thinness and timidity of our age." He becomes a potboy in a country bar; he cleans out the bear cages in a traveling circus; he poses for an artist, and helps a Jewish merchant to sell antiques.

Then, one night, he remembers his boxing days at Cambridge and trains to become a professional fighter. Wildly happy, he makes the mistake of writing a book, becoming engaged to a properly civilized young lady and almost loses himself again in "gentlemanhood." But he rescues himself in time and goes back to boxing . . . and the boys.

Patrick Carleton has been clever enough here not to go sentimental or poetical wearisome. He writes honestly and definitely, and the result is a book that will not irritate the reader as so many "searching for the soul" works do.

"Change Partners"
Author .....Peggy Shane
Publishers: Ray Long and Richard R. Smith

Here is a lively little story of two couples who swap marriage partners and get themselves into an amusing little mess. Peggy Shane writes lightly and cleverly and the thing is bright, easy reading.

"Willful and Premeditated"
Author .....Freeman Wills Croft
Publisher .....Dodd, Mead and Co.

Although the reader knows all along who committed the murder and how, the detective has no inkling of the solution. How he brings the murderer to trial, after uncovering evidence that is completely hidden, is the exciting part of the book. This is one of the best of the Inspector French yarns.

"The Case of the Lucky Legs"
Author .....Erle Stanley Gardner
Publisher ....William Morrow & Co.

Perry Mason, the criminal lawyer who does his own sleuthing and who suspects everyone, including his clients, solves his third mystery in this latest Erle Stanley Gardner book.

In this one, he has to clear himself and also a girl of murder charges, and he is handicapped by some racketeers and by the police.

Good and exciting, with swell dialogue.

"Slow Death at Geneva"
Author .....“Diplomat”
Publisher .....Coward McCann

Another "Diplomat" novel, in which the political world is taken for an amusing ride, and readers of good, thrilling mysteries are highly entertained.

This one has to do with some poison administered to Cadwallader, who is about to complete a coup at a world political conference, and Dennis Tyler, who takes it upon himself to find out why and by whom the poison was injected.

This is a truly baffling yarn and a hilarious farce.

Newsy Gossip About The Authors and Publishers

"Soldiers, What Next?"
Author .....Katherine Mayo
Publisher .....Houghton, Mifflin

Katherine Mayo turns her attention for a while from Mother India to the A.E.F. and the various stages by which she claims to trace the present degeneration of the Legion.

Writing almost hysterically, Miss Mayo, unfortunately, protests too much. The book fails to carry much weight.

"The Well of Days"
Author .....Ivan Bunin
Publisher.....Alfred A. Knopf

"My heart is grieving in secret joy that life is vast and empty like the steppe."

This is one of the thousand lovely, profoundly wise lines in Ivan Bunin's book that, it is thought, is the story of his youth in Russia.

However that may be, "The Well of Days" is an amazingly beautiful work, and at the same time a completely satisfying comment on Russia.

Read it by all means.

"More or Less About Myself"
Author .....Margot Asquith
Publisher .....Dutton

This is one of the important Dutton books of the year. Margot Asquith is completely self-revelatory here, and delightfully so.

She is frank, honest and outspoken in this sequel to her famous autobiography, and in her preface she wickedly points out all the faults of the book herself, and advises her readers to skip through it.

Which, of course, no one will.

"Shake Hands With the Devil"
Author .....Rearden Conner
Publisher .....Morrow

Here is a story as powerful as it is bloody. And if your stomach is not attuned to the gory, it will give you a bad time.

This is the Literary Guild book for February. And it has to do with Dublin and the Sinn Feiners and blood and massacre and civil war and executions and all the other atrocities that are the result of hate and courage, misunderstanding and patriotism.

It is a terribly moving book and utterly unlovely.

"Devil's Circus"
Author.....Dr. Louis Berg
Publishers .....William Godwin

This book serves three purposes: it is a biting social comment, it is a vivid character study, and it is a well-written, forceful novel.

It tells of Jerry who was licked from the start; who tried to break away from the gangsters' control; who tried to better himself and forget Welfare Island and the Bowery slums where he first learned to be bad.

But it was no use. And a street walker was the only one who wept when he went to the electric chair.

"A Modern Tragedy"
Author .....Phyllis Bentley
Publisher .....Macmillan

The depression evidently hit the Yorkshire wool district, as well as other parts of the world, according to Miss Bentley's new novel.

Even if a certain passion for uninteresting details, and a rather incredible plot make her book less fascinating than it might have been, Miss Bentley retrieves it whenever she touches the wool mills and the life there.

It is the story of Walter, son of a fine old wool man. Walter meets Leonard Tasker, one of the get-rich-quick men of the new era, and Walter is led into the shady bypaths of business

"The Foster Mother"
Author .....Martin Armstrong
Publisher....Harcourt Brace and Co.

More of a character study than the usual novel, "The Foster Mother" has as its heroine an oldish, frustrated woman whose colorless, drab life is suddenly interrupted by the necessity for bringing up the two children of her dead sister-in-law.

Wanting love more than anything in the world, Aunt Deborah is nevertheless incapable of inspiring it, with the result that she becomes insanely nagging and cruelly inhuman.

She is a terrible old woman, and the book is as far away as possible from anything resembling sweetness and light.

"Two O'Clock Courage"
Author.....Gelett Burgess
Publisher ..... Bobbs-Merrill

Amnesia is the peg upon which this mystery is hung, and while it is hardly an original peg it is, under the Burgess pen, an extremely effective one.

A man suddenly finds himself stumbling along a dark street, his memory completely gone and his clothes covered with blood.

How he learns of his identity and discovers the murderer who is responsible for the blood on his clothes is the story—and a darn good one.

"Glass"
Author .....Howard Stephenson
Publisher .....Claude Kendall

Howard Stephenson has a richly tragic pen, and his book, "Glass," is a masterpiece. It is the tale of George Rood, whose life and heart were bound up in his farm, whose mind worked slowly and quietly as the earth, and whose whole life was shattered when gas was discovered in his neighborhood.

With all his strength he fought against this menace to his peace; he, in his gentleness, hated the smell, the sudden wealth, the hideous black pipes, the noise of the drilling, the ugly derricks.

A well was brought in across the road the night his son was born, and the death of his wife Rood blames directly on this mechanical monster. And so his one ambition was to make his son a farmer and to keep him away from the world—and the wells.

The book is the story of the conflict between Rood and the gas; between Rood's desires and his son's desires. And it is beautifully written.

Phyllis Bottome, whose new book, "Private Worlds," will be published soon by Houghton Mifflin, is now in San Francisco after a voyage to Antwerp.

Carl Van Vechten is the proud owner of the set of dinner plates that are embellished with one of Gertrude Stein's profundities: "As a rose is a rose is a rose." In spite of it all, however, Van Vechten will write the introduction of Miss Stein's new play, "Four Saints in Three Acts."

Most of the publishers have put in bids for "The Life of Our Lord," by Charles Dickens, which is being handled by Curtis Brown, agents.

On Monday Alfred Knopf will publish Oswald Spengler's "The Hour of Decision," in which the author asks "what if one day class war and race war joined forces to make an end of the white world?"

Another by H. L. Mencken: "Treatise on Right and Wrong," to be published by Alfred A. Knopf soon.

Franklin D. Roosevelt will have a new book out in April, announces the John Day Company. It will be "On Our Way: The First Year."

Bobbs-Merrill will have a book on its spring list by Lyman Beecher Stowe, grandson of Harriet Beecher Stowe, called "Saints, Sinners and Beechers."

The French prize mystery for 1933 is "The Mysterious Madame S," by Simone d'Erigny. Lippincott is bringing it out here.

Fannie Hurst has a new novel which will be published on March 21 by Harper and Brothers, called "Anitra's Dance."

Liveright will publish soon a book called "Rediscovering America," written by Harold Stearns, who is returning to the United States after 13 years voluntary exile in Paris.

This should be an interesting one. Doubleday announces "Time Out for Adventure," a book written by two tired Chicago business men, Leonidas W. Remsey and J. Anthony Kelly, who left their offices one day and went traveling in Mexico.

Simon and Schuster rather frantically are crying to the world that they are anxious to find more novels for their lists.

The New Yorker Hotel started out to publish a small pamphlet of the hotel's wine list, but the thing turned into a real little booklet called "Let Us Be Gay." So the Waldorf-Astoria did likewise, and Kenilworth Press Inc is bringing out "One Hundred Famous Cocktails," by Oscar of the Waldorf.

David Ewen, author of "Wine, Women and Waltz," who is now on his way to Hollywood, has been signed by H. W. Wilson Company for a book called "Composers of Our Day."

For two and a half years Edward Corsi was Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization at Ellis Island. He has now resigned and is writing a book, "In the Shadow of Liberty," to be published in May by Macmillan.

It is interesting to note that "All Quiet on the Western Front" is still selling strongly all over the world. Total sales are nearing 5,000,000. The book was published five years ago.

Europe is raving over "Voyage au Bout de la Nuit." (Journey to the End of the Night.) Little, Brown and Company will publish it here on April 16. The amusing thing about it is that Louis-Ferdinand Celine, the author, who lives in a suburb of Paris and won't be taken from his hiding, is more or less of a mystery. Reporters and photographers have been successful in their attempts to track him down. Three pictures of Celine have been published, and each one is of a different person.

Simon and Schuster are all het up about "Bloody Mary's," by Geoffrey Dennis, which will appear soon. It is "a revelatory novel of boyhood, which may rank with 'Stalky & Co.'"

The Literary Guild has chosen MacKinlay Kantor's novel of Gettysburg, "Long Remember," as its April book

A book that England is now enthusing about is "Harriet," a horror story having to do with a group of men and women who slowly starved a woman to death. Elizabeth Jenkins wrote it, and Doubleday, Doran has it on its Spring list.

Because Warden Lewis E. Lawes said that the New Masses and Labor Defender are not allowed at Sing Sing Prison, Quincy Howe, editor of Living Age; Herman Michelson, managing editor of the New Masses, and Sasha Small, editor of Labor Defender, are going to pay a call on the warden and ask him about it.

Mary Mitchell also won the Hodder and Stoughton prize of a thousand pounds for her book, "Warning to Wantons." However, after it was considered and reconsidered, it was finally rejected because "it was too gaily impetuous."

Stephen Leacock has apparently lost his literary grin. His latest books are a biography of Dickens and "Lincoln Frees the Slaves."

"Prince by Proxy" is the title of Roland Pertwee's new novel. Pertwee is now in Hollywood

Montague Summers, who is an authority on the werewolf, has written a long book on the subject of shape-shifting, which will be called "The Werewolf" and will be published in March by Duttons.

"1933's TEN BEST"

OF THE Ten Best Pictures of 1933 chosen in the Film Daily's poll, eight were American productions. Of those eight, seven were photographed on Eastman "Gray-Back." Loew's Holds Up

New York.—Operating profit for Loew's Inc. for the second quarter is about the same as the first, namely $2,732,607. Isidor Frey of the legal staff has been elected to the board, replacing Arthur W. Leake, now a Paramount trustee.

Chiseling Indies Due for Clean-up

Chiseling among the smaller quickie shooters is due for a grand blowup according to reports that under-cover men have been rounding up evidence of violations for many weeks past.

Chief practice complained of is to pay union men, particularly cameramen, union scale and then take a kickback. So many cameramen out of work are up against it and take anything. Leading indies are encouraging the investigation.

Referee Gives Break to Dilatory Para. Creditors

THE LOW DOWN

That was a beautiful greeting a certain actress got on her arrival in Hollywood this week. When she walked into her husband's house, she found there one of our better known stars of yesterday "entertaining" her actor-husband. And not only that, but the visiting star proceeded to tell the wife what was what and that the actor-husband really belonged to her (?) The two gals argued it out for hours with the husband getting nowhere but in the midst of the battle.

An art director over at a major studio was having a terrific argument with a director over the furnishings of a certain scene in a picture. The script called for a modern office setting and the director was holding out for the inclusion of the old-fashioned cuspidor. Finally, the art director, seeing that he was getting nowhere rapidly, decided to talk things over with the head of the studio and convince the director that way. So up he went to to see the head man and began his tale of woe. And in the middle of the recital, just as he was about to get to the point that cuspidors should not be included in modern offices, the head man turned around in his swivel chair and with an aim that would have done Al Smith proud, he expectorated into an old-fashioned cupidor!

Zoe Aikens gave out with a party that ranged all the way from hoop skirts to the gay nineties and had what is known as a pre-Raphaelite orchestra supplying the music. The party was more or less in honor of Rosamond Pinchot who looked perfectly divine as a Gibson girl. Anita Loos and Jobyna Howland showed up as the Cherry Sisters and with black eyes. Mrs. McAdoo, Irving Thalberg, (alone), the Dave Selznicks, Mary Duncan, (in red with jools and jools), and Laddie Sanford, Virginia Pine Lehman, the Richard Bennetts, Jetta Goudal, (exquisite in an 1880 costume) and Harold Grieve and more counts and princes than you'd ever want to shake a stick at danced around to the music of the harp-ies. And oyes, George Cukor just came as the most beautiful young creature in the place and was the center of attraction.

New York REVIEWS

"THE BIG SHAKEDOWN"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, John Francis Dillon; writers, Rian James, Niven Busch

Mayfair Theatre

Mirror: Attractive personalities and reliable performers arouse some interest in a mediocre melodrama.

American: Reminiscent of earlier productions, this one is helped to very moderate entertainment levels by Ricardo Cortez, who is always interesting in heavy roles, and a cast that deserves a better vehicle. Cortez is best of the players, but valiant work by Allen Jenkins, Glenda Farrell and others in the cast contribute to the merit of the film sufficiently to make it passable picture fare.

Journal: It's mild melodrama, with the actors superior to the story. Besides Cortez, who always does well in villainous roles, and Farrell, whose characterization doesn't create much sympathy for him, the cast includes Bette Davis, Glenda Farrell and Allen Jenkins.

Times: The particular virtue of the Mayfair's new picture is that it is specific and believable in its description of the felonious behavior involved in the racket. Thus it maintains a moderate sum of interest and excitement in the face of a routine assortment of gang-film impedimenta.

Sun: Mr. Cortez, his longing to be a leading man again denied, proves himself a pleasantly despicable heavy. This picture doesn't have much grip on reality, but its tempo is fast, its plot filled with action, and its cast, except the moony hero, competent and amusing. Author and director don't come off so well. The jobs were pretty second rate.

Herald-Tribune: Lively, speedy and replete with melodrama. If some of the doings seem a little dizzy, it may be because the ordinary citizen, even at this late date, does not understand the workings of the gangster mind. In any case Ricardo Cortez fairly bristles as the big shot. Charles Farrell is satisfactory and very boyish, while Bette Davis in a small part is helpful. Mr. Dillon has directed his story colorfully.

News: A new racket exposure, accurate casting and appropriate dialogue lift this cut-and-dried gangster film above mediocre entertainment. Cortez always makes the best of any part that is assigned to him and Glenda Farrell gets better and better in every performance.

"DEVIL TIGER"

Fox prod.; director, Clyde E. Elliott; writer, James O. Spearing

Rialto Theatre

American: Sensational is the word to describe this thrilling animal picture. There is a plot to the picture, and its story is capably told by a courageous cast. Every foot of the film is terrifically exciting, the thrills piling one upon the other in breath-taking fashion.

Mirror: It is a wild carnival of combat. The thrills and excitements are related and held together by a thread of conventional story. It is a lusty, wild, exciting film for the lustier fans. Men will relish it.

Times: There is an impressive beginning to the jungle jaunt taken by players who serve to add a dash of fiction to the fierce realism of the production.

World-Telegram: Since not much coherence is expected from an animal picture I feel that you should forget all about the story of "Devil Tiger" and enjoy its animal sequences which lift it to fair-to-middling entertainment of its kind.

Herald-Tribune: A realistic, well-photographed, and no doubt, informative chronicle of jungle adventure. If you are an enthusiast for these nature study melodramas "Devil Tiger" is definitely and heartily recommended to you.

News: A clear camera recording of exquisite natural scenery and amazing wild beast life in the Malaysian jungles is built around a forced romantic story that you will find somewhat tedious.

Journal: There's plenty of excitement in the piece. The romantic conflict involving the trio is merely incidental to the scenes contributed by the cameramen.

Post: There are some thrilling and tortuous battles, but there is a sameness which palls after a while. The picture is at its best when it turns to the weird and humorous. Another asset is Marion Burns, who is far too attractive to be risked on a jungle expedition.

Sun: "Devil Tiger" is for those who could sit all the way through "Bring 'Em Back Alive" without closing their eyes each time two wild beasts sprang at each other's throats

'BLONDES AND BONDS' GOOD; 'MONTE CRISTO' STORY WEAK

Direction, Script And Cast Click

"BLONDES AND BONDS"
Warners

Direction .....Michael Curtiz
Story: Laird Doyle and Ray Nazarro
Screen Play by.....Bertram Milhauser
Photography .....Ira Morgan
Cast: James Cagney, Bette Davis, Alice White, Allen Jenkins, Alan Dinehart, Arthur Hohl, Phillip Reed, Hobart Cavanaugh, Mayo Methot, Ralfe Harolde, Philip Faversham, Nora Lane.

Warner pictures seem to run in pairs, or in shoals. First, a deluge of propaganda, then a flock of back stage successes, lately they turned to gambling stories followed by a run of unethical promoters and shyster lawyers.

"Blondes and Bonds" comes at the end of the last mentioned group, and despite the fact that it again presents a "stock company performance" of Warner people, it is snappy, fast moving and entertaining. One thing about that stock company, it at least assures smooth performances in every part, no matter what else the picture may provide.

But "Blondes and Bonds" presents a good story, neatly scripted and dialogued, capably directed, and easy to take on the whole.

It finds Jimmy Cagney a fast-thinking, high pressure promoter, with wrong haircuts and wrong clothes, who puts over one fast deal after another. He gives pretty Bette Davis the heebie jeebies until she leaves his employ to work for Alan Dinehart who is—aha—the slicker suavely disguised.

Cagney is in his element in the part, crashing through with dynamic force to one laugh after another. He gets into high gear in the chase that gave the picture its original title, "The Heir Chaser," when he is trying to locate Arthur Hohl, due to inherit two hundred thousand, and subsequently has to wriggle Arthur out of a murder charge, into a marriage with Mayo Methot, out of that, and so on and so on.

It is typical Cagney and his followers will eat it up. Bette Davis proved herself a grand little actress, with a new coiffure that is most attractive, Alice White is pleasant, with her usual vivacity and attractive figure. Her danger is to over-emphasize, but this should be a directorial problem.

Judging from the entire picture, over-emphasis was the goal of Michael Curtiz, but in view of the successful effect on the audience the sustained high key was probably what the story needed. Credits for the good story job mentioned above must be divided between Laird Doyle, Ray Nazarro, and the scripter, Bertram Milhauser.

Mayo Methot gets one of the best chances she has had in some time, and shows she deserves more. Allen Jenkins provides invaluable helps to laugh as a sidekick of Cagney's. Alan Dinehart and Arthur Hohl, villain and victim, deliver with their usual precision. Hobart Cavanaugh, Ralfe Harolde, Philip Faversham, Phillip Reed and Nora Lane are spotted to advantage.

Exhibitors have a typical Cagney to sell, and while we won't attempt any comparisons, they may do their Cagney selling without the slightest worry about Cagney buyers.

Freund and Kelly Rate Mentions

"COUNTESS OF MONTE CRISTO"
(Universal)

Director .....Karl Freund
Story by.....Walter Fliesch
Adaptation by.....Karen DeWolf and Gene Lewis
Photography .....Charles Stumar

"The Countess of Monte Cristo," Universal's continental crook comedy, has two factors that contribute to its success and many that contribute to its downfall. So the nays have it.

Karl Freund, the director, did his best to instill the continental flavor into a production that didn't warrant it, and into a cast that, with the excepion of Paul Lukas, had no mental or artistic connection with Vienna. His direction, always excellent, almost succeeded in overcoming the banalities of the story.

The other constructive factor, besides Freund, is Patsy Kelly, a comedienne whose style is essentially humorous and distinctive. The picture lived and had its being in every scene in which she appeared.

Fay Wray and Patsy Kelly play two extra girls who finally get a job in a picture the night that Miss Wray's fiance, Paul Page, jilts her. In the picture, Miss Wray plays the Countess of Monte Cristo and Miss Kelly is her maid. They drive up to the hotel in an expensive car and all the servants dash out to help them. That is the scene—but Miss Wray, desperate with unhappiness, just continues to drive the car, past the hotel, off the set, through the studio gates and in the early morning comes to a stop before a hotel in a winter resort. There the scene in the studio is reenacted, for everyone believes her the Countess of Monte Cristo and Miss Kelly her maid.

There are two crooks at the hotel, Reginald Owen, who tries to force Miss Wray to work with him, and Paul Lukas, who falls in love with her.

The characters are rather abruptly and unconvincingly drawn, the dialogue is dull and the story leans toward the incongruous. Karl Freund amost saves the day, and Miss Kelly saves her scenes, and they are many. But the cast as a whole seemed a trifle bewildered by the whole thing.

Paul Lukas did what he had to do suavely; Reginald Owen overplayed a bit; Paul Page was badly miscast as was Fay Wray. Robert McWade was good as the hotel manager. Karen DeWolf and Gene Lewis adapted Walter Fliesch's story, and Charles Stumar's photography outclasses the picture. It is really stunning.

This picture will not have a very wide appeal. With better casting and a smoother story it would have been swell, for it has everything else.

'RICHARD OF BORDEAUX' HEAVY COSTUME OFFERING

Picture Possibility Depends on Star

"RICHARD OF BORDEAUX"

Play by Gordon Daviot; produced by William Mollison at the Empire theatre; directed by Mr. Mollison. Cast: Dennis King, Margaret Vines, Hugh Buckler, Charles Bryant, A. G. Andrews, Alexander Frank, Lionel Hogarth, Montagu Love, Francis Lister, Reeves Smith, Elizabeth Cerf, Henry Mollison, John Buckler, Charles Romano, Andrew Cruickshank, Michael Pearman and Cyril Chadwick. Settings by P. Dodd Ackerman.

New York.—An elaborate, impressive spectacle concerning the struggles of Richard of Bordeaux during thirteen years of his reign. Mr. King plays the role of Richard with a deep understanding and dignity which mounts as the play goes on. The production is a beautiful one, but this is pretty heavy fare to appeal to the masses.

We see Richard, aged 19, an idealist, aching to end the senseless, continual warfare with France. In the Council Chamber his uncles are against him; they love war. There is continual wrangling. Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, his beloved friend, is the one who consoles him—for everything amuses Robert.

Anne of Bohemia, Richard's queen, is good and charming. Richard is fortunate in her and in his friends. But his uncle, the Duke of Gloucester, and the Earl of Arundel steadily undermine Richard's popularity with the Commons and the people. He dresses magnificently, he is extravagant, and these things are magnified until, in the end, Gloucester gets such influence that he impeaches the King's friends and makes Richard return to London in disgrace.

Robert de Vere raises an army, but it is ambushed; and Robert does not fight—it would be useless slaughter. The King reviles him passionately and tells Robert never to come near him again. Anne of Bohemia tells Richard that poor Robert's kind heart, his imagination, were too strong for him—he shirked useless slaughter. Robert goes abroad and dies. Richard never ceases to love and remember him. His one desire is to regain power—to have revenge on those who impeached his friends and hanged his tutor, Sir Simon Burley.

Richard regains power and we see his revenge. He sends Gloucester to his death in France. The Earl of Arundel is impeached in his turn. The Earl of Derby is exiled to Europe for six years.

But Queen Anne dies and now the young King drinks power too deeply. He has lost the guiding principle of his life. He goes too far and the Archbishop of Canterbury goes to Paris to summon Derby back to England; he shall have an army. Derby returns; his army defeats the King.

We see Richard at the end, in the Tower of London, signing "an ungenerous document" he tells them—"Unworthy to reign" is one sentence—a deed of abdication. Richard is to go north, to a lonely castle.

Richard's secretary, who has to leave him now, tells that he hears the Commons has already censured Derby, who is to be soon crowned King, for his extravagance! The cycle of events . . . "How Robert de Vere would have laughed!" says Richard.

Since we are in the midst of a historical and costume film vogue this play would be as good as any for a really good dramatic actor in pictures, such as Barrymore, Leslie Banks, etc., but it will bear considerable pruning, since simplicity is of prime necessity in a picture conversion.

Tough Luck

Chuck Reisner was two days under schedule on "The Showoff," with only a few pick-up shots to make, and Madge Evans had to go and walk into a door and bounce back with a purple optic. So now the picture will be technically over schedule before the orb is in shape for shooting.

'Legal Murder' Goes Strong on Preaching

"LEGAL MURDER"

Allen Productions presents "Legal Murder," a play by Dennis Donoghue, at the President theatre. Cast of fifty.

New York.—A mixed cast of white and Negro actors wandered through what purports to be the true story of the Scottsboro affair. Nothing that can possibly be said against "Legal Murder" as a play will do it any harm at the box office. As propaganda it is pathetic.

"Legal Murder" is Mr. Donoghue's (himself a Negro) contribution to a cause. It is hopelessly amateurish and hopelessly sincere.

"They Shall Not Die," by John Wexley, a Guild production which will be seen in New York shortly, is said to be the real "McCoy," however, as far as the Scottsboro case is concerned.

IATSE Reorganization Working Under Cover

Reorganization committee of eighty which is drawing up the plans for the new set-up of Local 659, IATSE, is said to be making rapid progress in their work.

Makeup of this committee has been veiled in deepest secrecy, and meeting places not announced.

ACTORS GUILD PICKS NAMES FOR NRA CODE COMMITTEES

At the shortest meeting in the history of the organization, the Screen Actors' Guild last night unanimously elected fourteen of its members as nominees for appointment by Sol A. Rosenblatt to two of the NRA Code Committees.

Chosen for the Agents Committee were Adolphe Menjou, Spencer Tracy and Berton Churchill. For the Committee of five producers and five actors on working conditions, the following were picked: Ann Harding, Ralph Morgan, James Cagney, Kenneth Thomson, Richard Tucker, Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery, Claude King, Mary Astor, Pat O'Brien and Paul Muni.

A slate of ten actors had been put up at the meeting on printed ballots, but Paul Muni was nominated from the floor. A motion was made to select the entire list of eleven. It was passed unanimously, as was a similar motion for the three nominees for the agents committee, so individual balloting was not necessary.

Only approximately 150 members were present,but more than 700 proxies had been given to Kenneth Thomson. They were read from the platform. Ann Harding opened the meeting, which was presided over by Richard Tucker.

The highlight of the meeting was the announcement by Ivan Simpson that DeWitt C. Jennings, Chairman of the Actors' Branch of the Academy, had been present and had voted for the Screen Actors' slate. It brought forth a round of applause, plus a sprinkling of laughter. Jennings was then discovered standing in the rear of the auditorium. The meeting was held at the Woman's Club of Hollywood.

Code Authority

Boards to hear complaints from "any and all members of the industry."

Assents were so slow in coming, particularly in view of the pending Allied suit, that it was feared the Code machinery would never get under way if the original drastic pronouncement was not adhered to.

Los Angeles is included among the forty-two cities for which the Code Authority named Zoning and Grievance Boards Saturday. Ten cities still remain to be covered.

The Los Angeles committees follow:

Grievance: Jake Mitstein, of Metro, as representative of an affiliated national distributor; Howard Stubbins, Monogram, unaffiliated national distributor; Lou Halper, Warners, affiliated exhibitor; Ben Berenstein, Pasadena, unaffiliated exhibitors.

Clearance and Zoning: Carroll Peacock, Paramount, affiliated distributors; William C. Ritter, Columbia, unaffiliated distributor; Jack Sullivan, Fox West Coast, affiliated first run exhibitor; Russell Rogers, Los Angeles, unaffiliated first run exhibitors; Harry Hicks and George Hanes, subsequent run exhibitors.

Cities in which committees remain to be named are New York City, Philadelphia, Chicago, Boston, Atlanta, Albany, Cleveland, Milwaukee, San Francisco and Washington, D. C. The committee on appointments resumes meetings Monday on these cities.

'ANIMAL KINGDOM' GETS PLACE IN AWARDS LIST

After consulting impartial advisers it has been decided to include Radio's "Animal Kingdom" in the list of pictures open for consideration for Hollywood Reporter awards. The picture was omitted from the list originally issued because it was technically recorded as a 1932 release, but this was due to its having been selected for the gala opening of Radio's Music Hall. The general release did not come until 1933, the period covered by the Reporter's awards.

In considering awards for 1932 most organizations and publications conducting such contests ruled "Animal Kingdom" out because it had not yet seen general release. So the picture was in the position of losing out both ways because of its Radio City showing.

So add to your consideration: "Animal Kingdom." Directed by E. H. Griffith, with cast including Ann Harding, Leslie Howard, Myrna Loy, William Gargan, Neil Hamilton, Ilka Chase, Henry Stephenson, Leni Stengel, Don Dilloway.

Ballots already received by Hollywood Reporter disclose some interesting variations of opinion, and already indicate that a contest bringing in the opinions of ALL picture workers, regardless of organization affiliations or loyalties, will present many interesting angles.

Ten days remain before the closing of the polls, so if you want your opinion to count take that ballot off your desk today, fill it out, and send it along.

Jerry Storm Gets Break On Eastern Indie Pic

Jerome Storm, who was a big time director in the silent days, got a crack at directing a sound picture when he signed to go east to make a picture for an eastern independent concern.

Red Golden received the offer, which he could not accept at this time, and suggested Storm for the job, which was agreeable to the producer.

Fields Clicks on Air

Benny Fields has been renewed by Shell Oil on its radio hour, continuing for five more broadcasts. Walter Kane negotiated.

DeSylva Going East

After his Fox picture "Bottoms Up" is previewed next week, Buddy De Sylva is planning on taking a week's rest at Palm Springs and will then leave for New York, where he will start preparations for his stage musical show, which he plans on opening in August.

Harlow to Vacation

Jean Harlow and Hal Rosson will leave for a vacation in Canada before the blonde star starts her next picture, "Repeal," for MGM. The trip is being held up until Rosson finishes shooting his present picture.

Lynn Overman Now Discovered for Pics

Lynn Overman was in Hollywood for three months without getting one picture offer. The actor returned to New York and B. P. Schulberg signed him for one of the leading roles in "Little Miss Marker." Now Charles R. Rogers wants him to return immediately for the male lead in "In Conference." As both of these pictures are to be made at the same time the studio is trying to arrange a schedule where he can double in the two assignments.

Set 'Op. 13' Songs

Jack Chertok, head of the MGM musical department Saturday assigned Walter Donaldson and Gus Kahn to do the musical score and numbers for the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper vehicle, "Operator 13." Picture starts shooting again today with Richard Boleslavsky directing and Lucien Hubbard producing.

Tradeshow Two in N. Y.

New York.—Two trade showings are scheduled for the metropolitan area this week. "Looking For Trouble" will be previewed by Twentieth Century at the Astor, Tuesday; and Radio previews Hepburn in "Spitfire" Thursday.

MGM TO STAGE N.Y. PLAYS

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•APPARENTLY the answer of the picture business to talk of salary control is to go on conducting the picture business as the picture business.

Producers were never willing to go as high for people whom they wanted. Stars, in particular, of course, where they mean box office value. But directors, too, where they mean box office insurance.

Consider Fredric March. He is the same capable actor today that he was for long years under a Paramount contract. But on the open market, with the article called "Fredric March" to sell to the highest bidder he is worth many times his Paramount figure to Darryl Zanuck.

Consider Claudette Colbert. She is understood to have already made deals that will net her $300,000 for the year. Topped by Eddie Small's $65,000 for one picture.

Gary Cooper will make as much on two coming pictures, "Operator 13" and "Barbary Coast," as he did in a whole year on contract. William Powell's $60,000 for one picture at MGM is an indication of the times.

Gregory LaCava, Roy Del Ruth and Frank Lloyd are understood to be over the "$50,000 per picture" mark on their new deals.

Is anybody paying these figures—and at a time when the first burst of salary control talk has just died down, and a second is likely to begin—just out of the kindness of his heart?

Decidedly not.

There's a simple explanation.

If you were starving you would probably be willing to pay all the coin in your pocket for a hamburger.

The business is starving for BOX-OFFICE DRAWS; individuals who are BOX-OFFICE INSURANCE.

And the man who can deliver either can name his price.

Exhibitors and the public, also starv- for good pictures, would be the first to encourage the steps being taken to get them if they understood the Hollywood side of the famine.

But we are going to add a postscript and say: They haven't got around to giving the writer his real share of the gravy yet.

Is the writer that pesky nuisance—THE FORGOTTEN MAN?

Queer Pee-puls

New York.—Galen Bugoe, producer of the stage play "Queer People," had advertisements in all the papers today accusing Hollywood of not being able to take it, and insinuating there were reasons behind the unanimous panning the show got from the critics.

Fox to Hold Songs Off Radio Hours

New York.—Fox will keep the principal numbers of White's "Scandals" and "Bottoms Up" off the radio until two weeks after each picture opens on Broadway. They feel too much popularity beforehand can kill the songs and hurt the picture.

The Warner system on their musicals has been to release one song in advance of the picture, and then feed the others out slowly, thus getting an advance plug without letting the public in on all the songs before the picture's release.

Radio Still Hot in B'way Play M[illegible]

New York.—Radio continues the hottest buyer of new play material among the picture companies. After closing for "A Hat, a Coat, a Glove" and "Wednesday's Child" that company yesterday acquired "By Your Leave," current on Broadway, for a price in the neighborhood of $20,000.

"No More Ladies" is still one of the hottest competitive subjects, with MGM reported on the inside track.

Harding Again at MGM

MGM has signed Ann Harding for the feminine lead in "Biography," which Irving Thalberg will produce for the studio. Sonya Levien is scripting from the S. N. Behrman original.

Elaborate Plans Under Way To Crash B'way Next Season; Edgar Selwyn To Hold Reins

New York.—On the heels of Edgar Selwyn's departure for Hollywood—he will be in your city tomorrow—Broadway got the biggest news of the season in the declaration that the MGM organization would again start backing New York play production and on a scale intended to give it a real place in the Rialto sun.

The statement is that Edgar Selwyn will be in charge of the working out of the plan. A reading department will be built up to search the world market for new material while

30 Members Hold Bag on Acad. Award

Thirty members of the Academy, guaranteeing $50 each, have underwritten the Academy's annual awards of merit competition this year to the tune of $1500.

This was revealed yesterday by one of the Acads, and thus sets at rest the speculation as to just how the organization, which was admittedly low in financial resources, was able to suddenly launch forth on the awards campaign which most people thought would be passed by this year.

Harris Buys Another

New York—Jed Harris has purchased his second play for Fall production. It is "De Luxe," by Louis Bromfield and John Gearon.

Fox Gets Rinehart Yarn

New York.—Fox closed yesterday for "The State vs. Elinor Norton," by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

Harlow Into 'Del's'; MacDonald Tied Up

MGM will co-star Jean Harlow instead of Jeanette MacDonald with Clark Gable in "Duchess of Delmonico's" which Walter Wanger will produce and Harry Beaumont directs. Harvey Gates has been handed the story to make the feminine lead fit Harlow instead of MacDonald.

The switch was made because Jeanette MacDonald will not be available for some months with "Merry Widow" and "Naughty Marietta" scheduled to be her next two vehicles.

Mystery About 'Dames'

Buzz Berkeley returned from his honeymoon yesterday ready to start rehearsals on his first solo directorial effort, "Dames." But "Dames" won't start for some time. Ruby Keeler is on her way to New York for a rest and Manny Seff is at work on a new treatment of the yarn. Report also has it that Archie Mayo may direct, with Berkeley given another assignment.

Henry Blanke Renewed

Warners yesterday took up the option on Henry Blanke for another period. Supervisor has been with the organization for thirteen years. Blanke recently handled "Fashion Follies of 1934," "Convention City" and "Gambling Lady." "Dr. Monica" starts today under his wing.

Radio Big 4 East

Ben B. Kahane, Gordon E. Youngans, the receiver for Radio; J. R. McDonough and J. McCausland will leave here tomorrow for New York to go into a general huddle with the New York execs on the future policy of the company.

Al Kaufman Back to Work

Al Kaufman resumed his duties at Paramount yesterday after a four week trip to New York.

UNIVERSAL REOPENS LAB; ENDS CONSOLIDATED DEAL

Universal is getting out from under its one million dollar debt to Consolidated Films and has placed itself in a position strong enough to prompt the decision to reopen its own film processing plant, the Royal Laboratory. Universal has paid off $400,000, leaving Consolidated holding a first mortgage on the studio for $600,000.

'BOTTOMS UP' LACKS CLASS BUT REGISTERS FAIRLY WELL

Cast and Comedy Pic's High Spots

"BOTTOMS UP"
(Fox)

Producer .....B. G. DeSylva
Director .....David Butler
Story and Screen Play: B. G. DeSylva, David Butler and Sid Silvers.
Photography .....Arthur Miller
Music and Lyrics: Berton Lane, Harold Adamson, Richard Whiting and Gus Kahn.
Cast: Spencer Tracy, Pat Patterson, John Boles, Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers, Harry Green.

"Bottoms Up," previewed by Fox at the Grand Lake, in Oakland, Calif., last night, registers as a picture likely to go over fairly well because of its cast and comedy, and despite weaknesses due to a lack of continuity and some mediocre effects in chorus arrangements.

The large crowd at this theatre is reported somewhat critical on any occasion, and on the whole they seemed to like this one. Particularly did they go for Harry Green, playing the part of a producer, and drawing many laughs over his embarrassing predicaments and carrying sympathy with him that is topped when in the end he succeeds in picking a winner.

The picture's virtue is its comedy. The Oakland audience went for the characterizations and the jokes with equal enjoyment. As they also did, for that matter, for a love-making effusion on the part of John Boles and Pat Patterson on the rear seat of a sea-going craft.

The chief weakness of the picture is in the handling of the chorus. The transparent garb of the chorus in the opening scene, for example, held little interest. It lacked contrast in arrangement.

One of the scenes that failed to get over was the swing scene with a plentitude of panties displayed by the girls. It lacked motivation, for one thing, as well as that touch of the unusual artistic effect calculated to bring gasps.

John Boles and Pat Patterson, the romantic interest, are seen to advantage. Boles, particularly being in fine voice, and Patterson properly appealing. As the latter's pseudo father, Herbert Mundin has a fat part, and Spencer Tracy is his usual sure-fire self as "Smoothie." Thelma Todd contributes plenty to the enjoyment.

The "Bottoms Up" chorus arrangement towards the end, although lacking in continuity in relation to the main plot, provided sufficient entertainment to bring the audience to a spontaneous outburst of applause. The song numbers are many and tuneful, with no one in particular standing out in this reviewer's memory.

New Code Review Body Named by Gen. Johnson

Washington.—General Johnson today announced the appointment of a review advisory board designed to give small businesses a chance on their complaints that the codes are monopolistic. It will apply to the movie industry on such opposition as that presented by the Allied States exhibs.

I'se Regusted

Oscar, the Paramount bootblack, who acts in pictures on the side, was grumbling to himself the other day when one of the boys on the lot passed him and asked what the trouble was. Oscar replied: "'I'se been on this lot for 13 years and just found out they got me typed."

Extra Board Seeks Code Clarification

The Code Committee on Extras last night took its first steps toward the solution of the extra problems when it met at the committee headquarters in the Guaranty Building.

The entire evening was devoted to an attempt to clarify the classifications of the various extra groups so that, as was explained, they will be able to proceed more intelligently in taking up the complaints. There was much difference of opinion at the start, and for three and a half hours the fifteen members debated, sometimes excitedly.

The upshot was that their classification will be sent today to Rosenblatt in Washington for the approval of the authorities there. Chief of the suggestions sent was that all bit players speaking lines be paid at rate of $25 a day. In the present code the "per day" has been omitted. Decision was made as to what clothes the $15 group should have to own, and what types were supposed to be in $3, $5, $7.50 and $10 groups. It was decided to hold meetings each Monday night. The body won't get at complaints until after it hears from Washington on suggestions for classification.

Universal Reopens Lab

of the Royal lab with a contract going to Consolidated for the company's release printing. Plan to re-open the company lab was seen as an indication that Universal had found other sources of financing, but this was vigorously denied last night by a top executive.

"Any report of outside financing," he said, "is absolutely untrue. Universal is doing what it can within itself to further its own interests and has the option of opening the laboratory if it wishes to.

"The machinery in the plant requires re-conditioning and this will take time. Running it only for dailies is too expensive, hence it will depend on when we choose to start doing our own release printing. No date is set for the re-opening."

The Consolidated contract expires in three weeks. Account is estimated worth $1,000,000 yearly, of which a profit amounting to $300,000 will be culled in the future by Universal itself.

In the days prior to the Consolidated deal Universal release printing was done at its own plant in Fort Lee. This plant was sold to Consolidated. It is now believed the local lab can handle the release output.

Hays, Zukor Today In Anti-Trust Suit

New York.—With Adolph Zukor and Will Hays scheduled for appearance on the stand today there are hopes that the Rembusch anti-trust suit will take on some of the color headline hunters love.

Yesterday found Ivan Abramson on the stand, a trifle hazy witness as to his experiences as an independent. He did make a point, however, by recalling that in 1921 Zukor told exhibitors at the Minneapolis MPTOA convention that he would not build or acquire any more theatres in opposition to indie owners.

'MYSTERY OF MR. X' GOOD; 'TRANSIENT LOVE' SMART

Well Produced Mystery Yarn

"MYSTERY OF MR. X"
(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Direction .....Edgar Selwyn
Story by.....Phillip MacDonald
Screen Play....Howard Emmett Rogers
Additional Dialogue..Monckton Hoffe
Photography .....Oliver Marsh
Cast: Robert Montgomery, Elizabeth Allen, Lewis Stone, Henry Stephenson, Forrester Harvey, Ralph Forbes, Ivan Simpson, Alec B. Francis, Charles Irwin, Leonard Mudie.

In spite of the fact that the story in "The Mystery of Mr. X" has a couple of holes in it large enough to push the Woolworth building through one side, audiences will like the picture, much after the fashion of those who paid to see the preview here last night. It has it on most other mystery stories of recent vintage in that it has been given an excellent production, a good cast and directed with taste, good spacing and fine judgment.

The story that was written by Phillip MacDonald, who also did the screen adaptation, could have been knitted a little tighter in so far as the mystery concerned Scotland Yard, for even that mighty detector of crime could not have cast its suspicions on Robert Montgomery with such slight reason. But even with that and maybe another situation or two, the yarn serves the purpose of better than the average entertainment and given the fine production and the excellent acting plus good direction, whatever there may be of the story faults can easily be forgotten.

The only mystery for the audience to dwell on during the running of the story is the reason for the murder of so many policemen by "Mr. X." The rest of the yarn puzzles only the police and concerns the activities of that arch criminal and the efforts of the Yard to find him. Interwoven in this activity is the theft of a very valuable diamond and the belief of the police that finding the thief of that stone means the finding of "Mr. X" and in order to prove that he is not the murderer, the thief sets out to capture "X" and does.

Robert Montgomery has the best part he has had in many a day and does exceptionally well with it. Elizabeth Allen furnishes the only feminine interest. Forrester Harvey gives a bang-up performance, and Lewis Stone, Henry Stephenson, Ivan Simpson and Ralph Forbes round out a swell cast.

Edgar Selwyn is credited with the direction which was a great credit to the picture.

This ought to be a cinch with movie audiences and in order to get the full benefits of its entertainment values, you should plug it for all its worth as a good opening will assure you good business for the rest of the engagement as it is a picture that will exploit itself after the first show.

'Palooka' in N.Y. Feb. 27

New York.—The Eddie Small Reliance picture "Palooka" goes into the Rivoli February 27.

Open Ribbing Season

Eph Asher is sporting two black eyes and a bruised nose. Injuries were received—well, Eph has a story and he's sticking to it.

Tay Garnett Moves To MGM for One

Tay Garnett moved his belongings over on the MGM lot yesterday from Paramount to direct the Clark Gable-Myrna Loy picture "China Seas," which will be produced by the Irving Thalberg unit.

Due to casting difficulties Paramount has postponed production on the Melville Baker-Jack Kirkland yarn "Honor Bright," which Garnett was to have directed at this time, and will make the picture when the director finishes his one picture job for MGM. Sylvia Thalberg and Austin Parker wrote the screen play.

Ed Ludwig Swings to Warners from 'U' Lot

Edward Ludwig, finishing last week with Universal the direction of "Let's Be Ritzy," has joined the Warner organization to pilot "Friends of Mr. Sweeny."

Sam Bischoff places the picture into work Wednesday. Company has opened negotiations with MGM for the loan of Una Merkle for the role opposite Charles Ruggles as an alternative to the Nancy Carroll deal.

Radio Buys Sea Yarn

Radio Saturday purchased "False Dreams Farewell," a play by Hugh Stange which ran in New York last season. Story is constructed around sixteen characters on a steamer, and studio's tentative plan is to sign old timers for the roles. Pandro Berman will produce.

Lugosi Arrives Today

Bela Lugosi gets in today by train from New York to start work in Edgar Allan Poe's "The Black Cat," which goes into production next Saturday. Boris Karloff has the top spot and Edgar Ulmer directs from a script by Peter Ruric.

Reed Gets Warner Ticket

Tom Reed was signed by Warners yesterday to a long term writing ticket. He is at present writing the screen play of "Dark Tower." The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

MGM Imports Tech. Man

Rene Hubbard, European technical adviser, has arrived in Hollywood to act as technical director for MGM on "Merry Widow," which Irving Thalberg is producing.

Collison at Columbia

Willson Collison has been signed by Columbia to script the Leonard Spigelgass original "I'll Fix It." Picture is planned for Elissa Landi and Edmund Lowe. Sam Jaffe produces.

All Concerned Help To Fine Result

"TRANSIENT LOVE"
(RKO-Radio)

Direction .....John Cromwell
Story by.....Anne Morrison Chapin
Adaptation by.....Jane Murfin
Photography by.....David Abel
Cast: Irene Dunne, Constance Cummings, Ralph Bellamy, Kay Johnson, Charles Starrett, Sidney Blackmer, Vivian Tobin and Louis Mason.

Smartness is the keynote of the RKO-Radio picture "Transient Love" (tentative title). The settings, story, acting, directing—all are smart, and the dialogue is as smart as a woman's gown—cut low in front and with something tricky in back.

The picture is sophisticated, charming and beautifully credible. It is a dramatic comedy, with the accent on both words, and it is a graceful thing, starting honestly and with both feet on the ground and gaining a swell momentum as it swings to a logical ending.

Irene Dunne and Ralph Bellamy, and Kay Johnson and Charles Starrett are two happily married young couples living in a swanky suburb outside of New York. But there is a ghost between Miss Dunne and Bellamy—the ghost of a fickle, beautiful, thoroughly hateful little charming tramp—Constance Cummings—whom Bellamy can never quite forget. As the picture opens the news is broken that she has gotten a divorce from her latest husband and is on her way back to New York to retrieve Bellamy.

The worst happens, and Miss Dunne decides on a divorce for herself. Fortunately, however, Sidney Blackmer appears on the scene and Bellamy's pride is shattered completely, making him a better husband to Miss Dunne than ever.

The story is slight, but tense. Jane Murfin's adaptation of the Anne Morrison Chapin story is a masterpiece of sophistication, cleverness and humor. And John Cromwell's direction is pitched to a high tempo and controlled by perfect intelligence. David Abel's photography is excellent.

Irene Dunne is happily cast as the wife. She wears her part like the proverbial glove. Kay Johnson, blessed by unusually fine, brilliant and hilarious lines, has never been better, and Constance Cummings is utterly convincing as the conscienceless flirt. Ralph Bellamy has a chance to show what he can do in this picture, and he does it well. Sidney Blackmer has an intriguing role, and Charles Starrett is less stiff and stilted than usual. Vivian Tobin and Louis Mason are amusing as another couple.

Some cutting will help the picture. The scene where Miss Cummings first sees Bellamy after her marital absence is too long and too repetitive. The audience will get the point with much less stressing. Also the scene where Bellamy hits her—not slaps her—but gives her a good punch in the eye is entirely out of keeping with his character. He may be dumb, but he is not the hard-boiled sock 'em and leave 'em person. Discreet but consistent cutting from then on until the end will help also.

This picture is a natural for women. They'll eat it up and send their friends running. The men will be amused, too, but not with as much detachment. You've got plenty of names, really superb direction and a fine, grand story.

Code Boards Take Away Hays Prop

New York.—There is much speculation here as to the effect on the Hays organization on the removal of its chief prop, the Film Boards of Trade, when the new zoning and clearance boards go into action.

Gabe Hess has been supervising the work of the boards. But their creation and development to the industry's strongest piece of business machinery was the work of Charles C. Pettijohn.

Russell Mack Ends Deal at MGM Lot

Russell Mack has terminated his one year contract with MGM and left the lot Saturday.

Mack has the option to return to direct "Tish," the Marie Dressler starring vehicle which he had been assigned to direct, when the writers complete the yarn. Irving Thalberg is producing.

Warners Seek Writer Who Knows His China

Warners is looking for a scenario man with a Chinese background to handle the script on the recently purchased best-seller, "Oil For the Lamps of China."

Company is scheduling it as a special production and is understood preparing to open the purse on it. Several associate producers are reading it with a view to supervising the picture.

Guttman To East On Play

Henry Guttman boards a plane tomorrow for New York, shelving his agency and liquor-distributing offices for a spell to put "Soviet Commissar" on Boardway. Lenore Ulric stars in Nina Wilcox Putnam's version of the Eugene Tschirikow play. Sam Zagon, attorney, accompanies the producer.

Doran with Group Theatre

New York.—D. A. Doran, former Fox story editor, now in Hollywood, is understood here to have a deal to become associated with the Group Theatre for several productions, one of which is "Gentlewoman." The play is in rehearsal now. No picture company is involved in the deal.

Warner Unit Returns

Warners' "Fog Over Frisco" company returned from location in San Francisco yesterday and hope to wind up the picture today with interiors at the local plant. Wilhelm Dieterle directs Bette Davis, Donald Woods and Lyle Talbot in top spots.

Horsley In Radio Role

John David Horsley has been signed for a role in "Finishing School," which is being co-directed by Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls for Radio.

WIRES, MAIL CARRY LABOR SQUAWKS TO ROSENBLATT

Columbia and Fox Both on the Pan

Air mail and telegraph wires were burning up yesterday with squawks, yowls, protests and complaints about a film Code that isn't working. Chief complaint dealt with the Studio Labor Committee and the Committee of Extras.

One labor representative declared to The Reporter that Columbia at least has changed the names of its "grips" to "stand-bys" and has cut out the dollar-an-hour wage in this manner and are paying 75 cents an hour instead. As there are no stand-bys in the Code they think they are getting by, he declares.

"This same studio," he said, "has ignored the Code provision which sets the wage scale of laborers at 60 cents an hour, and is paying its laborers but 50 cents an hour."

"There seems little use of complaining any more to the studio labor committee," declared another labor organization man. "The committee holds fast to its position that it has not been properly appointed, even though Rosenblatt has wired us that they have been legally appointed. They just keep on stalling. So we are sending our complaints to Rosenblatt."

It was revealed that many of the complaints filed with the studio labor committee have been filed with Judge Lindsey. But he, while promising speedy action in his office, is tied until he gets his status properly ironed out. That will probably be when George Creel arrives. He was due yesterday but didn't show.

In the extra ranks bitterness loomed like a London fog yesterday as reports of code violations were bandied about with stories of methods of evading the code rules.

"Among other studios," said an "extra" spokesman yesterday, "Fox has evolved the method of putting extras on weekly contracts to avoid paying them the dress suit rates. This studio has just signed up ten young men presumably as stock company members. They were signed at $50 a week so that the studio would not have to pay them $15 a day for wearing dress clothes, as the Code directs.

"Other studios are hiring relatives and friends as extras by signing them to one day contracts as actors. Thus they get around the Code which says there shall be no special request list. Other extras are being made to work several days for the price of one. This is where they have lines to speak and are supposed to get $25 a day for it. But someone left out some words in the Code and they pay 'em only $25 for the entire bit."

"I can't figure," said another labor man, "whether Rosenblatt jumbled things here purposely or whether it is the fault of the studio labor committee that it is not functioning. He was so assuring when we talked with him. Declared all our troubles would be handled at once, but here we are. Just a bunch of suckers wondering what it is all about, while he is three thousand miles away. That's why I am sending this burn-up to Rosenblatt by air mail today."

Top This One

In Exhibitors' Herald, "What the Picture Did For Me" department, a Custer, South Dakota, exhib reports on "Emperor Jones": "Some liked it real well. I eliminated the seventh reel after the first showing and it made a better show without anyone noticing the change."

Singers Guild Asks Rating Under Code

Los Angeles singers added another headache to film code authorities yesterday when the Singers' Guild of Los Angeles filed a proposed amendment with the Extras Code Committee. The amendment would fix wage scales and working conditions for singers employed in motion picture work.

Outstanding in the demands of the singers are the establishment of a six hour day and a minimum wage scale of $25 per day for singers or singing actors working in pictures, and that they be placed in the same classification as principal or bit players.

They also ask that they be given vocal rest period of ten minutes in each hour worked. That overtime be at the rate of $4.25 per hour. That contract singers be paid a minimum weekly rate of $125 for a maximum week of 36 hours. They ask that all rehearsing and memorizing be done on studio time. They also ask that all singers be paid at the termination of each day's work, or an additional third check be paid them.

Officers of the Singers' Guild are Allan Watson, president; Tudor Williams, vice-president; Myrtle Aber, secretary; Myrle Regnier, treasurer, and R. D. Saunders, business agent.

Build Special Trailer For Col.'s Capra Pic

Satisfied that it has one of the top pictures of the year in the Frank Capra production, "It Happened One Night," Columbia is letting loose with both barrels in an exploitation campaign to get the most out of it.

Initial step is the special trailer compiled as advance ballyhoo, studio's production department having engaged a special cast of players and written a unique script of fourteen scenes for it, although National Screen handles distribution.

Allan Garcia, president of the group, says meeting is to take up matter of combining the various "extra" groups into one.

"We can't seem to get any results or satisfaction as four organizations," said Garcia. "We are getting nothing but a run around from the Code Authorities and the producers, so it is time we did something for ourselves."

Fox wants Ginger Rogers for one of the featured leads in the Janet Gaynor-Charles Farrell picture "Manhattan Love Song" with James Dunn. Title is to be changed.

Bill Rowland Hangs Hat On Columbia Hatrack

William Rowland moved into offices at Columbia yesterday and will operate within the studio on his deal.

Official documents on the deal were signed late last week and give Columbia an option for a third production. "New York Town" will be Rowland's second picture, negotiations for the purchase of a property as the first now being consummated.

MGM To Stage Plays

Selwyn builds the contacts with established playwrights.

An important feature of the play production set-up will call for an interchange of stars and directors with the West Coast studios, the picture company figuring a two-way value in the idea. It will give players at the studio the opportunity they crave to return to the feel of audiences and Broadway's atmosphere, and will also enable the picture producing execs to try material in connection with the star likely to play the part when it is screened.

It is understood that Selwyn will go into a huddle with Nicholas M. Schenck immediately on arriving in Hollywood, and report on the exhaustive investigation and preliminary plans he made on his recent extended visit to New York.

The MGM move has been forecast since the opening of the current season found Paramount having the inside track on such plays as "Double Door" through pre-production agreements.

First Award Tabulation Shows Interesting Results

Surprising results are being revealed in the ballots that are now flocking into The Reporter office in The Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit competition.

To date Lasky's "The Power and the Glory" is leading as the outstanding original story. "Little Women" is in the van among adaptations, and "Cavalcade" is ahead of them all as the outstanding production. However, there are some others that are crowding them close and no one can tell what another day will do in standing.

Some pictures that have not received much publicity are drawing large votes, especially in the case of achievements on the part of art directors, cameramen and sound technicians. The final results will probably prove a revelation.

Yesterday saw a tremendous influx of votes. Only nine more days remain in which to get ballots in, so if you have tucked yours away in a corner of your desk, better get it marked and in the mails if you want your choice to count in the final reckoning.

Gold medals will be awarded the winners in acting, directing, writing (original and adaptation), art direction, cinematography and sound.

London.—Marian Marsh has signed to make one picture to be produced by Paul Kohner at Universal's European studios.

Metro is said to be seriously considering an unproduced play of his, "The Brain Breaker." Decision expected shortly.

'Lost Patrol' To Go 2d Wk. at Hillstreet

Business over the week-end on "The Lost Patrol" at the RKO Hillstreet hit figures that caused an early decision to hold it over for a second week at that house.

Vol. XIX. No. 35. Price 5c. TODAY'S FILM NEWS TODAY Wednesday, February 21, 1934

PRES. TO SWING CLUB

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE boys were batting the ball around the other evening and talking about the picture business in general and good pictures in particular. The conclusion was that two or three really GREAT PICTURES would do wonders for this business and some sort of propaganda should be started in this town in an effort to stir up production imagination and actual production tending to the making of a great picture or two.

That's a pretty tough assignment.

It is our opinion that there has not been a really great picture since "All Quiet" and there's hardly a chance that there will be one for some time, as producers, the men heading the studios, give little encouragement to the men and women working under them that would inspire such efforts.

In the first place (with the possible exception of MGM) there is not a plant in the business which would take a chance on the making of a GREAT PICTURE, they would not care to risk that money, they would not give the time for the writing or the adaptation or sufficient time to shoot such a picture. And because of this writers are not writing in that direction, they are attempting to deliver what the producers want and it does not seem to be GREAT PICTURES.

But getting back to the first paragraph a GREAT PICTURE would do this business more good right at this time than anything that could happen —a picture that would send audiences out screaming their delight, a picture that would be discussed in the home, in the office, from the church pulpit; one that would be commented on by the press, editorially and otherwise. This business needs such a lift, but who's to do it? Who is going after that big picture? Who has the brains and the desire to make it?

Picture audiences, past and present, should be aroused by something important, something really big. The stay-at-homes should be brought back to the theatres and the only way to do it would be through an outstanding production, a GREAT PICTURE.

How about it?

Just Hollywood

New York.—When Hecht and MacArthur sold "Twentieth Century" to Columbia, Hecht wired Cohn and Hawks suggesting they sign William Frawley and Moffat Johnson for the film. The reply: "Who are they? Never heard of them." Now Hawks is wiring Hecht frantically for the address of Frawley since the player clicked in "Bolero."

Gary Cooper Signs Termer at Para.

Paramount signed Gary Cooper to a new long term contract yesterday.

The new termer calls for the exclusive services of Cooper after he does "Barbary Coast" for Sam Goldwyn. He has one more picture to make on his old contract. At present he is in MGM's "Operator 13." When he finishes work in that he returns to Paramount lot for one picture, then does the Goldwyn yarn, after which he starts his new contract with no more work for outside studios.

Shake-up in Para. Abroad Drops Two Key Execs

New York—Indications of a shake-up in the Paramount foreign organization are seen in the resignation of two key men long identified with the company, Ike Blumenthal, for fifteen years general manager for the continent, and Gare Schwartz, Paris lab head. Fred Lange, formerly in South America for Paramount as general manager, is replacing Blumenthal.

Russell Holman on Way

Thirty Hour Week For Labor By Congress Action Forecast If Industries Hamstring Code

Washington.—Developments on Capitol Hill indicate that President Roosevelt is flexing his muscles preparatory to swinging a club that will put an end to the multitude of labor squabbles in all industries, particularly the squawks from Hollywood.

It was predicted today that the club swinging will take the form of Congressional enactment of legislation compelling a straight thirty hour week for all labor. The same legislation will carry provisions putting teeth into

Wampas Pick 21 'Baby' Nominees

The Wampas met last night at the Writers Club and nominated 21 girls for election as Wampas "Baby Stars."

Ten of the names were made public, but the other eleven were sealed because they are contract players at studios that are believed to be opposed to putting the Baby Stars on the radio. Members figured it might embarrass the girls if their names were

MGM May Back 4 For Group Theatre

New York.—First move in MGM plans for stage production next year may be a working agreement with the Group Theatre here for the production of four plays. It is understood that the film company will finance the plays and also arrange for an interchange of stars.

Para. Wins Fight To Hold N. Y. Theatres

New York—Paramount has won out in its fight to hold on to the Criterion and Loew's New York Roof properties. Adolph Zukor yesterday concluded a deal through which Seneca Holding Company, a Para subsidiary, gives a mortgage of $175,000 to retain the properties,

The mortgage will be used to pay off back taxes, etc., and continue operation of the houses. It is subordinate to the existing mortgages totaling $5,440,000, but it is a lien on Paramount's Astoria studio.

Hold Services Today for Mother of Mrs. Mayer

Funeral services for Mrs. Hyman Schenberg, mother of Mrs. Louis B. Mayer, who died late Monday night, will be held this morning from the Glasband and Groman funeral parlors, interment occurring at the Beth Israel cemetery. Services are private.

Mrs. Schenberg was 72 and died at the Glendale Sanitarium.

Erpi Exec Here Today

Whitford Drake, vice president of Erpi, arrives here from the East today for a series of conferences with George Pratt, also a vice president of Erpi on the west coat. He will remain in Hollywood for a week or ten days.

Mayo to Meg 'Dames'

Archie Mayo has definitely been set to direct the musical production "Dames" for Warners. Busby Berkeley will handle the direction of the musical numbers. The screen play is being written by Manny Seff.

'Wonder Bar' in Miami

Miami—The world premiere of "Wonder Bar" was held here last night, the affair being quite a social event. The New York opening is set for February 28.

THEATRES TAKE LICKING AS BLIZZARD BLANKETS EAST

New York.—Local movie palaces took the worst beating in their history yesterday as a result of the terrific blizzard that paralyzed traffic and held millions of Manhattan and suburban residents in their homes. They couldn't even get down town to go to work, much less attend a theatre. Result was that those houses that remained open didn't do enough to pay the light bill.

In New Haven all movie houses closed tight and didn't attempt to

THE LOW DOWN

That bridge for the benefit of the Motion Picture Relief Fund at the Ambassador the other night turned out to be a huge success. Under the fine guiding hands of Bebe Daniels, Diana Fitzmaurice and Mrs. George Archainbaud over five hundred tickets were sold and more than three thousand dollars made to help the unfortunates of the movie colony. Dave Harris and Rosey Rosenberg tied for first place in the bridge contest but Rosenberg's luck held out longer because he won the order on Magnin's when the boys had to cut for first place. Orrin Kelly won the order on the Mabel Fisher LADIES' hat shop and Mae Sunday came out of it with an order for anything she'd like to have at the Maison Blanc. Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown, the Joe E. Browns, the John Boles, the Monte Blues, the George and Bill Hearsts, Dorothy Mackaill, Leila Hyams, the Skeets Gallaghers, Buster Collier and the Russell Macks among the movie contingent. And away off in the back room, Zeppo Marx, Phil Berg, Milton Bren and Fred Pelton forgot it was all just for charity and played a game that registered twenty-five cents a point.

They had just cut a feature picture and had invited the head of the studio to come into the projection room to see it since the director was in New York. The studio head was having a terrible time keeping up with the story and finally in one part came a scene in the jungle with the girl sitting on a log and one of the men turns to her and says, "That's right, little Miss Muffett, I'll get you out of this." And with that, the studio head jumped up and said, "That's enough. What kind of writing is this and what kind of a story? For five reels she is called Miss Jones and now all of a suddent she's Miss Moffat!" And when the head man' secretary came to she said, "Why, Mr. —, you know little Miss Muffett, that's an old nursery rhyme." Whereupon the master mind topped his original crack with,"And that's something else about this studio. There have been altogether too many allegories on the program!"

New York REVIEWS

"THE CAT AND THE FIDDLE"

MGM prod.; director, William K. Howard; writers, Jerome Kern, Otto Harbach, Bella and Samuel Spewack

Capitol Theatre

Sun: "The Cat and the Fiddle" with a practically perfect movie plot, emerges from the studio a vulgarized and routine musical comedy tale. Thanks to Mr. Kern and Miss MacDonald, and in spite of the adaptor, this film provides a gay and lilting hour.

Post: The new picture at the Capitol is not only an example of what a good musical should be but it illustrates how intelligent adaptation and direction plus a judiciously chosen cast can turn a mildly pleasant entertainment into something lively and absorbing.

Mirror: Skillfully directed, lavishly produced, cleverly acted, "The Cat and the Fiddle" is a truly charming picture. Romantic, tuneful and colorful, it makes a perfect vehicle for the two attractive singers who are co-starred in it.

News: William K. Howard has directed the production with skill and it has been beautifully mounted by the producers. Both Miss MacDonald and Novarro are happily cast in a musical romance in which their voices blend beautifully together.

World-Telegram: It is by far the most tuneful, charming and thoroughly entertaining operetta the screen has offered in years. Credit is due William K. Howard for his sensible, sensitive and imaginative direction which has restored this writer's faith in screen musicals. Also, Bella and Samuel Spewack for the manner in which they have adapted the operetta to the screen.

Herald-Tribune: A handsome and resourceful production, which has been made under William K. Howard's skillful direction. But I wish there had been more humor, a few additional Kern songs, and a bit less plot.

Times: A gay and tuneful picture, which comes to the screen of the Capitol with much of its original charm and spontaneity. The plot is inconsequential, but there is an intriguing and well balanced melange of melody, fun and romance.

Journal: One of the best musical productions that has as yet come out of Hollywood. Novarro, who adds a sense of humor to intelligence and personality, is perfectly cast in the leading role. Much credit goes to William K. Howard for the sparkling tempo he sustains in an outstanding job of direction.

American: Delightful, exhilarating entertainment. In all departments, it is as fine a film as any Hollywood season has had to offer. William K. Howard has contributed to the excellence of the piece by endowing it with dramatic form and interest by capturing the lilting quality of the original score, and establishing and maintaining a directorial rhythm that makes the entire achievement a sweet and not too lengthy song.

Wampas Pick Nominees

made known. Also indicated that if the producers turn down the request of the Wampas and frown on the radio appearance they will not open the envelopes containing these players' names unless another method of presentation is decided upon.

The nominees announced were: Joan Gale, Dorothy Dix, Ann Sothern, Dixie Lee, Dorothy Drake, Mary Kornman, Luana Walters, Hazel Hayes, June Knight and Lois January.

It was brought out that the producers are not opposed to the naming of "baby stars," and that all but three studios are favorable to letting them go on the air. Stars will be named whether the air program goes on or not. Final decision as to attitude of producers and definite Wampas plans will not be known until next week's meeting of the organization.

RACE KEEN AMONG LEADERS FOR REPORTER PIC AWARDS

No Runaway Yet in Any Classification

A veritable flock of pictures moved up to the tape in a neck and neck race yesterday as the votes poured in for The Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit competition.

"Henry the Eighth" stepped into the top group with "Little Women," "Cavalcade," "Only Yesterday," "Lady For a Day" and "Gabriel Over The White House" in the choice for outstanding production.

Writers' votes from every studio started flooding in, and "Lady For a Day," "Berkeley Square" and "Little Women" were up among the leaders for the most outstanding example of adaptation. But other pictures less prominent were running close, and surprises are probably due before the last of the votes are in.

"The Nuisance" forged to the front yesterday alongside "The Power and the Glory" among the original stories. And "This Day and Age" was knocking on the door for recognition.

"Bombshell" came into more than notice when the cameramen started voting, and is one of the leaders in the field of outstanding photographic achievement. "When Ladies Meet" is right beside it from the cinematographer's point of view.

Among the directors "Lady For a Day," "Henry the Eighth," "Berkeley Square" and "Little Women" were showing the way, with a number of other pictures close behind.

In the van for best example of art direction are "Design For Living," "King Kong," "Little Women" and "When Ladies Meet."

"Gold Diggers of 1933" was receiving a big vote from the sound men as containing the best example of sound recording. But "Only Yesterday" was also among the favored ones, as was the MGM "Bombshell."

Tremendous interest is being evinced by everyone in the industry in this competition, which is the first time that the industry itself has been given the chance to express its all-embracing choice on awards of merit. Executives, players, directors, writers, cameramen, sound men, art directors, all are sending in their votes.

If you have mislaid your copy of the Award Bulletin, phone The Reporter office and another will be sent you. This also applies to ANY worker in the industry who may not have received a copy in the original mailing.

20th Borrows 'Alice'

Charlotte Henry, Paramount's contest winner for "Alice in Wonderland," was signed yesterday on a loanout deal by Twentieth Century for the ingenue lead in the George Arliss picture, "Head of the Family," which will be directed by Sidney Lanfield.

'High School' on Shelf

Hunt Stromberg has called off his dogs on his "High School" idea and has tossed it to the MGM shelf until he feels inclined to have another go at it. Two pairs of writers during the past month failed to get the story hot.

N. Y. Offices Close

New York.—Tomorrow being Washington's Birthday, all film company offices will be closed tight. So get in your home office phone calls today.

Press Directors Will Sift Radio Views

Entire attitude of Hollywood producers on the questions of picture stars going on the air will probably come to surface as result of meeting of publicity directors at the Hays office yesterday.

The meeting was for purpose of determining whether or not the "Baby Stars" to be selected shortly by the Wampas would be allowed to go on the air. Wampas have two offers to put them on the ether for one hour and offer to give a large slice of the proceeds to any charity producers select. Yesterday publicity directors decided to make complete poll of producers for their attitude, and also get line on their reaction to star competition with movie houses by air appearances.

Garbo Smacks All Records in London

London — The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Queen Christina" smashed every existing record at the Empire for a single week's business and set up a figure for not only that house but every other theatre on this side.

Both Garbo and the picture are a sensation. People are acually fighting to gain admission to the theatre. Queues blocks long have been a common occasion all week long.

classifications and standards set by present codes.

"There will be no fooling then," William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, declared today.

The President has his dander up. A good proportion of his mail these days consists of complaints from workers that industries are finding all sorts of loopholes in the codes. He has also the problem of spreading work still further to take up the slack as CWA laborers are returned to industry in coming months. And if a thirty hour week is necessary, Congress will see that the thirty hour week is a fact.

Proof that the President is not afraid to impose codes, no matter what the power of the industry affected, is witnessed by his handling of the newspaper code.

MGM Slaps Ban on Broadcasts by Stars

MGM has slapped on the lid against any of its contract players signing with commercial sponsors for radio broadcasts. All requests by agents are being given the inverted thumb, the company closing its ears to all propositions at any terms.

Unlike other majors, the company has no radio affiliations and is said to regard ether broadcasts as competition, with the view that the bigger the star on the program the greater the competition. Policy excludes players on group picture deals, but term contracts specifically give the company the right to decide on whether or not a player may broadcast.

Stanwyck or Tobin For 'Housewife'

Warners will decide this week between Barbara Stanwyck and Genevieve Tobin for the top spot in the Robert Lord-Lillie Hayward original story "Housewife," which will go into production in two weeks under the supervision of Lord.

REELING around LONDON

It's a boy at the Donovan Pedelty's . . . Youngs and the Jack Votions amongst the movie mob present . . . Bob (Associate Producer) Stevenson, Russell Metcalfe and dance director Teddie Royce contributed the Gaumont "angle" to the party but finally the discussion got round to Hollywood and Jack Votion took time to rave about the way Warner Baxter makes chili con carne . . . today's bright thought and bedtime story: Once there was a British screen star who ADMITTED SHE HAD NOT GOT A HOLLYWOOD OFFER! !

Maybe you don't think Doug Fairbanks was sore about Merle Oberon scramming to America prior to playing in his pic? . . . This week's laurel wreath goes to Van Dyke for the swell and intelligent use of close-ups in "Mala the Magnificent" (Eskimo-Igloo or what have you) . . . Jack Buchanan (just opened in a new show in town and preparing for his film version of "Sons O' Guns") present at the trade show of "Roman Scandals" and how that audience yelled at the chariot sequence; Benita Hume was also present and looking a million and one dollars.

Savoy Grilling the other evenin' were Charles Buster Laughton and the Frank Joyces, Bill O'Bryen with Capt. Richard Norton, who has blossomed forth as an indie producer after being on United Artists board for so long; Cyril Gardner, Howard Welch, Frances Day looking very orchidaceous and Julius Hagen, the chief of the Twickenham Studios . . . quote from any meal scene in any Hollywood picture which has a kid in it "Come now Junior, eat your Spinach!" — it's getting so that people here have come to the conclusion that all American children do is eat spinach and blow raspberries all day long!

Reason for Paul Kohner's recent trip to this Scepter'd Isle was to make preliminary contracts for the next Luis Trenker Berlin production; he wanted a blonde for the British version . . . said a well known casting director here to a firmly established old character lady "No, you're not quite how I visualize the part, I want a Miss (Soandso) but fifteen years older" "What—" gasped the old lady, "ALIVE???"

His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales nonchalantly strolled into the Capitol to see "Master and Man" and hardly a soul realized it, the other evening, yes, Columbia, Jack Holt and Fay Wray, he stayed to the end.

Max Milder, the genial Warner boss here, gets more publicity—and all on account of his partialness to cigars. . . The creme de la creme of the pic girls and boys eat at the Ivy; which accounts for the Alfred Hitchcocks, Michael Powell, Bill Lipscombe, G. A. 'ERA' Atkinson, Ben Nedell and Russell Metcalfe being present t'other day; or does it? . . . Cecil Landeau is still true to the Cafe Royal. . . Dodo Watts, one time biggest bet here on the screen, is staging a comeback via the air. . . . Bill Lipscomb, director-writer, tells us he will visit America in June. . . . We have it on the inside that British and Dominions want to sign John Tilley, the Radio comic here, because they also know that he has an American offer.

The Phil Tannuras can hardly wait to grab a load of that California sunshine . . . hm! . . . Leslie Howard's brother actually got a spot of publicity the other day; cashing in on his likeness to Leslie. . . Heather Thatcher is going legit in the noo Noel Coward piece. . . . Arthur Kelly would not let the press in to see "Catherine" in spite of the fact that Alex Korda wanted them, and, in fact, invited some of them personally, and in consequence, they are more than mad at U. A. . . . Pam Ostrer is a hit we hear in "Jew Suss," the Mendes pic with Conrad Veidt.

OPEN FORUM

February 16, 1934.

Editor The Hollywood Reporter.

Dear Sir:

The article published in your issue of February 14 under the heading "Extras May Bury Axe and Combine All Forces" conveys an erroneous concept of our relationship to the other film players' organizations. We are now and have been working in harmony with the other groups, except on occasions like this instance when ambitious members combine with outside agents to speak for this association without having the authority to do so.

No, we have no axe to bury. And as to combining forces with the other associations, we have yet to see some comprehensive plan submitted upon which we might take action. Anyhow, we are already cooperating with the other groups to the fullest extent possible under the circumstances, as our interests interlock with theirs, but to "submerge our identities," as was suggested in a local paper a few days ago, would be out of the question as far as the Riding Actors Association is concerned.

We have now slightly over 400 members—many of whom are well-known actors and some are playing leads in the films. Most of us are experienced bit-and-part players—can make faces in front of the cameras as well as the actors and extras of the other groups. Practically all of our members are also members of the other associations. However, although many of our interests in this campaign under the NRA plan are identical with all actors and extras of the industry, the biggest part of work in the pictures has nothing to do with those outside of our own group. Written in our code are pages of details of our work of a highly technical and hazardous nature—much of which the average actor, and some directors and producers, never even heard of.

It would be little short of a tragedy, then, if we should become less vigilant and allow the direction and management of our program to go out of our hands.

Yours very truly,
FRED D. BURNS, President.
ORIE O. ROBERTSON,
Secretary-Treasurer.

STEERING COMMITTEE OF 100 TO GUIDE NEW UNION SET-UP

2nds and Assts. Due To Gain More Voice

First step in the actual reorganization of Local 659, IATSE, the cameramen's union, will consist of the selection of a special "steering committee," composed of 100 members. This committee will be made up of first cameramen, seconds, assistants, still men and newsreel men. Selection has already started, but names will not be announced until after the full committee is named.

Decision to rebuild the union was made at the recent general meeting of the organization. A special committee has been at work ever since on plans. Finally decided on the steering committee idea which has been working efficiently for the Academy.

First action of the steering committee will be the revamping of the by-laws so that greater representation for all union members will be possible. The Executive Board will be changed from present all first cameramen makeup to a committee of 11 first cameramen, three seconds, three assistants, three still men and one newsreel man.

Next step will be to change by-laws so that every member of the union will vote secretly in the future on whether or not they will go on strike, if such an occasion comes up. There has been a lot of mumbling in the rank and file of the organization ever since the recent ill-fated strike. Those on the steering committee say no strike will ever be called in future unless it is considered by every member voting without ballyhoo.

Other plans include the working out of ways and means of bringing about a closer cooperation between the union and producers.

"The greatest spirit of harmony prevailed at our first meeting," said one of the men who attended. "Everyone is of one accord in our effort to work for the interest of all cameramen."

Walker, Fox; Representative Distributor Unaffiliated, Jack Rue, Universal; First Run Exhibitor Affiliated, Lou Marcus, Paramount; First Run Exhibitor Unaffiliated, B. F. More than a score of complaints have been filed with the labor committee, which refuses to act on them, saying they are not properly appointed. Duplicates of most of these have been filed with Judge Lindsey.

"I am going to handle all these cases," said the Judge yesterday, "regardless of where else they may be filed. I shall do my part, and if anyone kicks that is something that will have to be met later. I'm going to do my work."

'ROTHSCHILD' A WINNER

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•"WHAT this production business needs more than anything, in its effort to make better pictures, is some SHOWMANSHIP on the part of its producers." That from a very important producer and one of the very few in production, who has any idea of showmanship.

And it's true, damned true.

Because of the necessity of producing as cheaply as possible, because of the demand to keep all pictures within a given limitation in sets and technical overhead, our producers are taking little subjects and giving them LITTLE PRODUCTIONS. Because of that lack of SHOWMANSHIP, they have no inspiration for the building of the LITTLE SUBJECT into a big picture.

And by that is not meant "deMille settings" and production expenses that would sink a company should the pictures eventually flop; but what is meant is that almost indescribable touch, the SHOWMANSHIP that makes the "little subjects" look extremely big when shown in a theatre.

The present condition is due to the fact that most of our production heads seem to content themselves with MEDIOCRITY. They are of the opinion that out of a whole program of pictures, a few "clickers" will develop, and with those few turning in healthy profits, what's the use of taking chances, working a little harder, going to the effort of inspiring others around them to make BETTER PICTURES.

There are more SOUR BRAINS making pictures in Hollywood today than ever in its history. There are more men content with just holding their jobs than we have ever had before. There is too little ambition among our producers and there is practically NO ENTHUSIASM and pride in the work they are doing.

It's a bad situation. What to do about it?

There must be some penalty for bad pictures, there must be some REWARD for successful efforts. Our studio heads MUST BE AROUSED to inspire the producers under them, to put the fire of showmanship into their veins, to shout for better pictures, to DEMAND better pictures.

Showmanship can not be taught but it can be inspired if our big wigs really go after it.

What do you think?

Mexico Gives O.K. To 'Viva Villa'

Joseph M. Schenck is back in town, having done a little missionary work for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in showing their production "Viva Villa" to the Mexican Government officials for their O.K.

He got the O.K. but was asked to reshoot one scene, and that scene is Villa's first entrance into the capital. The officials did not think he had enough soldiers in his entourage, so they want the parade filmed with the entire Mexican army following the leader. And it will be done

Gleason on Three Way Ticket at Fox Studio

Fox yesterday signed Jimmy Gleason to a long term writing, directing and acting contract and promised him a full directing assignment in the near future. Gleason will direct the dialogue on "The World Is Ours," the tentative title for "Manhattan Love Song." He also scripted the piece.

'Men in White' Release Waits on Play Deal

With the picture already completed and on the way to the exchanges, MGM cannot give "Men in White" a general release until April 1 and a New York release until May 1. Release dates were agreed upon with the play producers at the time of its purchase.

Lombardo Bit $35,000

Guy Lombardo's one picture contract with Paramount is reported to net him $35,000. He also gets co-feature billing with Burns and Allen, who have the top spots in the picture tentatively titled "Slightly Married." This is his first acting job in a picture.

New Twentieth Century Picture Certain To Draw Tremendous Patronage Wherever Shown

About the most important money picture we have seen during the past two years is the Twentieth Century production of "The House of Rothschild," shown locally last night. It is certain to hang up box office records everywhere, because it has all the elements of a hit picture.

It is a good picture, excellent entertainment, produced on the highest scale possible, all backed with a showmanship that yells money. It concerns itself with a subject that has been front page for many centuries and has been hot household conversation for the past three years. It deals with a family of Jews—the House of Rothschild—and the persecution of and the saving of that race (for a time) by that House of Rothschild. It's a great subject, exceptionally well done and because of those features becomes a show property of great value to every branch of this industry.

And the industry should congratulate Zanuck and his organization.

A detailed review appears on page 2 of this issue.

Schnitzer Deal Cold

Joseph I. Schnitzer's negotiations to become executive producer for Majestic Pictures were called off yesterday, according to word received in Hollywood. Deal was practically set, but a last minute disagreement on terms killed it.

Para. Buys Delmar Yarn

Paramount has purchased "The End of the World," a story by Vina Delmar in the current Cosmopolitan. Studio will use it on next year's program under a different title.

Wampas May Ask for Listing Under Code

Sol Rosenblatt patted Wampas on the back when he was here because they were the only group in Hollywood that had not asked for something in the Code.

Indications now are that the press agenters may fool him before long and put in a request for a wage and hour scale. Several of the Wampas members declared yesterday that they are going to demand at an early meeting that such action be taken, with a minimum salary of $75 per week for studio publicists.

Lee Marcus Now Head of Radio Short Subject Dept.

Lou Brock yesterday was relieved of the production of shorts for Radio and from now on will devote all of his time to feature production. His first feature on this new set-up will be "Down to Their Last Yacht," featuring Sidney Fox and directed by Paul Sloan.

Lee Marcus, who has been assistant to Lou Brock at Radio for the past year, moves up a notch to handle the production of shorts. He will be assisted by Bert Gilroy.

Boles in Harding Pic

John Boles has been signed by Radio on a one picture loanout deal from Fox for the lead opposite Ann Harding in "Alien Corn," which will be directed by E. H. Griffith. Edward Everett Horton was also signed yesterday for one of the featured roles in this picture.

Todd-DeCicco Split

Thelma Todd's departure for the north on a vacation yesterday was followed by the news that the star and Pat deCicco have decided to untie the marital knot. DeCicco will continue to represent Miss Todd in business matters.

IATSE CHIEF IS ON WAY TO HEAL STRIKE WOUNDS

William C. Elliott, international president of the IATSE, is due in Hollywood next week on a peace mission. The big chief has been sent for in the belief that an accredited leader of the American Federation of Labor may be able to patch up the scars of the recent strike, and clear away the present deadlock between the IATSE unions and the studios.

It is also hinted that one of the purposes of Elliott's trip may be an

Fontanne-Lunt to Miller

New York—Gilbert Miller will borrow Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt from the Theatre Guild for the leads in the Jacques Duval play, "Towaritsch," which he will produce.

New Deal for Reid

Radio and Cliff Reid are putting their heads together straightening out the terms of a new deal which will keep the producer on the lot.

THE LOW DOWN

That was a neat study in anti-climaxes, the card that Ira Nelson Morris, ex-Ambassador to Sweden, left when he called on Connie Bennett the other day. In very elegant engraving the card read: "Ira Nelson Morris, Ancien, Ambassadeur extraordinaire plenipotentiare des Etats Unis de l'Amerique," and beneath that, written in pencil it said, "Care of Edmund Goulding, 803 Rodeo Drive."

A dirty trick but a singularly effective one was employed by a couple of agents who had just about despaired of ever collecting the commissions due them from a feminine star. They looked up her mother while they were in New York, dressed her all up and brought her to a studio ostensibly to interview her about her famous daughter for the newsreels. They sat her in a chair and gave her the signal to start talking. "Vell," said Mamma looking straight into the camera and talking straight into the mike, "Vat do you vant I should say?" They cut the picture right there, bundled Mamma back to the Bronx and hurried back to Hollywood with the precious film. When they came back, they called the star, showed her the filmed interview and threatened to release it. P.S. The star paid the commissions in full.

There's a very simple way of finding out whether or not "you figger" on the Fox lot. At a story conference the other day in a certain exec's office were one director, one supervisor and a couple of writers. After the conference was over, the exec opened his desk drawer, carefully pulled out a box of cigars, offered them to the director and supervisor, took one himself and carefully replaced the cigars in the desk drawer. When the writers got outside the exec's office they stopped the director and asked him how come they didn't rate a cigar. And the director gave it to them straight with "He only offers the cigars to IMPORTANT people."

Twentieth Century, as its contribution to the costume drama of the year, offers a history of the most famous banking house of all time in Europe and in so doing, by that very strange paradox, loses not one iota of its reputation for filming subjects that are first of all of prime importance in their timeliness. Add to that the fact that this picture has been produced with lavish care, drama, pathos and a delicate humor coupled with a certain gentle homeliness that touches the hearts of any audience and you have a combination that is not only good box office but a picture that is worthy of respectful criticism and one that is entertainment all the way through.

It would have been impossible, of course, to film the entire history of that intriguing and widespread family of Rothschilds (one of whom is still living at the age of ninety-two or thereabouts in the Germany of today), so they have chosen the figures and circumstances most pertinent and applicable to certain specific conditions as they exist in the world today. Beginning with the death of Mayer Rothschild wherein his main heritage to his five sons is the admonition that they make the world a place in which the Jews may walk in dignity and peace, the picture traces the life of Nathan Rothschild, the head of the house in England, and how through his support of the Allies against Napoleon he eventually brought peace to England and the countries of Europe and gained everlasting glory for the house of Rothschild and did bring about the treaties whereby his people were to be recognized as human beings with human feelings for humanity and which recognition gave them the right to pursue their lives and careers with dignity.

The picture is necessarily almost entirely George Arliss and one is again impressed by the conviction that his artistry can do no wrong. Mr. Arliss lends a warmth and drama to cold facts that are all the difference in the world between a mere impersonation of a historical figure and an actor playing the part of a human being who not only has a definite place in history but who was, first of all, quite human. Loretta Young, looking very beautiful in costume, and Robert Young handle the roles of the young lovers capably and there are standout performances by C. Aubrey Smith as the Duke of Wellington, Boris Karloff as Ledrantz of Prussia and Reginald Owen as Herries. And Helen Westley is magnificent as the dowager Mrs. Rothschild.

Nunnally Johnson has done a fine job with the dialogue, having carefully avoided all the pitfalls of florid speech and stilted language and not allowing a "period" to interfere with his sense of what dialogue between a couple of fellows should sound like.

Al Newman's scoring of the picture has taken full advantage of its dramatic possibilities and skillfully weaves in the exquisite native Jewish melodies.

And to Peverell Marley must go some very special applause for his very beautiful photography. There is one scene in particular, in the beginning of the picture, a shot of the family of Mayer Rothschild waiting on the stairs that is very lovely indeed. Art direction by Richard Day deserves mention, as do the marvelous costumes.

And Alfred Werker may well be proud of this day's work for he has turned out a fine picture and one that will bring plenty of hard-earned money into the box office.

Slickum vs. Oscar

The feud between Slickum, the MGM bootblack, and Oscar, the Paramount bootblack, is still on. When Slickum read the statement made by Oscar about being on the lot for 13 years before he found out he was typed, he said, "It sure did take that man a long time to find out he was a black boy."

Paul Kelly Set for 'Our Daily Bread'

King Vidor has signed Paul Kelly for the male lead in his production of "Our Daily Bread" that goes into production at the Metropolitan studio with a probable United Artists release.

Mitch Leisen to Meg 'Pursuit of Happiness'

Mitchell Leisen has been set to direct Arthur Hornblow's first production for Paramount, "Pursuit of Happiness," after he finishes "Murder at the Vanities," his present assignment. No cast has been definitely set, although Hornblow would like to have Gary Cooper.

Warners Sign Churchill

Warners yesterday signed Berton Churchill for a featured role in "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," which starts February 28 with Charles Ruggles in the lead. Edward Ludwig directs. Al Kingston agented for Churchill.

New Face Problem Coming on Extras

Newcomers to Hollywood with picture careers in mind are being stumped by NRA Code order to cut down present number of "extras" and reregister so only 2500 on list.

Bars are up for new talent, so some of them are complaining, unless they are lucky enough to get on a contract by some studio. Fan magazines and chatter columnists continue to write yarns about how motion picture executives are crying for new faces.

"Now," one new gal in town yesterday remarked, "they tell us that we can't register at Central Casting, for the Extra Committee is getting ready to thin the ranks. The Extra Committee tells us they have no way to give jobs. I wonder what the picture people are going to do when the present crop of extras grow old. If they don't let the new people have a chance to show, what is the end going to be?"

Studio officials are also doing some wondering about the same thing. One executive yesterday expressed the opinion that studios would have to put in their own stock companies of extras on short term basis; restocking every few months so fresh faces would appear and audiences wouldn't become so familiar with the faces of the same extra players that they forget the regular players.

The Singers' Guild of Los Angeles, which attempted earlier in the week to get under the wing of the Code Committee for Extras, were hanging on a limb last night after being told they could not be included in the extras' regulations.

Deputy Administrator Sol A. Rosenblatt, in a telegram to Mrs Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Extras Committee, made the decision that left them wondering. The wire read: "Committee for Extras does not include singers."

This was in answer to a wire from Mrs. Kinney asking what to do about the group of 1000 singers who had filed a request with her for an amendment to the Code which would give them special wage scales, etc.

Officers of the singers' organization last night wired Rosenblatt asking where they do belong. Allan Watson, president, stated that Rosenblatt had assured their group when he was here that they belonged with the extras. Now they are wondering if he was kidding them, according to Watson.

Vic Fleming Set to Direct MGM's 'Treasure Island'

DIRECTOR RACE HOT IN REPORTER AWARD VOTING

A half dozen Hollywood directors and one foreigner are leading the parade of votes for the best directorial achievement for 1933 in The Hollywood Reporter award of merit competition, with several others within striking distance. As the votes are still flocking in, it would take an unusual prophet to guess who will get the prize.

Frank Capra is a prime favorite thus far with his directorial work in "Lady For a Day." Alexander Korda, the Hungarian director, is also among the leaders for his direction of "Henry the Eighth."

E. H. Griffith is getting a big vote for his direction in "Animal Kingdom." So is Frank Borzage for his work in directing Mary Pickford in "Secrets." Gregory La Cava is among the leaders because of "Gabriel Over The White House." George Cukor is decidedly in the running with his "Little Women," and John M. Stahl is getting a big vote for "Only Yesterday," which established Margaret Sullavan in the motion picture field.

Several requests have come into this office for ballots, with the explanation that none had been received. If you by any chance have not received your ballot, a telephone call or a note to the Reporter will bring one to you immediately, so you will have the privilege of playing a part in this, the first awarding of credit by the ENTIRE industry.

Acad. Views Shorts Tonight for Awards

More than fifty short subjects will be screened tonight at Radio by the special Academy committee which will select three each from comedy, novelty and cartoon subjects for final vote in the Academy awards competition.

Partial list of those to be seen tonight are "Down From Vesuvius," Fox Magic Carpet; "Following the Horses," Fox Newsreel Man Adventures; "Three Little Pigs" and "Building a Building," Walt Disney; "Dora's Dunking Doughnuts" and "What To Do" from Educational; Stacy Woodard's "The Sea"; "Pirate Ship" and "Beanstalk Jack" from Terry-Toons; the Moran and Mack "Blue and Blackbirds"; "Krakatoa" from Educational; the Grantland Rice short, "What Makes a Champion"; "Handle Bar," Pete Smith novelty; "Menu" and "Over the Counter," MGM in Technicolor.

McGuire Denies Renewal Of Deal At Universal

William Anthony McGuire, through his agents, Schulberg, Feldman and Gurney, denied the story in yesterday's Reporter that he had signed a new deal with Universal and said that at present does not intend to renew.

McGuire has a deal on with Irving Thalberg to go over to MGM as a writer-producer, under Thalberg's wing, on a four picture deal.

Connolly Returns Home

With the delay of the starting of "Alien Corn," the Ann Harding picture at Radio, due to script not being finished, Walter Connolly, who was loaned to Radio by Columbia for the picture, goes back to Columbia for a featured spot in "Twentieth Century."

Add to 'Operator 13'

Jerry Howard, stooge number 1 for Ted Healy; Russell Hardie, Willard Robertson, Reginald Barlow and Francis MacDonald were added to the cast of "Operator 13" at MGM.

New 'Party' Song

Howard Dietz and Walter Donaldson have written a song titled "I'm Feeling High," which MGM will use in "Hollywood Party."

Warburton Is Not Considering Pic Offers

Irvine "Cotton" Warburton spiked all rumors yesterday of his intention to ruin his amateur standing on the gridiron by going into the MGM football yarn, "Gravy Game," for David Selznick. He denied ever considering doing so.

Two for Coslow-Johnston

The song writing team of Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow have been assigned by Paramount to write the musical numbers for "Slightly Married," the Guy Lombardo-Burns and Allen picture, and "The Great Magoo."

Gering Gets Assignment

Marion Gering has been set to direct "His Master's Voice" as his next assignment for the B. P. Schulberg unit at Paramount. The cast is headed by Lanny Ross, Mary Boland and Charlie Ruggles.

IA Chief Elliott Due

attempt to bring the leading cameramen back into the union fold by means of either a merger or working agreement with the American Society of Cinematographers.

At present the ASC controls the situation in the major studios, but the IATSE union controls the camera work in the independent field as well as on locations. This location situation has begun to worry the majors more than a little.

Reactions of some leading producers yesterday indicated that the latter idea would not meet with much encouragement. The producers feel that they now have the important first cameramen in the position of creators, just as with directors, writers, etc., and are able to deal with them as individuals according to their worth. For that reason they will oppose any move that would return the first cameramen to union status.

The exact date of Elliott's arrival in Hollywood is something of a mystery at local union headquarters. "Next week" is the nearest to a definite date that any one will venture. Ed Estabrook, business manager of Local 659, was in San Diego yesterday, however, and some union men ventured the guess that he might be in a preliminary huddle with Elliott.

JOHNSON TURNS SOFT

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•IN an unguarded moment the other day we commented on the fact that the writers did not seem to be in on the big gravy on new deals resulting from the starvation in good pictures.

We placed ourselves open to the caustic comeback we received from a producer yesterday.

"Rats," he said, "I can buy writers by quantity grading. They are either 'pretty good' or 'pretty bad' or 'good enough for a programmer.'

"The same rules don't apply to them as to stars and directors. When I pay $50,000 for a star it is because I can't get that star's value for less money. If I pay $50,000 for a director I do it because I know it is buying insurance.

"But writers? A dime a dozen, a quarter a dozen, or a dollar a dozen. But always by the dozen."

Honest, that's the way it was handed to us. And, of course, we got sore at first. Then we cooled off, and remembered some of our many contacts with production. (We've had a few.)

The son-of-a-gun was right.

The usual "associate producer," "supervisor," or what have you, worries like the devil about his director, and his star, and when it comes to the writer he lets the AGENTS pick one for him.

Or else he just reaches into the staff and picks the fellow who got the last good notices.

He'll worry about fitting the story to the star, about matching the picture to the type the director has shown ability to make—but the writers? A dime a dozen. Pick anyone who is literate.

What's the result?

On any given day in Hollywood, if you were able to talk to ALL the writers about the story on which they were working, you would find 75 per cent of them with their tongues in their cheeks.

They'd tell you: "I don't expect much from this story. First, because it wasn't much in the original anyway, and secondly, because I'm writing it the way Supervisor Bulbul wants it. A guy has to eat—and he thinks I'm the cat's meow just now, so I give him what he wants."

Honest, isn't that the situation?

$50,000 Tarzan

Neil Hamilton checked off the MGM payroll in connection with the new version of "Tarzan" a couple of days ago, and is already starting to worry about the income tax collector. For an actor who hasn't been on the screen much this year he has a headache, because the "Tarzan" engagement brought him $50,000 in cash.

P. S.—The picture isn't finished yet.

Swanson in Person for N.Y. Paramount

New York.—The "flesh" war is on in earnest in New York. Following the experience started with Mary Pickford and Miriam Hopkins, Paramount is going after star names for personal appearances at their own New York shop window.

The next ace to be played in the game will be Gloria Swanson, in a sketch from "The Trespasser." She goes in on a $6500 guarantee, sharing fifty-fifty on the gross over $55,000. Appearance scheduled within three weks.

Taylor Fights Illness

Sam Taylor is still directing and keeping on schedule with Harold Lloyd's "The Catspaw" though out of bed only a few days from the flu and worrying about his youngest child, two and a half years old, seriously ill with pneumonia.

Kay Unties the Knot

Kay Francis untied her third marital knot yesterday in Superior Court, where Judge Sproul granted her a divorce from Kenneth MacKenna, her director-husband. Mental cruelty was the charge.

'Reporter' Forecast Exhibs Would Not Be Forced Into Code Confirmed By NRA Head

Washington.—Confirming the forecast printed exclusively in last Monday's Reporter, General Hugh S. Johnson yesterday made public an official interpretation of the effect of "assent" to the motion picture code which completely reverses the Code Authority's original statement that only theatres which had signed assent to the Code would be allowed to operate under the zoning and clearance boards.

The interpretation is looked upon here as a complete victory for Allied and the little fellow, and was probably occasioned by the New York suit which attacked this same point. The

Ric Cortez Turns N. Y. Play Angel

New York.—Ricardo Cortez has turned play producer. This became known with the announcement today that Kubec Glasmon and Sidney Salkow were on their way east to start rehearsals for a play to be staged by Zetroc, Inc.

"Zetroc," spelled backwards, turns out to be "Cortez." The play is a backstage satire, based on a short story by George Bradshaw, play script by Glasmon and Salkow, with the latter directing.

Doran Expected East

New York.—Advices here are that D. A. Doran, former Fox story editor, now in play production, will leave the coast by plane this Saturday to return to New York.

Say Fox, WB, MGM Oppose Baby Stars

It is understood that the three studios opposed to allowing this year's Wampas "Baby Stars" to go on the air are Fox, Warners and MGM.

Fox is said to be still suffering from the wounds of their "Baby" clash last year when they selected their own stars. MGM is described as neutral, with excellent possibility of being won over to the broadcast. Warner studio is put down as being opposed to the idea because the proposed broadcast will go over a national hookup and not over the Warner station, although official reason given is that such broadcasts hurt business in the theatres.

Lionel Barrymore Stage Appearances Extended

New York.—The Lionel Barrymore personal appearances have been playing to such record breaking business that he has been signed for eight additional weeks on the Loew circuit.

Junior Has Surprise

Junior Laemmle, who left New York yesterday, has a big play and book purchase up his sleeve. He remained in New York a week after his father left in order to close the deals which will be announced on his return to Universal City.

Pickford at Bio. Opening

New York.—The start of production on "Frankie and Johnnie" is giving excuse for a second christening of the Biograph studio, and none other than Mary Pickford will do the honors. It will happen Friday afternoon.

Bill Howard Buys Play

New York.—William K. Howard read a play here that he liked so well he dug into his own pockets and bought the screen rights. It is "The Far Off Hills," by Lennox Robinson.

PLAYERS' VOTES IN AWARD CONTEST MUCH SCATTERED

That competition in the Reporter awards of merit competition for outstanding honors in acting will be keen is indicated in the votes that have already been received.

No actor or actress seems to have a commanding lead thus far. Katharine Hepburn is getting a tremendous vote for her work in "Little Women." So is Margaret Sullavan for her first picture, "Only Yesterday." Lee Tracy is pulling a big vote for his work in

Lombard Schedule Puts Paramount in a Jam

The completion of production on the Bing Crosby picture "We're Not Dressing" at Paramount, in which Carole Lombard has the feminine lead, will be delayed, as Miss Lombard has to report to Columbia today for the John Barrymore picture "Twentieth Century." A few days' work remains to be done, so the studio will have to wait until Miss Lombard finishes.

Very funny about the Warren William disappearance. New York REVIEWS

"CATHERINE THE GREAT"

Korda-Toeplitz prod. for British International; director, Paul Czinner; writers, Lajos Biro, Arthur Wimperis, Melchior Lengyel.

Astor Theatre

Mirror: Mr. Czinner's direction is imaginative and interesting. The production is handsome; the photography attractive. The English are making better and better movies. This is just another exciting challenge to Hollywood. It is a brilliantly acted, skillfully made and genuinely interesting historical drama.

World-Telegram: An expertly produced romantic tragedy. Some excellent acting by an expertly directed cast so that the narrative loses none of its theatrical effectiveness. It is a pretty tale, the very stuff of which effective films are made. It is more palatable than the scrawny facts of history, even if its conventional pattern does weaken at times.

Herald-Tribune: Handsome, lavish, dramatically impressive and beautifully acted drama of striking skill and power. It reveals in Miss Bergner an actress of the first rank and it suggests that English ingenuity has at last found the type of part that Douglas Fairbanks Jr. can manage effectively.

Times: The most expensively staged picture that has come from London. Good, though it is scarcely comparable to Henry VIII. It is the difference between wit with an excellent actor and facts with an efficient actress.

Journal: It is splendidly acted, mounted and produced. A tremendous amount of detail has gone into the production and each scene offers a wealth of interest. "Catherine the Great" is Elizabeth Bergner, and Elizabeth Bergner is superb.

News: The backgrounds are rich and gorgeous, fitting settings for Catherine and her court. The camera work is on a par with the general excellence of the production. Director has presented the pageantry of the Romanoff Court with beauty and handled his enormous cast with skill.

American: It is a triumph.

Post: No means superlative either as a story or as a picture. The settings have a disappointingly studio atmosphere. There is none of the solid beauty which distinguished "Henry VIII." Nor are the spoken episodes as artfully developed.

Sun: A lavish, completely satisfying background, an almost cunning sense of comedy, a story lifted from sufficiently familiar pages of history to make every one feel at home, and two powerful performances instead of one. It is colorful, highly romanticized drama, made something more than that by the strength of its performances. It is a film of which England may again be proud.

"FRONTIER MARSHAL"

Fox prod.; director, Lew Seiler; writers, William Conselman and Stuart Anthony

Mayfair Theatre

Journal: A good old-fashioned Westerner, starring the stalwart George O'Brien in what may be his final wide-open-spaces contribution.

American: Its appeal is frankly juvenile, but as in all films of this genre there is a certain virility to the piece, and oodles of that action which is a primary requisite of motion pictures. If you like this type of entertainment, there will be no complaints regarding the Mayfair offering. Mr. O'Brien is satisfying in an accustomed character, and valiant support is offered by Mr. Stone, Russell Simpson, Miss Bentley and others in the cast. Director Lew Seiler keeps this moving.

World-Telegram: Since it is designed primarily for small towns, where movie audiences will have none of your Garbos, Dietrichs, etc., and where the Western still reigns supreme, "Frontier Marshal" makes no pretense at art—even cinematic art. Thus criticism can be dismissed very neatly

Herald-Tribune: This story could have been made into a good, exciting, colorful show had it not been done on quite such elementary terms of dialogue, character and plot manipulation. The acting is at least serviceable. Mr. O'Brien plays the invincible hero pleasantly and Berton Churchill is sufficiently unctuous as the crooked mayor.

Times: "Frontier Marshal," being a frank melodrama, does not bother about plausibility, and one gathers that it was produced with the adaptor and the director having their tongues in their cheeks.

News: If Westerns and George O'Brien appeal to your movie tasts, then this one produced by Fox Films called "Frontier Marshal" will be right down your alley. The direction by Lew Seiler is okay.

Sun: It's just an old-fashioned western, and a good one,too. Unabashed it follows the regular formula for westerns. It is still an excellent formula; and a western, accepted at its own value, can be rather refreshing entertainment. Lew Seiler has been canny enough to have his actors underplay rather than exaggerate, letting the plot supply the melodrama. "The Frontier Marshal," unpretentious western as it is, is one of the week's best bets.

Post: It is hard to believe that "Frontier Marshal" was not a product of the "Great Train Robbery" era, brought up to date by addition of sound effects and dialogue. The film has everything than we were accustomed to look for in the hard-riding, hard-shooting melodrama of the West. As a burlesque of old-time Westerns, "Frontier Marshal" can be taken in good fun.

'THE SHOWOFF' IS OKAY; TRACY THE WHOLE SHOW

Perfect Adaptation Of the Old Show

"THE SHOWOFF"
(MGM)

Direction.....Charles F. Reisner
Story by.....George Kelly
Adaptation.....Herman J. Mankiewicz
Photography.....James Wong Howe
Art Director.....David Townsend
Cast: Spencer Tracy, Madge Evans, Henry Wadsworth, Lois Wilson, Grant Mitchell, Clara Blandick, Alan Edwards and Claude Gillingwater.

Spencer Tracy does the impossible in "The Showoff." He carries the entire thing on his own shoulders—and the part is terrific.

"The Showoff," of course, is a one part story, with everyone more or less taking back seats and leaving most of the work to the main character. And what Tracy does with it! In spite of the fact that the play as a whole is too widely familiar to hold any new excitement for the theatre-goer, and that his role is a series of dramatic and emotional peaks that would tax the strength of any actor, Tracy turns in a performance that is all wool and a yard wide.

The story, old as it is, is still strongly interesting, the character of poor Aubrey Piper being such a mixture of every-day comedy and pathos that it will hit the bull's eye in practically any house. Piper talks too much and never gets anything done; he buys cars and victrolas on the installment plan and then can't support his wife and has to go to live at his mother-in-law's house; he undertakes to execute the president's business in the corridor of the Midway Railroad Company's building and gets fired; he promises to be good and turn over a new leaf, and almost ruins the chances of his brother-in-law to sell an invention. Everything turns out all right in the end, which is the weak part of the story, for with Aubrey mixed up in it nothing could turn out all right.

Madge Evans plays his gallant, believing, trustful little wife to perfection. Clara Blandick is unbelievably good as her mother who despises Aubrey, and Grant Mitchell does a lot with the small part of the father. Henry Wadsworth plays quietly but effectively the role of her brother, and Lois Wilson is well cast as the sister. Alan Edwards and Claude Gillingwater are both well cast in smaller roles.

Charles F. Reisner's direction puts a lot of life into the old vehicle; Herman J. Mankiewicz made a faithful adaptation of the George Kelly play, and the photography by James Wong Howe is, of course, excellent. The art direction by David Townsend is beautifully in keeping with the spirit of the thing.

You probably won't find anybody who hasn't seen this play, but you can drag 'em in with Spencer Tracy's performance. It's swell.

Jo Berne at 'U'

Josef Berne has been signed by Universal to write an original story for his own direction.

What's a Hitler?

Chesterfield Picture Good Entertainment

"MURDER ON THE CAMPUS"
(Chesterfield)

Direction .....Richard Thorpe
Story by.....Whitman Chambers
Photography.....M. A. Anderson
Cast: Shirley Grey, Charles Starrett, J. Farrell MacDonald, Maurice Black, Edward Van Sloan.

A sweet little piece of entertainment in murder mysteries with a plot that actually stands analysis. With the exception of a bit of false motivation and some unfortunate casting in minor roles, this is a programmer of which any major lot might well be proud.

While the chimes are ringing out from a high tower on the college campus a shot is heard. Investigation reveals the body of the murdered chimes player, but how the murderer escaped from the tower baffles the police. Two other killings occur before the mystery is solved by a young reporter to the vindication of his sweetheart.

The story is a little long in starting, but when it gets along it really goes. The dialogue occasionally leaves something to be desired, but credit is due the adapter for not cluttering up the yarn with unnecessary detail. It has a college background, but, as everyone is supposed to know what colleges are like, no time is wasted with typical movie college capers. This alone makes the picture noteworthy.

Richard Thorpe did a neat job of direction and the photography of M. A. Anderson is outstanding. Anderson has a trick in dolly shots, moving almost imperceptibly into close-ups. He is also among the first to get night shots that actually look like night.

Charles Starrett is personable as the newspaperman, handling his assignment with ease. Edward Van Sloan capably plays a difficult role and J. Farrell MacDonald is excellent as a human detective. Shirley Grey hasn't much to do as a standard heroine.

The picture was adapted from a book called "The Campanile Murders" and is sure to please in support of any program.

"Scarlet Pimpernel," also known in dramatic versions as "The Laughing Cavalier," was under consideration in America for Reginald Denny a few years ago, and more lately for Ronald Colman. Tradeviews

There's something wrong here somewhere.

In all the frantic grasping for means of making better pictures, why doesn't someone come out and decide, "The STORY is what the actors have to play, and the director has to make. Let's make SHINING examples of a few of those writers who always deliver. Put them in the BIG MONEY with the stars and directors. It will encourage the pack to forget the bread-and-water existence, and strive for the bigger things. In the end it will save us money and make us money."

Think it over, boys.

HEADACHE FOR EXTRA GROUP AS ELIMINATION JOB STARTS

Will Cut Six Out Of Seven Players

Film Code Committee for Extras swung into action yesterday on the problem of reregistration of the some 17,000 extras and the carving down of the list to a possible 2500 names, as is proposed in the film code.

Just what will be the method of procedure is the question that is stumping Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, as well as the fifteen members of her group. Yesterday she requested each member of the committee to prepare suggestions as to ways and means of cutting.

The committee expects plenty of squawks from extras who will be eliminated. "It is a new problem to me," explains Mrs. Kinney, "and just how it will be done so everyone will be given a perfectly square deal is a terrific problem. We want to get the work under way as rapidly as possible, but we want everyone of the extras to have an opportunity to prove his place is on the list."

Tentative meeting of small group of the committee is scheduled for Friday night. Plan now is to have several of the committee meet with Mrs. Kinney until all of committee has given views. Then the cutting will start.

In 1932 it dropped to 49 millions. Last year it dropped to only 20 millions. Without returns from export, home production has tough time.

Radio Action Gives Tip on Pic Prospects

First indication of what may be expected when the NRA Compliance Board gets going on the various code complaints was shown yesterday when the board acted upon a complaint filed against Radio Station KMTR.

Local 695, IATSE, the motion picture sound men's union, filed the complaint in behalf of three broadcast technicians who claimed the station was not paying them the wage scale called for in the code. Result was that the compliance board, on which Judge Ben Lindsey was sitting, found in favor of the sound men and ordered the radio station to pay them a total of $256, which was the difference between what station had paid the men and what the code called for, since the code was signed on December 11. Wage scale is $40 week for this classification of men.

The sound men were jubilant last night, for this is first action they have been able to get from code officials. They have filed complaint expected to settle studio sound men wage scale with this board which has been shelved for weeks by the Studio Labor Committee, and expect that it will be coming up for a hearing soon, inasmuch as Judge Lindsey has announced that as labor compliance officer he is going to go right ahead with speed and handle the complaints.

While it is not generally known, the sound men in the radio stations here have been gathered into the studio sound local with a radio branch of their own.

'Mrs. Wiggs' Dusted Off

Paramount has taken "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" off the shelf and assigned Charlotte Henry to the role of "Lovey Mary." ACAD. LUNCHES PRESS TO START AWARD BALLYHOO

With President J. Theodore Reed, Frank Capra, Howard J. Green and John LeRoy Johnson as speakers, the Academy started an intensive publicity drive in connection with its annual Award of Merit competition yesterday at a luncheon given to the members of the press.

Stressing the importance of honors from fellow workers, President Reed declared that the Academy will never pass up the annual awards competition, which, he pointed out, has become a national institution.

Howard Green declared that the Academy has always endeavored to work along lines that try to make more of a picture than merely 6000 feet of celluloid. Reward such as the Academy awards, he said, is just one of the steps to develop initiative and artistry in the industry.

It was also announced that instead of a lot of over-serious speeches which usually accompany banquets, this year's Award Banquet on March 16 will be a dinner dance with no radio broadcast. A name band is planned and committee is trying to stage an affair that will be remembered.

Player Vote Scattered

"The Nuisance," a picture which is also drawing a big vote among the writers for original story honors.

John Barrymore is among the leaders for his performance in Radio's "Topaze." And Lionel Barrymore is pulling a strong vote for the splendid performance he gave in "Stranger's Return." Miriam Hopkins, too, is drawing a large vote for her work in the same picture. May Robson is upholding the ranks of the older women of the screen with a huge vote for her acting in "Lady for a Day."

Diana Wynyard is in the running with a large following for her work in "Cavalcade," and Leslie Howard is among the leaders for his acting in "Berkeley Square." Kay Francis has a flock of votes in recognition of her performance in "The House on 56th Street," and Paul Kelly draws a big vote for his portrayal in "Broadway Through a Keyhole."

The votes are still coming and results will be more than interesting as the entire industry picks the winners.

Elizabeth Allen to London

Elizabeth Allen leaves by plane tonight for New York on the first leg of a short vacation in London. She will return in a little over a month. Miss Allen recently has been handed a long term ticket by MGM. Her last picture for the studio was "Men in White."

Sloane Buys a Play

Paul Sloane has purchased, through the Bren and Orsatti office, the screen rights to the London stage success "My Lady Weeps," by Thormes Thomas. He plans to go east after he finishes his one-picture deal for Radio to make arrangements to produce this as an independent picture.

Repeat Domino Revels

The Dominos will repeat their Revels next Sunday night in the club theatre, 1284 N. Crescent Heights boulevard. Irene Franklin, Leon Errol, Guy Kibbee and the Gleason family are among those who will appear.

Agnes deMille in Para Pic

Agnes deMille, daughter of William deMille, has been signed by Paramount to do a dance on the back of a bull in "Cleopatra." She returns here April 1 from London, where she is now on the stage.

Thorpe Gets Settlement

New York.—Columbia has settled out of court on the $150,000 suit brought by Jim Thorpe, famous Indian athlete, who claimed he was signed for "White Eagle" and then never used.

Fidler to Hospital

Fred Fidler, J. Walter Thompson advertising man, booking radio on the coast, checked in at the Good Samaritan hospital yesterday. Having a leg infection treated.

Okay, Paramount!

Al Kaufman, who has just returned to his Paramount office after a trip to Cuba, tells the best story of the Cuban revolution.

First day he was in Havana he saw a big parade in which banners bearing the name Paramount were displayed. He inquired and found the revolutionists had taken time out from fighting to parade in honor of Paramount and its picture "This Day and Age," which depicts youths taking over government.

Col. Sets Date Back On Grace Moore Pic

Columbia has shoved back the start of the Grace Moore starring vehicle "Don't Fall in Love" because of inability to secure a suitable leading man at this time.

The studio tried to get Paul Lukas from Universal on a loanout deal, but he could not be spared at this time.

Johnson Turns Soft

ruling, signed by Johnson and Donald R. Richberg, chief of the NRA legal counsel, follows:

"For the information of the members of the motion picture industry with respect to the form of assent distributed by the Code Authority of the motion picture industry under the terms of Article VI, part 2, section 8 of the Code:

"1. It is not the intent or purpose of Article VI, part 2, section 8 of the Code that any member of the industry assenting to the code on the form used by the Code Authority shall thereby waive or be stopped from setting up any right which such member of the industry may possess under general or statutory law against any arbitrary, oppressive, injurious and unreasonable action by any administrative official or agency under the motion picture industry code.

"2. It is not the intent or purpose of such article, part or section of the Code that any member so assenting shall be precluded or stopped from seeking amendment to or modifications of said Code.

"3. Members of the industry not assenting to the Code on the forms above mentioned cannot be denied any of the rights and remedies afforded by the Code, save only they will not enjoy the right to file complaint before the administratitve agencies provided for in the Code. Upon acceptance of any of the benefits and advantages of the Code, such members of the industry may be assessed a reasonable amount, subject to the approval of the Administrator, to help defray the expenses of administering the Code, but not otherwise.

"4. While assent on the form above mentioned is necessary to enable a member of the industry to lodge protests with Clearance Zoning Board and to make use of the facilities of the local grievance boards, nevertheless, such assent is not essential to enable any member of the industry to interpose his defense before any such board if he so desires in any matter affecting his interests, and thereafter to prosecute any and all appeals therefrom to the same extent and in the same manner as a member assenting on the form above mentioned.

"5. The statements contained herein apply with respect to the execution, either heretofore or hereafter by any member of the form of assent above mentioned, and all such assents will be deemed to have been executed in the light of those statements."

Opinion here is that this interpretation nullifies previous concepts of code assent and was done to stave off some of the Allied objections. Also that Johnson has been getting it from many sides, and this is indication of the weight of the protests.

LABOR POW-WOW HERE

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•A WRITER dropped into the office last night just to pass the time of day, and before he left passed on a thought.

We should mention his name, just to give credit where due, but we can't mention his name because he works for 'supervisors' and 'associate producers.' And when you wrap the whole picture business up and lay it on the lap of Santa Claus—the jobs are made, and the jobs are lost, by an important tribe called variously, "supervisors" or "associate producers."

So we can't mention this writer's name. Because, dumb as writers can be on occasions, a job is a job.

Here is what he said:

"If it were humanly possible to declare a moratorium on suggestions from supervisors and associate producers for the next three months—you'd be surprised at what material the screen might have to lift it from the present doldrums.

"I started out to write a newspaper story a few months ago. Every character in the story was a flesh and blood person whom you and I have known in New York and Chicago. But by the time we passed the third conference, with the supervisor putting in his ideas of newspaper work as gleaned from seeing the 'other fellows' ' pictures, the story was wobbly. All the work of all the King's Horses and all the King's Men just made it a fairly good picture in the end.

"But the author couldn't get a separate subtitle, or take an ad in the trade papers to say, 'Those scenes in reels two, four and six, which throw this story out of gear, were the pet ideas of Supervisor Bulbul.'

"The writer had to take it on the chin."

And this chap concluded:

"Billy Wilkerson is correctly trying to pep this business into some sort of ambition that will result in making a few GREAT pictures. But even Billy, searching his memory for a GREAT picture to mention, has to go way back to 'All Quiet' for an example.

"Well—can you imagine how much of 'All Quiet' the world would have seen if it had been written by a fellow named Mr. Remark, on a studio payroll at a couple of hundred a week, nursing the job because he needed the

B'way Pics Surprise Considering Storm

New York.—The weather took a severe fall out of Broadway's picture palaces this week, but when you consider the weather it seems miraculous that they did any business at all.

"Caroline" managed to get $82,000 in the Music Hall; "Cat and the Fiddle" should not be ashamed of $54,000 at the Capitol; and the same thought applies to "Bolero's" $45,000 at the Paramount. "Moulin Rouge," in its third week at the Rivoli, looked good with $18,000 under the conditions. "Devil Tiger" got $12,000 for its second Rialto week.

Sad spots were "Mandalay" at the Strand, for $19,000; and "Long Lost Father" at the Roxy for $20,000.

Newman Heads Home

Robert V. Newman, New York producer here on a week's visit, moves off tomorrow on the return hop. He plans to put the Vina Delmar play, "Women Live Too Long," on the Broadway boards.

Renewal of "Basic Agreement" To See Gathering of Industry And Labor Leaders Next Month

Biggest gathering of labor leaders in history of Hollywood is expected between now and March 15. At that time negotiations are slated to start between major producing companies and labor unions for renewal of Basic Agreement.

Heretofore negotiations have been carried on in New York with delegations from all of the locals going there and spending much time and money. This year it was figured better to hold the confab out here at the heart of the industry.

Acad. Award Ballots To Be Tallied Openly

"Steering Commitee" of the Academy met yesterday on details of annual awards competition and decided that the counting of the ballots this year will be done publicly at the awards banquet on the night of March 16.

Members will be permitted to wait until the eleventh hour to vote, as ballots will be accepted at the door of the banquet room at the Ambassador. When all are seated committee will open ballots before the guests and count and announce the winners then.

Idea is said to be to remove any doubt in minds of the public that everything is not on the up and up in making the final awards. Heretofore ballots have been counted by committee prior to the banquet and only the announcements made at the banquet table.

Committee that decided this policy yesterday composed of King Vidor, chairman; J. T. Reed, Frank Capra, Howard J. Green, Jack Warner, Waldemar Young, Van Nest Polglase, Nathan Levinson, J. M. Nicolaus and Ralph Townsend.

Columbia Borrows Patsy

Columbia yesterday borrowed Patsy Kelly from Hal Roach for a comedy lead in the S. K. Lauren story, "The Party's Over," which Walter Lang directs when it starts next Tuesday. So here is your chance to have an evening's fun and at the same time encourage that rarity nowadays, an ambitious producer.

Paramount Buys Original Yarn from W. C. Fields

W. C. Fields yesterday won recognition as a writer when Paramount concluded a deal with him, through the Beyer-MacArthur office, for purchase of his original, "Greasepaint."

New York.—The brief case Russell Holman is carrying to the coast for conferences with Emanuel Cohen and the Paramount production board is understood to contain a copy of John Erskine's latest novel, "Bachelor of Arts."

FOX 'SCANDALS' DISAPPOINTS; 'LAZY RIVER' CHEAP HOKE

Fine Cast and Songs Can't Quite Save It

"GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS"

(Fox)

"Entire production conceived, directed and staged by George White."
Story by: George White and Sam Shipman.
Screen Play.....William Conselman
Dialogue .....Joseph Cunningham
Musical numbers directed by: Harry Lachman.
Story Direction.....Thornton Freeland
Dance Direction.....Georgie Hale
Music and Lyrics: Ray Henderson, Irving Caesar and Jack Yellen.
Art Director.....William Darling
Photography: Lee Garmes and George Schneiderman.
Cast: Rudy Vallee, Jimmy Durante, Alice Faye, Adrienne Ames, Cliff Edwards, Gregory Ratoff, Warren Hymer and George White.

"George White's Scandals" is a curious mixture of a number of things that don't seem to get along very well together.

Lavish settings and average dance routines; a good cast and a knock-kneed story; grand, catchy music and songs, and heavy, dull vulgarity.

Well, it cost a lot of money—and the audiences all over the country will have to be much more enthusiastic about the picture than was the preview audience for it to make any money.

The picture leans, fortunately, upon a version of the George White Scandals seen yearly at the Apollo Theatre in New York. It is interrupted every now and then by a pale, wan backstage story that bobs up continuously but not effectively. The film has the tendency to lift an audience into quite a bit of excitement over a particularly good song, or musical episode, and then drop it with a cold thud.

The film offers two bright and shining surprises in the way of players. Cliff Edwards never did a better job in his life, and Alice Faye seems a charming and important discovery. The other bright moments in the picture are three songs which will set the nation humming—"Every Time You Hold My Hand," "Nasty Man" and "So Nice." These are distinct hits.

One of the funniest sequences in the whole thing is Cliff Edwards singing "Six Women," a take-off—and a hilarious one—on Charles Laughton in "Henry the Eighth."

Jimmy Durante is funny; Rudy Vallee is better than was thought possible; Gregory Ratoff is amusing as a salesman; Adrienne Ames has a heavy role and George White dodges in and out every now and then.

Ray Henderson, Irving Caeser and Jack Yellen can take any number of bows for the three swell songs; William Darling can bow right along with them for his art direction; Lee Garmes and George Schneiderman photographed the whole thing beautifully, and Thornton Freeland directed the story part of it. Harry Lachman capably handled the musical numbers. William Conselman did the screen play.

Kill MGM Rumor

Hollywood heard a wild rumor late yesterday that Walter Wanger, Harry Rapf and John Considine had resigned from MGM in a shake-up brought on by Nick Schenck's visit. L. B. Mayer killed it quickly with the statement that not only was no shake-up planned during Schenck's visit, but that the latter was very happy over present studio conditions.

'Honor of West' Is Different Western

"HONOR OF THE WEST"

(Universal-Ken Maynard)

Direction .....Alan James
Story, Screen Play and Dialogue—Nate Gatzert
Art Direction.....Ralph Berger
Photography .....Ted McCord
Cast: Ken Maynard, Cecelia Parker, Fred Kohler, Frank Hagney, Jack Rockwell, Jim Marcus, Al Smith, Eddie Barnes, Franklyn Farnum.

Ken Maynard does double duty in "Honor of the West." He plays the hero and a menace as well in a dual role. For good measure there is a whole rabble of villains, a magnificent hideaway in the mountains, Cecelia Parker, dynamite and Tarzan the horse.

The result is shrieks of delight from children in the audience.

Maynard plays a strapping sheriff. He also plays the sheriff's twin brother, a cringing weakling who falls in with the nefarious schemes of Fred Kohler and gang to steal the money. Kohler has a mountain all fixed up with swinging doors of rock and even an organ.

There is something new in fights when Maynard and Kohler mix while the girl plays the organ frantically to cover the noise.

Nate Gatzert has turned in a good tale for the youngsters. He wrote story, screen play and dialogue. Alan James takes credit for direction which keeps thinks moving.

Something just a little bit different in horse operas.

But despite all these assets, the picture will not have the wide appeal that some of the late musicals have. Its consistent vulgarity, the dullness and thinness of the interpolated story, and two or three songs that fail to register do it no end of harm. The dance routines offer nothing new. Occasional scenes will be remembered, but the thing as a whole is disappointing.

While George White has gotten out a spectacular and lavish revue, he has failed to be very original about it. The most striking things in the production are certain very clever technical tricks which are unusually effective.

Exhibitors can hardly fail to drag in the customers to see George White Scandals on the screen, but the customers will do a little hesitating about recommending the show . . . especially to women and children.

Healy-Pendleton High Spots of Pic

"LAZY RIVER"

(MGM)

Direction .....George B. Seitz
Original Play.....Lea David Freeman
Screen Play.....Lucien Hubbard
Photography .....Gregg Toland
Cast: Jean Parker, Robert Young, C. Henry Gordon, Ted Healy, Nat Pendleton, Ruth Channing, Irene Franklin, Maude Eburne, Raymond Hatton, Joseph Cawthorn, Erville Alderson.

Possibly MGM intended this as an answer to critics who protest against polite and sophisticated drawing-room dramas. Surely "Lazy River" harks back to the good old days of mellow mellerdrammer and contains all of the plot formulas of an earlier era.

There is the foreclosure of the mortgage, the last minute staving off of disaster by the handsome stranger, his love for the simple country Miss, his confession that he is not free to love her because of an indiscreet marriage in his youth, the unexpected arrival of his wife (looking for all the world like Sadie Thompson), the deep-dyed villain who smuggles Chinamen and who shanghais our hero, the opportune rescue by a revenue cutter (what's happened to the Marines?) and, of course, the they-lived-happily-ever-after finale. All of this —and more—has been laid against a background of Louisiana shrimp fishing, but the unique locale does not hide the dish they are serving us. It is still hash, although masquerading as a shrimp cocktail.

Emerging with the individual laurels for the cast are Ted Healy and Nat Pendleton, playing a couple of none-too-bright crook pals of the hero, and Irene Franklin as the camp cook. To them falls the assignment of keeping the plot from taking itself too seriously. They do it well, if rowdily. There are at least two references to parts of equine anatomy.

Robert Young appears to the best possible advantage as our hero and Jean Parker is acceptable as Sarah of the Southern Bayous. She would have done better if not made to talk and made up to look like a Park Avenue debutante. Maude Eburne, Joseph Cawthorn, Raymond Hatton and Erville Alderson handle smaller roles capably. C. Henry Gordon is a bit hard to swallow as the half-caste villain. Ruth Channing does her moment pleasantly.

A good deal of directorial skill and production values have been lavished on the picture, but no amount can cover the basic story familiarity. The only surprises the script contains are that it would dare utilize so many tried and once-true situations.

Delay 'Villa' Shots

Delayed by additional script work, the new scenes for "Viva Villa" at MGM failed to get before the cameras yesterday. David Selznick has rushed Howard Emmett Rogers and James K. McGuinness in to do extra script work in hopes of getting started Monday.

Brent-Warner Trial Technical Battle

George Brent's difficulties with Warners were aired yesterday before Superior Court Judge Walter S. Gates in the opening of the trial of Brent's action against the picture company for $1,425 in salary claimed due him at the rate of $450 per week.

Player rejected a role in "Mandalay," asserting it would injure and degrade him, and was suspended. His option was exercised November 8. He claims he reported for work every day but received no assignment until he walked December 18. Hearing continues.

Plan Sound Version 'McFadden's Flats'

Charles R. Rogers is planning to make a talkie version of "McFadden's Flats" as one of the four remaining pictures on his Paramount contract. He is negotiating at present for the talkie rights.

The picture was made as a silent in 1927 with Charlie Murray in the top spot by the producing firm of Charles R. Rogers, Eph Asher and Edward Small.

Furthman 'Sandino' Yarn Hot at MGM

Charles Furthman has a story up with MGM based on the life of Sandino, Nicaraguan hero recently assassinated, that may work out as a sequel to "Viva Villa" at that studio.

Furthman, on newspaper ventures, became well acquainted with Sandino in Nicaragua in 1928, and when the Latin chieftain visited Los Angeles in 1933 he was a guest of the writer's. The story, in work for a long time, has peculiarly just come up for consideration coincident with the assassination which has restored Sandino to the front pages.

Thalberg Angels a Play

D. A. Doran's first play for his Group Theatre, "Gentlewoman," will be backed by Irving Thalberg with the idea of buying it for a Norma Shearer vehicle. Doran leaves for the east Saturday.

Another for Swanson

Radio yesterday assigned the third Wheeler and Woolsey untitled feature to H. N. Swanson's production wing. Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby are on the script and the music.

The BOOK WORLD

Experimental Cinema Rouses Reviewer's Ire

The Experimental Cinema makes another appearance after nearly a year of apparent inactivity. Inasmuch as the magazine has the weight and importance of any book dealing with Hollywood, or any other subject for that matter, it is reviewed here.

Rather, it is not reviewed. It is merely pointed at with a maximum of respect and a minimum of interest. Experimental Cinema is edited by a group of men who have nothing in common with Hollywood; who believe that they have everything in common with art, and who have telescoped their vision into such a narrow and concentrated beam of light that the magazine is practically useless except as an instrument with which to stir up argument.

This issue is almost entirely devoted to a bitter defense of "Que Viva Mexico!" and a still more bitter attack upon Upton Sinclair and his wife for "their mutilation of Eisenstein's original film." They also print the entire scenario of the picture.

The balance of the magazine is devoted to loud squawks, which are nonetheless barbed because they are "high-brow," about anything and anybody connected with Hollywood . . . and the capitalists. Their review of "The Bowery" is typical: "Unseen are the hungry derelicts in this section, wandering brokers, homeless, products of a ruthless capitalism. We are shown beer barons and gangsters enjoying privileges with women and politicians. Hollywood knows what it is doing when it attempts to keep reality from the masses and gives them instead 'entertainment'—by escape to the past."

They also offer in this issue the "first of a series of comparative shots dealing with the American scene," showing, on one page two stills—one called "The Bowery as Hollywood Sees It. Still from 'The Bowery,' an MGM film," and the other, "The Bowery as it actually is," showing a line of hungry, jobless men. The fact that the story of "The Bowery" is laid a number of years ago, that the actors in the still are in old-time costumes, that scene shown is the interior of a saloon, that their comparative still is a curbing and represents a 1934 scene, and that MGM did NOT make the film, evidently did not occur to them. Incidentally, the Gotham Book Mart publishes the magazine.

Of much more interest, possibly, than all this is a news item of the week . . . that President Roosevelt is somehow finding time to write a new book, called "On Our Way," which will be published by John Day Company. He writes it in his "spare time," and on Saturday afternoons.

This week has been a humdinger for books. In one day alone there were more than twenty titles released. Mysteries were conspicuous by their absence.

Following are reviews of some of the more important:

"Falling Star"

Author .....Vicki Baum
Publisher .....Doubleday, Doran

All the books written so far on Hollywood are topped by Vicki Baum's latest novel, "Falling Star."

Starting at the peak of Donka Morescu's career as a star in the silent films, it traces her tragic path through her eclipse when the talkies come, her successful fight to regain her position, the sorrow that love caused, and her final, resigned slipping into bit parts.

Miss Baum has accompanied her highly original and distinctive plot with an authentic background, and her book is definitely impressive.

"City Harvest"

Author....Margaret Cheney Dawson
Publisher ..... Macmillan

Perhaps if Mrs. Dawson had cultivated more restraint in writing and went a little deeper into cultivating her characters, her "City Harvest" would carry more weight.

As it is, it is merely another book and its theme is a plea for the old-time faithful-till-death-do-us-part marriages.

Her pictures of New York, however, and her description of a New Year's party are works of art.

"The Life of Hans Christian Andersen"

Author .....Signe Toksvig
Publisher .....Harcourt, Brace

This is one of the remarkable biographies of the year, written by a woman who loves the great story teller enough to weave tears into her words and who understands him well enough to laugh gently at him.

Andersen's life is reflected in his fairy tales. His father was a poor cobbler and his mother, who was fifteen years older than her husband, believed explicitly in witch doctors. His grandfather was insane and went about the city singing, his brow wreathed in flowers. Young Hans grew up to be a dark, mysterious child, who played with dolls and believed that angels talked to him at night.

He made attempt after attempt to go on the stage; he called on the leading artistic and intellectual lights of Copenhagen and startled them by his queer talk; he wept furiously at every peak or valley in his life; he was feted by kings and princes, and died in profound disappointment that the world liked his fairy tales better than it liked his plays and novels.

Miss Toksvig is a Dane who married an Irishman in America. Her book is a terribly moving and dramatic masterpiece.

"The Lincoln Stories"

Author .....Honore Morrow
Publisher .....Wm. Morrow & Co.

Lincoln enthusiasts and collectors should have this new volume, in which are gathered "Dearer Than All," "Benefits Forgot," and "The Lost Speech of Abraham Lincoln."

The stories are kindly and gay and sad.

"Julia Newberry's Sketch Book, or The Life of Two Future Old Maids"

Publisher ..... Norton

This is a companion book to "Julia Newbery's Diary," which was published last spring and which tickled the sophisticates so much. This second volume contains many drawings by Julia and some pointed, quaint comments on how to live, how to write, and how to "be somebody." The two future old maids were herself, 14, and her cousin, Minnie Clapp, 12.

It is a charming thing.

"All Trivia"

Author.....Logan Pearsall Smith
Publisher .....Harcourt, Brace

Here is a book to gather quietly to yourself and sneak off where you will not be disturbed.

Mr. Smith writes curious little stories—fables, almost — as innocent-looking at first glance as a sparrow. At second glance the sparrow turns into a mocking bird and you find yourself, with humanity in general, at the receiving end of rapier-witted, humorous criticism.

Mr. Smith writes with intricate, cob-webby beauty, and his book is a multi-faceted gem.

"Honest John Adams"

Author .....Gilbert Chinard
Publisher .....Little, Brown & Co.

Another really fine American historical biography has been written by Prof. Chinard, who has gone to no end of pains to run down everything known about John Adams and present the data in a scholarly, interesting volume.

The book is not as long as it might have been had the author included a detailed, comprehensive account of Adams' activities, but it is a penetrating analysis of his character.

"The Prodigal Father"

Author .....Richard Church
Publisher ..... Day

Richard Church has written a book that borders on the pathological and fails to be enlivened by one little spark of humor.

It's all about a happy-go-lucky musician, George Cromwell, who is married to a religious invalid. Her son, Robert, is completely controlled by her religious mania and is a victim of a devastating mother-complex. The two unite themselves against the husband and father.

"The World Is Yours"

Author .....G. B. Lancaster
Publisher .....Appleton-Century

The locale of this novel is the Yukon of the 1920's, when the boom days were over and the cold, white loneliness of the place was more emphasized.

It is the story of Kirk Regard who betrays the wife of a Swedish trapper, shoots the trapper and is enabled, because of a heavy snow storm, to cover up all tracks of his crime. But he can't cover up the tracks in his mind.

It is Tamsin MacDonald, the courageous, loyal girl who loves him, who finally persuades Kirk to take the step that will ease his conscience.

"A Man's Way"

Author .....Muriel Hine
Publisher ..... Appleton-Century

This is the story of a rich, energetic society woman who marries Clyde Martyn, a successful novelist who is in poor health and who has not the time or disposition for parties, hunting and playing.

Unfortunate man! Unable to keep up with his wife, he incurred first her displeasure and then her hatred.

The book is a rather good, but unimportant, study of a woman's selfishness and a man's weakness.

"The Flowering Thorn"

Author .....Margery Sharp
Publisher ..... Putnam

Just because an attractive young man failed to fall head over heels in love with her, Lesley Frewen deserts her smart social set, adopts a child and moves out into the country.

Purified by the clean English air and the singing of birds, Lesley makes the break with her society friends even deeper by inviting them to visit her in the country and then watching their behavior which, if it wasn't quite up to standard in the city, certainly has no place in the quiet, wholesome country.

Take it or leave it.

GOSSIP OF AUTHORS

Lewis Mumford has just finished his new book, "Technics and Civilization," which Harcourt, Brace will publish in April.

The Grosset and Dunlap edition of Faith Compton Mackenzie's "The Sibyl of the North," the story of Queen Christina, features a picture of Greta Garbo on the jacket.

A poetry contest for poems of twenty lines or less (first and second prize $15) is announced by the North Carolina Poetry Review, Gastonia, North Carolina.

Two books titled "Kaleidoscope" will be published soon. One is written by Stefan Zweig and the other by A. R. Burr. Last year the favorite title was "Mischief." Two books of that name were published within a few days of one another.

The alley cat is immortalized. Baron Ireland, famous for his lyrics in praise of his lowly cat, has made a book of his poems, "Our Cat," which will be published in the fall by Doubleday, Doran.

The story of Bertrand du Guesclin, the famous brigand who led the brigands out of France, dethroned a King of Spain, was a Robin Hood to the poor, and once paid his henchmen from his own pocket so that they would not loot a poor village, has been written by M. Coryn. The book, "The Black Eagle," is published by Funk and Wagnalls.

"The Murder of the Honest Broker," by Willoughby Sharp, who recently broke his leg while boarding his yacht in Bermuda, will be published soon by Claude Kendall.

Labor Pow-Wow Here

Federation of Musicians, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the International Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers. Producing companies are MGM, Fox, Universal, Warner Brothers, First National, Paramount and Radio.

Among the presidents who are expected, unless plans are changed, will be William C. Elliott, of IATSE; Joseph Weber, Musicians; L. P. Lindelof, Painters. Present plans call for H. P. Brigaerts, International vice president of the IBEW, to represent that organization, and Abe Muir, vice president of the carpenters, to represent them.

Among the studio representatives slated to sit in at the discussion will be Nicholas Schenck, now here; Sidney Kent, who is due here shortly; Pat Casey, Al Berres, B. B. Kahane, who is due back in time for the confab, as well as special representatives from the various locals.

Probability is that rehash of late strike may come up at the parley with uncovering of workings at the time that may prove sensational news. It is understood that while conference is slated for Hollywood, there is some effort being made in some quarters to have it shifted at last minute to New York.

Coming: A Fourth Year of

ACHIEVEMENT

SINCE Eastman Super-sensitive Panchromatic Negative was introduced early in 1931, its revolutionary qualities have fulfilled every hope and prediction of its sponsors. It has helped cameramen and producers so tremendously . . . it has affected the motion picture art so profoundly . . . it has contributed to so many cinematic triumphs, that a further prediction can now be made: In its fourth year, as heretofore, this Eastman film will be an important factor in the most conspicuous motion picture achievements. RECEIVERS ON WAY OUT

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

●IT would certainly not be ethical for anyone connected with the Reporter to comment on the individual opinions expressed in the ballot received so far in the Reporter Award Contest.

But there are a few definite trends on which we feel we may speak without violating any of the confidences that a voter has a right to expect.

The two that stick in our minds, after a week-end chance to study ballots, are these:

Writers are willing and anxious to vote for a good piece of work by another writer;

Players are willing and anxious to vote for a good piece of work by another player.

Producers, executives, and "what-have-you" with a few cheerful exceptions, vote for THEIR OWN COMPANY'S product with a childlike insufferable gall.

Really, it would be a joke if it were not so serious.

Being a fellow who has to live by "putting one word after another"—we probably have quarreled with writers more than with any other branch of the business in our occasional editorial quarrels.

But gol durn it, if those writers, in their votes didn't give us cause to cheer. They prove themselves sufficiently CRAFTSMEN to make every ballot an intelligent expression of opinion from an intelligent person. They don't all agree—gosh, no!—but their votes are intelligent, no touch of professional jealousy, personal idiosyncrasies, and petty log-rolling.

The same goes for the players. We hope the little girl will forgive us for publishing her vote, but we think you'd get the idea from Gloria Stuart's ballot on the best acting performance.

Gloria wrote: "Katharine Hepburn, that's all."

Doesn't that give you a kick?

It would be a shame if the producers, executives and the others we might mention can't measure up in broadmindedness to the writers and players. It would be worse than that—a pretty bad slant on the picture industry. Either that, or, a great boost for writers and actors.

Good Legit Week

New York.—It looks like a good week for the legit on Broadway. "Ragged Army" comes to the Selwyn Monday, "When in Rome" Tuesday at the 49th St. theatre, and "Yellow Jack" to the Martin Beck on Thursday.

Roach Suspends on 'Babes in Toyland'

Hal Roach has suspended production on the musical fantasy "Babes in Toyland" which he planned to put into work the first part of March.

The picture was originally intended as a co-starring vehicle for Oliver Hardy and Stan Laurel, and with the latter out of the picture for the time being, Roach is waiting until Laurel can be brought back to the fold. No writers are working on the script at present.

George Creel a Mystery

George Creel is becoming almost as elusive as Margaret Sullavan. On definite "announcements" Creel was expected in town each day last week. This morning's news is "some day this week." Meanwhile Judge Ben Lindsay is twiddling his thumbs and wondering just what his authority is.

Holman Chaperons Party

Along with a few stories and scripts Russell Holman arrives in Hollywood with Marion Morris, from the original cast of "Double Door"; Anne Revere, who will be featured in the same picture, and Jeff Lazarus, on publicity bent.

Zasu on Way Home

New York.—Zasu Pitts spent six days with the doctors on a sinus operation and turned right around and started back for the Coast.

Pic Business Likely To Stage First Miracle Of Recovery; Para. and RKO Lead the Way

New York.—It begins to look as though the motion picture industry will lead the parade in showing the miracles the "New Deal" has done for American business. Those on the inside say that it will not be more than a month before Paramount is discharged from receivership, and the latest RKO report gives every indication that this organization is also on its way to resume standing with companies unshadowed by the word "Receiver."

Fox alone has the Wall Street forecasters uncertain. Sidney Kent put over a great deal when he got the bondholders and creditors to accept new paper for their debts, but the new deal was based largely on expectancy of money-making pictures to

Warren William Has Idea for Relief Fund

Warren William has had an idea that has the Motion Picture Relief Fund excited. William suggests the issuance of a special three-cent stamp which all autograph collectors would have to use before getting their signatures.

Frank Bauer and M. C. Levee have been appointed a committee to report on the proposal.

Laemmle Jr. on the Job

Junior Laemmle arrived Saturday, and the expectation is a buzz of activity at the Universal lot starting tomorrow. It is also understood that Junior has a couple of plays and players up his sleeve to announce in the course of the week.

Cold Water Dose For Extras' Merger

Indications are that the various "extra" organizations will not be able to gettogether in one big, happy family, as was suggested last week by Allan Garcia, head of Supporting and Extra Players.

Those on the inside say that the four main groups will never get together due to jealousies, fear of losing identity, suspicions and desire of some to retain the power. Garcia, who

Long Termer at Fox For Helen Twelvetrees

Helen Twelvetrees was signed by Fox to a long term contract Saturday on the strength of her work in "All Men Are Enemies." Her first picture on her new contract will be the lead opposite Spencer Tracy in the Rothstein story, "Now I'll Tell." The William Hawks agency negotiated the deal.

Renew Seymour's Ticket

Warners has signed and sealed a new production ticket with James Seymour, contract going into effect immediately while the old paper, slated to expire in May, has been discarded. Seymour's associate producer deal gives him a tilt on a five-year arrangement with yearly options.

Play Mortality Great

New York.—The plays on their way to Cain's storehouse this week are "Without End," which had been at the Henry Miller theatre; "Queer People," at the National; "Legal Murder," at the President; and "By Your Leave," at the Ethel Barrymore.

Loew's Declares Usual Div

New York.—Loew's, Inc. has declared its regular quarterly dividend of twenty-five cents a share on the common stock, payable March 31 to stockholders of record on March 15.

CLIMAX IN SHEEHAN-WHITE 'SCANDALS' ROW REACHED

The Fox production of George White's "Scandals" spent a hectic week-end, as a result of a battle that has been on between White and Winfield R. Sheehan since the completion of the picture.

White previewed the version that he liked in Santa Ana Friday night, and a recut edition of that version in San Diego Saturday night. But, meanwhile, a Sheehan version of the same picture was in Oakland, California, for a Saturday night preview. Del Monte, Montecito and Riverside have not been heard from yet.

The battle reaches its climax at the studio today when both forces return with their individual preview reports.

White's contract specifies that he is the boss of his own picture. Sheehan interprets that up until the time the picture is ready to be cut and

THE LOW DOWN

Guess what studio head it is who seemed very willing when approached by the women selling tickets for the El Nido Camp benefit until he recalled it was to be held at the Vendome, then practically said, "Nothing doing. Even for CHARITY I won't help anything that fellow Wilkerson is connected with."

Hollywood, which has been pediculous with parties for over a week, reached its party-height over the week-end with two or more soirees every day. The Darryl Zanucks took over the Colony Club Friday night for a huge to-do for Aden Roark, the Lyn Howards and other famous mallet-wielders. Connie Bennett and Irene Selznick were among the smartest dressed women present and others who had fun included Gilbert Roland, the Lucien Hubbards, Bess Meredyth, the Sidney Lanfields, the Bill Goetzes, the Raoul Walshes, Virginia Bruce, Count Carpegna, Laddie Sanford and Mary Duncan, Ad Schulberg and many more.

The Irving Thalbergs and the Freddie Frelinghuysens soireed Saturday night and the Frelinghuysens quite naturally and easily accomplished a "family picnic" which many another hostess might not have dared to attempt. We mean that Gary Cooper, Sandra Shaw, Lupe Velez, Countess di Frasso, Johnny Weissmuller and others all dined and chatted quite happily and peacefully together—in fact, the party was so good that it lasted until dawn!

When we think of some of the clucks that are handed picture contracts these days—it just doesn't seem right that one of Broadway's young and better actresses should be next to starvation right on our doorsteps! The girl, who created a sensation when she played in "Street Scene" on the stage, came here on the advice of an agent several weeks ago. At the moment she is so broke and desperate that she has had to budget herself down to thirty-five cents a day—which is just what she is living on at the moment!

The Paramount stujo was in an uproar yesterday because the news and camera guys hadn't been tipped off or just hadn't gotten wise to the fact that Cary Grant and Virginia Cherrill were alighting from the train at Pasadena instead of Los Angeles. Consequently there were a lot of disappointed news-hounds at the L. A. station. And there was only one photographer at the Pasadena depot to click Cary and Virginia—and guess who the photographer was! Yeah—it was Fink—good ole Fink!

New York REVIEWS

"CAROLINA"

Fox prod.; director, Henry King; writers, Paul Green, Reginald Berkeley.

Music Hall Theatre

World-Telegram: Told leisurely, and with great charm and simplicity, "Carolina" is not the sort of entertainment that will appeal to movie audiences who like blood-curdling, fast-moving melodrama. But for those who like literate and civilized fables, told simply and honestly and played extremely well by expert mummers—particularly, Lionel Barrymore, and Janet Gaynor, this "Carolina" should be eminently satisfying entertainment.

Herald-Tribune: There is a definite pictorial charm to the settings and there is the touching characterization offered by Miss Gaynor. There are helpful performances, too, by Miss Crosman, Robert Young and Mona Barrie, while Stepin Fetchit might have been funny if one could have heard him. But to me, "Carolina" lacked the proper dramatic forcefulness and insight.

Times: Henry King gives his work excellent timing and eminently satisfactory camera technique. There is no straining for effect, no extravagantly depicted incidents, which one might expect in the filming of such a tale, and the settings are realistic.

Journal: The picture is told with a slow and gentle charm. The Southern atmosphere is convincing and Negro songs help to heighten the illusion. Miss Gaynor is an appealing little heroine and Young is attractive as the boy.

News: Fox Films not only have done right by Janet Gaynor in having assigned her to the role of Joanna in "Carolina" but they have also not slighted Paul Green's play, "The House of Connelly" on which the picture is based, by having given Henry King a free hand in directing it as he did.

American: The picture is distinguished by the pictorial excellence of Mr. King's direction. Janet Gaynor stirs admiration and affection in the heart with one of the best of her portrayals in a role that suits her perfectly. Mr. King has made a sensitive production with some exquisite camera work, especially in a scene which flashes back to the days of the glory of "The House of Connelly."

Mirror: The plot moves briskly to a stirring climax. A happy ending is plausible and gratifying. Miss Gaynor's many fans may well be proud of "Carolina." She will impress a new and more adult audience in this fine film.

Post: It is one of the best performances that Miss Gaynor has given on the screen, a quiet and natural piece of acting which she sustains even through some of the more trying phases of the picture. It is a slim unpretentious story, depending for its emotional quality on character and atmosphere. The latter is achieved in a highly credible degree by the astute and sensitive direction of Henry King.

Sun: The last reel is as botched a performance as ever scenario writer wished upon an otherwise fine script. Its commonplace happy ending must have been invented by the same person who thought up the title "Carolina" in the hope that Janet Gaynor fans might think it another "Adorable."

Woolf Writing Material For Swanson Personals

Edgar Allan Woolf is writing a musical interlude for Gloria Swanson to appear in on her personal appearance tour in the east.

Earl Oxford, MGM contract player, will sing two numbers with Miss Swanson in her skit.

Eldridge First 'Dark Tower'

Col. and Schary Settle Up

Columbia has granted Dore Schary a release on his original story, "Murder in G Minor," returning the property to the writer in lieu of a cash settlement on his recent one-picture ticket with the company which was abrogated.

Kirkland in 'Little Man'

Muriel Kirkland, who had the top spot in the stage version locally of "Sailor Beware," goes back into pictures in a featured role in "Little Man, What Now?" at Universal.

previewed. The present battle is what to cut and what to leave in, with both holding out for different versions of the musical.

Fundamentally both versions are the same, but the difference lies in the complete elimination of a sequence here or there, or the treatment and the length of other episodes.

Fox people are laying the odds that White wins his battle, and if this is the case the silence that has existed between himself and Sheehan for the past few weeks will be made permanent.

Trades Commission Eyes 'Indorsements'

Washington.—A decision that may be the forerunner of many other drastic actions on "Hollywood indorsements" was reached by the Federal Trades Commission Saturday.

The commission issued a "cease and desist" order in the case of a company understood to be called the "Fairest Cosmetics" for using the words "created in Hollywood" to describe its products, and also using the photo of well known screen artistes in a manner which implied that they had indorsed the product.

Columbia in a Sweat Over Stories for Carole Lombard

Columbia has two writing teams at work on Carole Lombard pictures. First to go will be an untitled one by Roland Pertwee and Prescott Chaplin, the second, also nameless, being scripted by Edmond North and James Gow. Robert North is supervising both.

PARA'S 'WHARF ANGEL' GOOD IDEA GONE WRONG

Theme Doesn't Get Break It Deserves

"WHARF ANGEL"
Paramount

Directors: William Cameron Menzies and George Somnes.
Author .....Frederick Schlick
Adaptors: Samuel Hoffenstein and Frank Partos.
Art Directors: Hans Dreier and John Goodman.
Photographer .....Victor Milner
Cast: Victor McLaglen, Dorothy Dell, Preston Foster, Alison Skipworth, David Landau, John Rogers, Mischa Auer, James Burke, Alfred Delcambre, Frank Sheridan, Don Wilson, John Northpole and Max Wagner.

Brotherly love on wharves of the San Francisco water-front; regeneration of street-walkers and traitorous sailors; sob-stuff set to oaths; the Christ-spirit in a stoke hole . . . well, there must have been an idea to start with when Paramount began to make "Wharf Angel," alias "The Man Who Broke His Heart."

But the idea is pretty well buried in the finished picture under soot, ashes and sweat.

"Wharf Angel" is supposed to be one of those two-fisted pictures where all the men drink out of bottles, hurl tables and chairs around dives, and stand together in beautiful, sneering, hairy strength against the cops . . and where the women love them for it.

The picture is outstanding for photography, atmosphere and color, but no audience will forgive the lack of a convincing story or strong direction.

Preston Foster is Como, who preaches tolerance and love and understanding. He falls in love with Dorothy Dell who plays a girl who hangs around Alison Skipworth's dive. Victor McLaglen is a stoker on a vessel who helps Como escape the cops, and who is also in love with the girl. The two men become fast, firm friends, telling each other about their girls and never dreaming that they are both talking about the same one.

The "big moment" of the picture comes when McLaglen finds out that the girl is in love with Foster, and he turns Foster over to the police for the $1000 reward.

Oh, well . . . the film is definitely and thoroughly a washout, with nothing in it to appeal to any type of audience.

McLaglen and Foster both do as well as they can with their roles and with the direction, and Dorothy Dell manages to get into the spirit of the thing. Given a part that will not be such a strain to an audience's credulity, Miss Dell would fare much better. Alison Skipworth turns in a good job as old Mother Bright, and David Landau is good as a cop.

William Cameron Menzies and George Somnes directed; the original story was by Frederick Schlick, and Samuel Hoffenstein and Frank Partos did the adaptation. The art directors, Hans Dreier and John Goodman, dressed the picture with more care than it deserved, and, as said before, the photography, by Victor Milner, is decidedly the best element in the entire thing.

Better make a wide path around this one. It's not for your house, or yours, or yours . . .

Actors Will Gag

Maybe it's a gag—but in the interests of complete reporting we must chronicle the fact that M. C. Levee and Lou Ostrow are squabbling over one day's work for George Stone. It appears that George, kibitzing on a Monogram set, walked through a scene, and now Mike is sending a bill for the day's work.

'No Funny Business' Is Not So Funny

"NO FUNNY BUSINESS"
(B.I.P.)

Directors .....John Stafford and W. Victor Harkway
Author .....Dorothy Hope
Photographer .....Walter Blakeley
Cast: Gertrude Lawrence, Laurence Olivier, Jill Esmond, Edmond Breon, Gibb McLaughlin.

There is plenty of funny business in the English film "No Funny Business," but unfortunately it is directed with such lethargy and aimlessness that most of the kick is taken out of the story.

The plot is essentially amusing and is based on a pure comedy angle that, handled with more spirit, could make a swell, light farce. As it was previewed here it is incredibly slow and even, at times, irritating.

The story is this: The Potterton Bureau is something new in detective agencies. Its aim is to reconcile couples who are on the verge of divorce. It accomplishes this by supplying corespondents who meet the dissatisfied partner at a hotel and by "keep-it-clean" methods persuade him or her to go back to the wife or husband.

Edmond Breon and Gertrude Lawrence are a couple who think they see the parting of the ways. The agency sends Jill Esmond to meet Mr. Breon at a hotel in Cannes and show him the error of his ways, and it sends Laurence Olivier to the same hotel to meet Gertrude Lawrence and endeavor to reconcile her to her husband. They all miss the appointments, with the result that the two "detectives" are thrown together in the same suite, each thinking the other is the client.

The complications should have thrown the audience into hysterics; they fail to arouse much mirth.

Gertrude Lawrence wanders cheerfully through her role, singing one good song, from which the picture gets its title. Edmond Breon as her husband is delightful. Laurence Olivier is charming and ingratiating as the detective, and Jill Esmond is charming as the other agent.

Exhibitors should hope for nothing from this picture. Audiences will be intrigued by the beginning of the story, but will yawn consistently through the rest.

MGM Makes Shifts In South America

New York.—MGM has made changes in its South American personnel affecting six officials. Tom Hale has been appointed supervisor of sales in Chile and Peru, being transferred from Venezuela distribution. Joe Goltz, in charge of Peru sales, and George Suarez, in charge of Chilean distribution, have been assigned to sales in Argentina.

It's 'Rip Tide' Again

Many requests received by Irving Thalberg from exhibitors throughout the country caused the producer to change the title of the Norma Shearer starring vehicle from "Lady Mary's Lover" back to its original title, "Rip Tide."

Para. Signs Bickford

Charles Bickford was signed Saturday by Paramount for one of the top spots in "Little Miss Marker" with Adolphe Menjou, for the B. P. Schulberg unit. Alexander Hall will direct. The Bren and Orsatti office made the deal.

Foster Peeved at Fox

Preston Foster has asked Fox for a release from his long termer. Player's contention is the number of loan-outs he has been playing recently places him in a free-lance position without his enjoying the remuneration.

Lloyd and Radio Talk 'Mutiny' Deal

Frank Lloyd and Radio are talking back and forth on a deal which will have the director produce his "Mutiny on the Bounty" under the Radio trademark. This is the one picture he is permitted to do outside of his Fox ticket.

Wykoff and Helliott Hurt By Savage Lion and Bear

Alvin Wykoff, president of Camera Local 659 and cameraman on Mascot's serial of "The Lost Jungle," was badly mauled by a lion at the Sennett studio Saturday.

John Helliott, animal trainer and working in the same picture, was seriously clawed a little later in the day when his Himalayan bear jumped him. Helliott was treated first at the Hollywood receiving hospital and taken to the Hollywood hospital for major surgery.

Miles Joins Para. Pub. Staff in New Deal

With Frank Pope and Barney Hutchinson leaving the Paramount publicity department, Tom Baily has signed John Miles to fill Pope's spot and rearranged the line-up of other members to take over Hutchinson's duties. Len Boyd becomes planter, Rufus Blair handles national press contacts and Lance Heath is the new art director. Ken Whitmore left Saturday on a two weeks vacation.

Sound Boys Golf Winner

The sound department came out on top in the Warner golf tournament yesterday, Bob Wayne copping the J. L. Warner prize with a 79. Ed Farrell, of the cutting department, snagged the Bill Koenig offering for second place, with Cecil Meyers and Bud Flannigan coming next in line. Jack Ketchum was decorated with the booby for an honest 238.

Gable a Riot in N. Y.

New York.—Believe it or not, but they had to handle crowds at 7:30 in the morning at the Capitol Friday for the appearance of Clark Gable in person. The police spent the week-end handling the crowds, and the show has been rearranged to allow Gable to make six appearances a day.

Pic Interests Get Chance To Fight Radio Shows

New York.—The problem that is worrying New York picture theatre owners, free broadcasting shows sponsored by the big chains, will get an airing when all the Code Authorities convene in Washington on March 5. Both legit theatre and picture interests will be allowed to voice their objections then.

Dressler and Robson to Co-star in MGM's 'Gram'

MGM will co-star Marie Dressler and May Robson in the Kathleen Norris story "Gram" which will be produced by Harry Rapf. Edgar Allan Woolf is writing the screen adaptation of this yarn.

Gladys Unger on 'U' Tag

Stanley Bergerman signed Gladys Unger Saturday to shape up the screen play for his next Universal filmusical, "Here's to Love."

Roger Pryor is scheduled for the ace assignment. Sig Herzog and Jay Gorney are looking after the music and lyrics.

Educ. Develops New Process for Stills

A new way to shoot trick stills without having to go to any great extra expense in paraphernalia or special printing has been developed by Lon Young, Educational's west coast director of publicity and advertising.

A sheet of plate glass placed before the camera on an angle so as to reflect a scene offstage does the work. Camera picks up offstage scene while photographing the primary scene, thus giving a ghost-like double effect. Device was developed on the first Buster Keaton short.

Little Title, What Now?

The third title change in as many weeks was slapped on "Storm at Midnight" yesterday by Columbia, subject now being labeled "Voice in the Night." This replaces "Headed For Trouble," which was announced for the release handle on the Tim McCoy action feature.

Merger Goes Cold

went to Washington to fight the extra crowd at Code hearing, says he is not interested in personal aggrandizement, and doesn't care a hoot what the organization be called or whether he has any voice in it or not. Just wants to see the divided groups get together so they will have a stronger voice in forcing their demands.

Yesterday, however, members and some officers of the other three groups seemed colder than ever on the deal.

Receivers On Way Out

come. "Cavalcade's" foreign profits, particularly in England and not forgetting the change in the dollar's status, have helped a lot, but most of that money has been spent already on expensive Hollywood musicals, and the answer now awaits on how the public accepts those offerings.

But in Paramount and Radio the situation is different. Here the insiders give you the most surprising picture of optimism.

If it were not for the red-tape involved in Paramount's ownership of various theatre properties, it seems pretty clear that this company would be out of the stigma of "bankruptcy" now. And the insiders feel that the red tape is going to be unwound within the next month or so and leave the company on an even keel. Adolph Zukor's harmonizing influence is being given credit for a large part of this result, but with a goodly share going to Emanuel Cohen for the balance he has kept between production costs and possible box office intake.

The Radio picture is also interesting. The annual report just issued shows a net loss of $582,094, but before you gasp at the word "loss" you get the next statement: "This compares with a loss of $1,133,586 for 1932." Just a mere difference of about three quarters of a million—on the right side of the ledger.

The theatre end, Radio-Keith-Orpheum, shows a loss of $3,341,000 as compared with a loss for the year 1932 of $10,695,503. Quite a difference.

It seems impossible for a company showing a three million dollar loss to look hopefully towards a discharge from receivership, but David Sarnoff felt so good over the report that in interviews here he was willing to hazard the prophecy that a continuance of present business would indicate an early discharge from bankruptcy. It is thought that Radio may profit from the method that has been used by Paramount to unwind its theatre commitments. The studio situation is okay and the higher-ups are giving credit here, as in the Paramount position it goes to Manny Cohen, to B. B. Kahane and Frank O'Heron for the dollar watching that has helped to bring the sun from behind the clouds.

Felix to Handle Dances On MGM's 'Student Tour'

Seymour Felix has returned to the MGM lot and will direct the musical numbers in "Student Tour," the Sam Marx original story, which will be produced by Monte Bell.

The cast of this picture will include the younger players on the lot such as Shirley Ross, Earl Oxford, Ruth Channing and Linda Parker.

Warners Juggle Cast

Unable to hold off until Henry Stephenson and Robert Barrat finish prior assignments, Warners Saturday placed Halliwell Hobbes in the former's role and Donald Crisp in the latter's spot in "The Key."

Stephenson is at Radio in "Stingaree"; Barrat is in Warner's "Return of the Terror."

GOV'T BARES BIG DOUGH

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•LOOKS as if the Roosevelt administration means business in its attempted redistribution of the wealth of the nation. The first move in that direction is the publicizing of all the salaries and bonuses of the big wigs of every big industry.

Reports coming in from Washington, as this goes to press, indicate that the newshounds in the Capitol could not believe their ears when they were told that they were going to be given the entire list of salaries and bonuses. Pandemonium broke out in the press ranks, with most of the representatives trying to get stenographers (on a moment's notice) to take down the figures; going out into the halls pleading with the secretaries of Senators, Congressmen and others to give them a hand.

It looks as if the Government is going after the high salaries in the picture business with two guns and a rifle. But why this business? George Hill of the American Tobacco Company drew down over $1,000,000 in 1929 and Eugene Grace of Bethlehem Steel grabbed $1,635,753. No one picture individual drew such money.

Maybe the Government is sore because so many individuals in this business were paid over $500,000 in salaries and bonuses for their work. Maybe they believe that most of this dough was yanked from stockholders.

But make no mistake about it, there is hell to pay. If you don't think so you are wrong. The mere fact that Washington gave out those figures, right at this time, is plenty of indication that something is in the air—and that something is a redistribution of the wealth. If you have none of that big wealth you have little worry, but if you are up to your neck in chips you had better start counting them now, placing them away in neat piles for the rainy day and stormy weather.

Theatres Snowbound

New York.—At midnight it looks as though the theatres of New York and its suburbs are going to be buried beneath an avalanche of snow, so don't worry about this week's grosses. Marquees are top-heavy with snow, and the storm is still on.

Col. and Elissa Landi Call the Deal Off

Columbia and Elissa Landi came to the parting of the ways yesterday when the studio agreed to tear up the player's term ticket. Miss Landi felt she could advance more rapidly free lancing. She completed "Sisters Under the Skin" for the studio and was to have the lead in "The Party's Over" opposite Stuart Erwin under Walter Lang's direction. Studio has a complete cast on the latter picture, but must now find another feminine lead.

Helen Hayes To Do 'Mary' on Screen

Helen Hayes is scheduled to return to the screen in the picture version of the play she is now doing on Broadway, "Mary of Scotland," immediately after the Broadway run of the play.

MGM is reported to have the inside track on the screen rights to the play.

Para. Theatre Execs Meet

Jacksonville, Fla.—Much heavy conferencing here yesterday when the big shots of Paramount's theatre end met. Sam Dembow, Ralph Kohn, Frank Freeman and E. V. Richards participated.

Picture Business In Limelight As "Pitiless Publicity" Is Turned Loose In Washington

Washington.—With pitiless publicity the chief weapon, the Roosevelt administration yesterday took what observers here believe is the first step in a campaign eventually aimed at a redistribution of wealth. The Federal Trades Commission was the tool, and publication of its salary investigation report the action. It blew the lid off, and New York and Washington wires buzzed and burned all through the night.

While the report listed fabulous executive salaries and bonuses in many industries, the picture business seems certain to get the brunt of the head-

Cromwell Slated to Direct Next Hepburn

Radio has penciled John Cromwell in as the director of the next Katharine Hepburn picture, "Tudor Wench," after he finishes the Leslie Howard picture, "Of Human Bondage," which is now in work. Cromwell directed Miss Hepburn in her last picture, "Spitfire," for Radio.

Wampas to Kill Idea Of 'Baby' Broadcast

Proposal to broadcast the Wampas "Baby Star" selections via radio will be definitely discarded by the Wampas at a meeting tonight, it was learned on good authority yesterday.

Objections from Warners and Fox killed the idea, the publicity men's or-

Tahiti Locale for 'Treasure Island'

According to present plans on the MGM lot, "Treasure Island," the Robert Louis Stevenson novel, which will co-star Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, will be made on the Island of Tahiti. Victor Fleming, the director, has been shooting a few exteriors for the picture along the southern coast.

Gibney Scripts 'Adverse'

New York.—Warners are getting under way on that epic job of bringing "Anthony Adverse" to the screen. Sheridan Gibney is announced here to do the adaptation. Gibney, incidentally, has just completed a new play, "A Toast to Tarquin."

Shubert-Negri Call Quits

New York.—Lee Shubert and Pola Negri got together and decided to call it off. Shubert has made a settlement with the star, and the play in which she was to appear, "A Trip to Pressburg," has been shelved.

Dot Dell Gets Termer

On the strength of her performance in "Wharf Angel," Dorothy Dell was handed a new long term contract yesterday by Paramount and also the feminine lead in "The Great Magoo."

Evans Loses Tonsils

Madge Evans entered the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital yesterday and had her tonsils removed.

LAMBS CLUB BACKS MOVE TO STOP PLAYER IMPORTS

Washington.—The Lambs Club appeared at the brief hearing on the Dickstein bill, restricting the immigration of foreign players by placing them under the "contract labor" provision of the Immigration Act, and supported the bill.

Representative Samuel Kramer, of Los Angeles, is attempting to bring stars out here to aid the opposition to the bill, but so far has been balked by bad flying weather. It is thought the Hays organization may file a brief in opposition, but no signs of activity yet.

Esther Ralston Sues

Esther Ralston yesterday filed suit for divorce from George Webb in Superior Court through her attorney, A. Ronald Button, on the grounds of incompatibility. They were married in December, 1925, and separated last August.

Muni Due Tomorrow

New York REVIEWS

"LONG LOST FATHER"
RKO-Radio prod.; director, Ernest B. Schoedsack; writers, Dwight Taylor, G. B. Stern.
Roxy Theatre

Herald-Tribune: A good regulation program picture, without hitting the stride of Barrymore's more outstanding films. Has been interestingly put together and possesses deft comedy, but there is little substance to the piece. However, it is never dull.

News: An amusing film. It doesn't ring quite true and is handled in an artificial manner, but nevertheless it is amusing and interesting entertainment.

Journal: Expertly fashioned for the talents of John Barrymore. Suavely humorous here, he is provided with better-than-average dialogue, and puts it over with adroit effect. The picture is diverting program fare and pleasantly free from any overdose of sentiment that might have crept into such a story of paternal love and sacrifice.

American: A well cast smile-and-tear melodrama which is a cut or two above Hollywood's run-of-cargo productions in entertainment values. Director Schoedsack keeps his story moving.

World-Telegram: With nothing more to go upon than an artless personality and a flimsy idea, John Barrymore manages by neat work to make "Long Lost Father" an amiable and sufficiently light and attractive little photoplay.

Times: The story is often too wild and frothy. Ernest B. Schoedsack, whose forte is directing jungle films or those dealing with hardy adventure, is scarcely in his element in handling this combination of reckless levity and unconvincing seriousness. However, this film is worthy of attention if for no other reason than the excellent portrayals of all concerned.

Post: The picture version misses something of the depth and character drawing of the original work, yet withal it is a pleasant and well-oiled story, providing Mr. Barrymore with a number of opportunities to be, as only he can be, himself. Though the tale is slim, it is enlivened with a number of amusing and well-acted episodes. The dialogue is briskly to the point and the atmosphere is authentically dilapidated. Altogether, "Long Lost Father" is easy to swallow.

Sun: Instead of being a moving drama of father love, it is a comedy melodrama furbished with cheap laughs. John Barrymore, in a role that might originally have been written for him, gives as mechanical a performance as the rest of the cast. Too many wisecracks, too much easy sensationalism have lessened the dramatic values.

Ross Alexander Up For Tests at MGM

Ross Alexander, who was once out here under contract to Paramount, and his newly wedded wife, Anita Frael, arrived in Hollywood yesterday to make tests for MGM for a term contract. Miss Frael will be tested by Warners.

Alexander's last Broadway play was "The Party's Over."

Manners in 'Black Cat'

David Manners, just back from England, steps into the romantic lead in "The Black Cat" at Universal for his first picture. Edgar Ullmer directs, with Karloff and Bela Lugosi starred.

King Will Meg 'Chan'

Sol Wurtzel has selected Louis King to direct the next Charlie Chan production for Fox. Picture will star Walter Connolly when the commitment on the player goes through with Columbia during the next three weeks.

Patterson to Fox

Pat Patterson has resigned from the Warner theatre exploitation department. He will become a unit man at Fox.

Coogan Short To Be Finished on New Deal

Digging up an angel, I. A. Allen is putting through the completion of his Jackie Coogan short which got into a jam two months ago when another backer walked, leaving creditors whistling a $5,000 tune.

Creditors have agreed to accept a 25 percent payment on the claims on condition the balance is paid when the film is completed and set for release. Scoring and dubbing will wind it up, with a release then in prospect.

Ed Kennedy Renewed

proxy or in person at the election held February 18 at the Hollywood Woman's Club. More than a thousand names were in the list that voted, according to Secretary Kenneth Thomson.

Those chosen for the Agents Committee were Adolphe Menjou, Spencer Tracy and Berton Churchill. Those for the five-five committee were: Ann Harding, Ralph Morgan, James Cagney, Kenneth Thomson, Richard Tucker, Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery, Claude King, Mary Astor, Pat O'Brien and Paul Muni.

Brandt Claims Promises Broken

New York.—Emerging from a conference with Sol Rosenblatt yesterday, Harry Brandt, head of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, said "Our group will not sign the code because promises on the labor question made in Washington have not been kept, and Mr. Rosenblatt has shown by his attitude that he has no idea of seeing that they are kept."

This wrangle between the independent exhibitors and the NRA board is due to the local labor board having sided with Local 306 in maintaining the high operators' wage scale and forcing those theatre men to take the No. 306 men back in their booths.

Goldwyn Chorines Step Into Speaking Roles

Radio yesterday took its pick of the 150 girls whom Sam Goldwyn collected for musicals, signing six for straight dramatic roles in "Strictly Dynamite."

Stepping from the chorus to dramatic work are Jane Hamilton, Bonnie Bannon, Barbara Pepper, Dolores Casey, Jane Shadduck and Vivian Keefer.

Selwyn Works on Story

Edgar Selwyn is turning his directorial hand at MGM to writing and is working on an original idea with a view to shaping up a script to star Joan Crawford under his direction.

FILM EXECS' BIG SALARIES MADE PUBLIC IN CAPITOL

Figures of Boom Years Staggering

line. Ordinarily hard-boiled newspaper men were scurrying feverishly through the lengthy report last night, picking juicy salary items here and there, and with eyes peeled for picture names.

Even newspaper men were surprised when the Commission made every individual salary and bonus available to the press. This could not have been done without a White House okay, and that started the speculation on what Roosevelt has in mind for the future.

And did the figures make reading! Just jump over these highlights:

The Renraw Corporation, the privately owned holding company through which the three Warner brothers operate in controlling Warners, paid the trio in salary and bonuses in 1929, $520,000; in 1930, $530,000; in 1931, $951,916; in 1932, $496,497; and at the present rate should pay them $280,575 for 1933. Attached to this cash report was a note appended stating that the Renraw Corporation had agreed to pay each of the three Warner Brothers $10,000 weekly for six years, plus 15,000 shares of stock, and 75,000 shares put in escrow. A. C. Thomas is listed as receiving $130,000 from the Renraw Corporation in 1933.

Winnie Sheehan rates high man in the Fox listings. In 1930 he drew $459,655, and for the period covered never drew less than $120,000 annually, except in 1928. In 1933 his figure was $250,000. Sidney Kent pulled down $67,625 in 1932, Saul Rogers, former vice-president and counsel of the company, is listed with $40,009 in 1928; $40,080 in 1929; and $103,689 in 1930.

While the Warner and Fox figures stand out individually, Loew's-MGM group ranks highest in bulk salaries and bonuses paid executives. Nicholas Schenck, while drawing a mere $92,000 in annual salary, pulled down bonuses as high as $357,538 in 1930. Arthur Loew likewise has bonuses listed ranging from $191,497 in 1928 to $308,923 in 1930, and averaging around $200,000 a year.

J. Robert Rubin drew from Loew alone (he is also a member of the Mayer-Thalberg-Rubin combination) the sum of $88,400 in annual salary.

The money gathered by the Mayer-Thalberg-Rubin combination in MGM is grouped. For 1928 the trio drew $1,487,242; for 1929, $2,182,123; for 1930, $2,639,289; for 1931, $2,175,185; for 1932, $1,133,576.

Paramount's figures were principally interesting because of Zukor's earnings, which ranged from $887,500 in 1929 down to $96,031 in 1932. In 1929 the total officer and director salaries of Paramount were $4,062,700.

Radio's salaries seemed unimportant in the welter of big figures being tossed around. General Harbord, president of the parent RCA organization, was tops, Kahane was up in the big money some years, and H. B. Franklin salted away $75,000 for his 1933 work.

Universal does not list Carl Laemmle, Jr., as he is not an officer of the company, but shows Laemmle, Sr. drawing an average of $150,000 a year except in 1930 when he took nothing. R. H. Cochrane received $65,400 in 1930, but dropped as low as $26,000 in 1933. J. R. Grainger was paid $52,000 in 1933.

Columbia was not overlooked in the day's publicity. Harry Cohn drew a combined salary and bonus for 1933 of $145,600, and in the period covered never less than $72,000 annually. Jack Cohn is also up in the big money class, and Joe Brandt in the $100,000 rating for some years prior to 1931 when he was with Columbia.

Observers here feel unanimous on one point: Publication of the report has killed off any attempt to regulate movie salaries without starting the process with the officers and directors and instead of making the creators the goats.

It is also felt that the income tax department will show a keen interest in the report, and it's going to be too bad where the new figures don't jibe with the reports on which taxes were paid.

The Capitol was a madhouse yesterday. The Federal Trades Commission did not issue the figures, or any statement in connection with them, but merely said to the press: "Here are the books—come and see them." All companies capitalized at over $1,000,000 and listed on the Stock Exchange or the Curb were represented, nine hundred in all. The report is the result of a survey authorized by the Senate at its last session. The figures were to be for the Senate, but nothing was said at the time about keeping them confidential.

Erpi on Ground Floor

New York.—It now turns out that "Dodsworth," the most interesting opening of recent weeks, already has a string attached to it by Erpi, with Paramount scheduled to release. Erpi wants to make the film version at Astoria, but Max Gordon has the final say on this. Walter Huston sought for the lead.

Two Holdovers in B'way Picture List

New York.—"Death Takes a Holiday" is being held over at the Paramount, and "Dark Hazard" at the Rialto. Both are hoping for a weather break to give them a chance to show what they really have on the ball.

New pictures include "Palooka," at the Rivoli tonight; "Wonder Bar," at the Strand, Wednesday; "David Harum" at the Music Hall, Thursday; "Queen Christina," at the Capitol, Friday; and on the same day "The Ninth Guest," at the Roxy.

Col. Wants McKinney

Columbia yesterday asked MGM for the loan of Florine McKinney for a featured spot in "Most Precious Thing in Life."

'Speed Wings' Just Another 'Thriller'

"SPEED WINGS"
(Columbia)

Direction .....Otto Brower
Story .....Horace McCoy
Photography.....Al Siegler
Cast: Tim McCoy, Evalyn Knapp, Billy Bakewell, Vincent Sherman.

Speeding airplanes racing with fast trains; aviators going yellow while their buddies are unbelievably noble; fist fights galore; trickery and robbery; love and rescues—well, anyway, "Speed Wings" is another Tim McCoy action picture, and while it lacks everything else it certainly does not want for action.

It's got everything in it but a horse race—so much, in fact, that even the kids will pause and wonder a little.

When the story starts there are two fliers left of eight who started out to perfect a speed plane that would bring the speed record back to the United States. Billy Bakewell sees one too many smash-ups and loses his nerve. But not Tim McCoy! He goes on working on the planes and testing them, and giving Bakewell good socks on the jaw to try to make a man of him, in spite of the fact that the rival company is loosening struts and bolts on their planes and making even life on the ground pretty hazardous. But the girl Bakewell loves, Evalyn Knapp, is kidnaped during the big race and he gets his nerve back and wins the race in time to help Tim rescue her off the train.

Horace McCoy let his imagination run riot while he was penning this yarn, and Otto Brower, the director, had all he could do to keep up with it. Al Siegler photographed it, with the exception of lots of stock airplane shots. Tim McCoy is plenty heroic, Evalyn Knapp is entirely unconvincing, and Bakewell does a pretty good job with his part. Vincent Sherman is well cast in a minor role.

If your audiences have a sense of humor that will enable them to jeer and hiss and clap with a good deal of derisive glee, they will have a good time. Otherwise, bank on the kids.

Lewis Stone Offered U's 'Alias Deacon' Lead

Universal is trading palaver with MGM in an effort to get Lewis Stone to enact the role of the Deacon in "Alias the Deacon," former offering to rewrite the script to make it suitable for Stone's style.

Kirkwood in Comeback

New York.—James Kirkwood is going to essay a return to the stage. He has been signed for a part in "The House of Remsen," by Nicholas Sousaanin and William Pearlman, going into rehearsal March 5.

Joe E. Brown Rests

Joe E. Brown and his wife will leave on a three months' vacation in the Orient March 19. Brown, who is now in "Sawdust," hopes to finish his work in the Warner picture by the end of next week.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

The United Artists group are planning to put George Arliss' "House of Rothschild" into the Astor following "Catherine the Great." . . . In the meantime Harry Charnas is all het up about the "Wonder Bar" opening at the Strand, with Jolson on hand to make the affair something to talk about, that is if you like to talk. . . . All the movie folks flocked to this "Queer People" show in hopes that something new might be revealed. . . . Bert Granet, who co-authored "So This Is Harris," is now writing for Magna. His first assignment is a Bert Lahr picture. . . . Understand that Columbia is burning because Clark Gable is making a personal appearance at the Capitol against his picture "It Happened One Night," which opens this Friday at the Music Hall. Who will be the winner—the Flesh or the Canned Product?

Lou Holtz is among us again and all those picture offers he turned down read from here to over there. . . . Bob Goldstein is ailing with a cold on the proverbial chest. . . . The first spot that Mary Brian went scurrying to when she hit town was backstage of the Capitol, where Buddy Rogers and his troupe of horn tooters were making music. . . . Incidentally Ramon Novarro is having headaches with the flocks of femmes that are storming the backstage of the theatre for his autograph. Novarro, my spies report, is setting himself in on a radio deal. . . . Mutterings around town say that the "White Horse Tavern" will eventually be produced by Arch Selwyn—and will open at the Music Hall next Labor Day with a cast of 300. . . . Con Conrad is sunning himself in Florida these days, while Monty (Magna) Shaff has listened to the call and is in our midst. . . . With the exit of the Gertrude Hoffman girls the Paramount Grill has folded.

Vince Lopez goes into the St. Regis and Phil Harris along with Leah Ray moves over to the Palais Royal. . . . If you think that reading the 700,000 words of "Anthony Adverse" is a man-sized job, just pity the poor author—because Hervey Allen rewrote "Anthony" no less than five times under the guidance of John Farrar, and in the end had written some 3,500,000 words — of which only 700,000 saw print. . . . Looks like the George M. Cohan-Krimsky-Cochran feature deal is off, that is unless the boys are able to smooth out some of those arguments they've been having the past week-ends. . . . Nat Ross is talking to Buddy Rogers about doing a series of shorts, somewhat along the lines of the Leather Pushers, Rogers not wanting to do any more of those wishy-washy sort of films.

Arthur Loses a Bet

Plans to put Alice Brady into "Biography" at the Biltmore threw a monkey wrench into George K. Arthur plans, the latter having contacted Peggy Wood with a view to staging the play for her at the Hollywood Playhouse.

ACTORS' GUILD HELPS TO BROADEN AWARD SCOPE

Through the courtesy of the Screen Actors Guild 3000 additional ballots in The Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit Competition were mailed out to free lance actors and actresses yesterday.

Believing that the system employed by the Reporter whereby the industry as a whole does the picking of outstanding achievements, the Guild officials gladly furnished the names and addresses of this great body of players, so that there would be a double certainty that none would be denied the privilege of taking part in honoring those who deserve recognition.

Adolphe Menjou, a member of the Board of Governors of the Guild, summed it up in the following statement:

"I believe the sentiment of my fellow members of the Actors Guild would be to join me in encouraging any award plan that allows all the members of the profession to express their opinions. There are various worthy awards now, conducted by publications or organizations, and they are of interest to all of us. But a plan such as the Reporter's, which allows ALL creative workers in the motion picture industry a voice, has a distinct place."

Seconding Mr. Menjou in his expression was Kenneth Thomson, secretary of the Guild, who is backing his belief in the worth of the competition by a fine spirit of cooperation.

Enthusiasm for the Reporter awards has spread even to London, where it is being discussed. David Bader of Universal cabled yesterday as follows:

"Your award plan is a grand idea. Earnestly suggest that voters remember international aspect. Those whose pictures go past the frontiers of New York, Chicago and Hollywood are invaluable to themselves, employers and the industry."

Once again, members of the industry, who may not have received a ballot, are requested to either telephone or write in and a ballot will be sent immediately.

Cooperation

The Academy held a press luncheon Wednesday to get suggestions from reporters on what they could do to help in publicity on the Awards. Suggestion unanimous that Academy announce the awards early enough to give eastern papers break. Yesterday Academy decided to announce results as late as possible the night of the banquet.

Ann Ronnel Gets Radio 'Last Yacht' Assignment

Ann Ronnel, sister of Deputy NRA Administrator Sol Rosenblatt, was engaged by Radio yesterday to write the music for "Down to Their Last Yacht."

Sidney Blackmer was signed for an important spot in the Lou Brock picture.

Contest Winner Tested

Alfred Del Cambro, one of the "Search For Beauty" contest winners, is being tested by Paramount for the second male lead in the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin" with George Raft. The picture is scheduled to start next Monday under the direction of Leo McCarey.

Break for Levison

Because George E. Stone is still tied up in "Return of the Terror" at Warners, Charles Levison gets his first big picture break, filling the Stone role in Columbia's "Twentieth Century." Deal was set by the Kingston-Harris agency.

Myrna Loy to Star In 'Evelyn Prentice'

Myrna Loy will get the starring role in "Evelyn Prentice," the W. E. Woodward novel, which was purchased by MGM last week, after she finishes "China Seas" in which she has the top spot with Clark Gable.

C. Gardner Sullivan has been assigned to write the screen adaptation of this novel.

Radio Ready to Start Edna Oliver Mystery

With Edna May Oliver now available, Radio will put the Stuart Palmer mystery thriller, "Murder on the Blackboard" into work under the direction of George Archainbaud on March 2. Edna May Oliver and James Gleason are the only ones in the cast to date. Myles Connolly is supervising.

Ralston for 'Timberline'

ASSISTANT DIRECTORS GET BREAK IN ACAD. AWARDS

Following many years of agitation, the Academy has finally decided to give recognition in its annual awards competition to the Assistant Directors, according to announcement made yesterday.

However, the Assistant Directors will be given "certificates of merit" instead of the gold statuettes which are presented to all the other prize winners.

The certificates will be given to one Assistant Director in each studio for having done the "best consistent year's work." Eighteen assistants have been named as eligible for the special award. Those named from the various studios are:

William Tummel and Percy Ikerd of Fox; Charles Dorian, John Waters and Bunny Dull of MGM; Arthur Jacobson, Sidney Brod and Charles Barton of Paramount; Dewey Starkey and Eddie Killey of RKO-Radio; Fred Fox and Benjamin Silvey of United Artists; Scott Beal, Billy Reiter and Joe McDonough of Universal; Gordon Hollingshead, Al Alborn and Frank Shaw of Warner Brothers.

Weather and Casting Ball Up 'U' Schedule

Inclement weather and casting trouble has caused Universal to set back scheduled starting dates on four pictures. Ken Maynard's "Doomed to Die" did not start yesterday as planned, but will get under way tomorrow, weather permitting. Since the exteriors will be photographed first "The Black Cat" will not start until Friday, two days later than the announced start. Casting difficulties have forced the studio to postpone for another week "Little Man, What Now?" and "This Human Side." Both are now set to go before the cameras next Monday.

Comerford Adds Two In Northern New York

Rochester, N. Y.—The M. E. Comerford circuit has taken over the operation of the Regent and Century houses here, formerly run by Famous Theatres Corporation. William Cadaret is in charge of both houses.

Paramount said to retain 50 per cent interest under an agreement to run for six months, with option for more time.

Splitting Hairs

Sound men squawked last year because Academy gave sound award to studio for best example of sound and didn't give it to the sound men who did the work. To make them feel better this year Academy will give award to "Picture produced BY studio," and still the sound men won't get a statuette.

Practically the only survivor of the original company that started work on MGM's "Operator 13" when it got under way for the second time this week was George Folsey, the cameraman.

There were a new director, new supervisor, new script and new faces in the cast. But Folsey remained behind the camera.

IATSE Groups Get Set for Showdown

For the second time in the past four days the business agents of all the local IATSE groups met yesterday in conference with Richard Green, representative of the parent IATSE body.

First meeting was last Friday. Both meetings veiled with considerable mystery, but those attending admitted that the pow-wows are for the purpose of preparing the necessary data for the use of International President William C. Elliott, who is due here some day this week to take part in discussions with studio officials regarding the signing of a new basic agreement, also to try to spread a little oil of peace on the troubled local waters.

Considerable time at both meetings was spent in going over the squawks relative to the non-operation of the Studio Labor Committee which has many complaints of these locals on its shelves. Ways and means of forcing action from the NRA authorities on these complaints were discussed, and one agent admitted that they have figured out several methods and have made the wires hot between here and Washington as a result. Some action is expected shortly.

Meanwhile they are getting data together on the late strike for Elliott.

ganization needing unanimous consent to put it through. Producer opposition will be reported by John LeRoy Johnston to the Baby Star Committee, headed by George Landy, at the Writers' Club tonight, abandonment of the project expected then to officially occur.

From every source there has come flat denials of antagonism between the Wampas and the producers. "Every studio is participating in star selections," a top official said, "and since we are guided by the desires of the producers there can be no antagonism. The purpose of the Baby Star event is the presentation through an important exploitation stunt by the Wampas of the producers' new talent. It is sponsored by them and all proceeds go to charity."

With the radio stunt out, Wampas committee will mull over several other proposals. Most likely is said to be a series of personal appearances for the thirteen selections starting from New York. Question of expenses, however, is a vital one.

LENSERS' 'STEERING' GROUP PICKED IN SECRET HUDDLE

Specially selected group of members of the IATSE, Local 659, cameramen's union, which met secretly a week ago, went into another huddle last night and made final selection of the 100 men to make up the union's "steering committee" which will handle the reorganization of the union and its by-laws.

Aside from the voting on committee members, chief topic for discussion last night was matter of rerating of cameramen. One group was strongly in favor of making it possible for the union to give a "first" a "second" card temporarily, if a producer writes the union asking such rerating and assuring that the man will work if he is regraded.

However, objection arose from those who feel that each classification should have as much protection as possible. In short, they thought it dangerous to allow "firsts" to step down a grade to get a "second" job while there are seconds not working. This, they feared, might eventually crowd out many of the bona-fide "seconds." No decision was reached, as this will have to be taken up by the steering committee and then passed on by the full membership.

The proposed change of makeup of Executive Board again came up. Feeling is that lower classifications should have representation. Plan is to have 11 firsts, 3 seconds, 3 assistants, 3 still men and 1 newsreel man on the board. Committee is certain to give lower bracket men bigger break when new by-laws are done.

Add Two Members to Local NRA Labor Bd.

Local Regional Labor Board has been increased to twelve members on orders from Washington. Formerly made up of ten members. No official reason given for the increase.

Two new members added yesterday were James Daigel and Jess Gillette. Two other members will be appointed this week to replace John C. Austin, who has resigned, and Collins Hardin, who has died since appointment.

'Mud Turtle' for Holt

Columbia Saturday purchased "Mud Turtle," an original story by Kurt Kempler, and signed the writer to adapt the script. It will be used as a Jack Holt vehicle. Deals were set by Jerry Horwin.

WB Import New Yorker

Warners yesterday signed Arthur Aylesworth, a New York comedian in the play "Armourette," to a long term contract. He will probably go into "The Dark Tower" as his first assignment.

Bren Back at 20th

J. Robert Bren, who authored the Spencer Tracy-Jack Oakie picture, "Looking For Trouble" for Twentieth Century, has returned to that lot to write an untitled original story.

Ease Up on Code

New York.—It's such a tough job getting those exhibitors to sign unqualified assents to the Code that the deadline has been graciously extended by the Code Authority until March 31.

'Christina','Women' Wow 'Em in London

London.—"Queen Christina" and "Little Women" are doing terrific business over here, with "Catherine the Great" and "Gallant Lady" running close behind. "Duck Soup," "Invisible Man" and "All of Me" all doing fine draw, latter due to great popularity of March, Raft and Miriam Hopkins.

"Queen Christina," "Little Women" and "Catherine the Great" are all being held over. Among the new pictures coming in are "I Am Suzanne" at New Gallery; "Jack Ahoy," Gaumont comedy, at Tivoli; "As Husbands Go" at Capitol; "Four Frightened People" and "Queens Affair," British and Dominion picture, at the Plaza.

EVER sit in on banquet while a toastmaster, with more cracks to his line than a syndicated colyumnist, introduced a speaker who was a washout? It happens often.

And then . . . up comes the speaker of the evening—your sound—the most vital part of your show. And what do your customers do?

If you have High Fidelity, they sit thrilled to the most perfect sound that money can buy. They listen to realism unrivalled by life itself. In short they listen to natural sound, and they go home, sold on your house, sure to come next week.

EXHIBS WAR ON CODE

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WE have an idea that the producers and their distributors are taking themselves for a ride that will not be very joyous due to their belief that as long as pictures are made cheaply profits will be the result. We believe that the continued flow of bad pictures, cheaply made, will, very soon, fly back and smack this industry in the face.

We think the producers and distributors are kidding themselves in believing that the general run of pictures are attracting the money that is being paid in at the box office at this time. We believe the public has money to spend, that more people are working now than at any time in the past few years, that they are going to the movies for entertainment, and if that is denied them they will soon drift to other forms of amusement.

We don't believe there are sufficient IMPORTANT PICTURES being produced to build theatre patronage, and if that condition is true then this business is in for a bad flop and quite soon.

Good pictures cannot be made on the formulas being set down in the studios today. And they are not being made. Good pictures require lots of time in preparation, intelligent casting, good direction. Hollywood is filled with fine artists for casting purposes, good directors and able and successful writers, but with all that available talent most of it is going to waste because most of our producers are playing safe in the production of unimportant pictures and are making little or no use of that talent, under the delusion the public likes what they are making.

We don't say that our major studios should go out and throw money to the winds in their effort to make important pictures. We don't believe it is possible to make a good percentage of the year's product IMPORTANT. We do say that there is too little effort exerted in the direction of making GOOD PICTURES and seemingly no desire to make IMPORTANT PIC-

Gov't Officials Get Behind Alien Bill

Washington.—The hearing on the Alien Immigration bill took on a new slant today that may indicate the bill has Administration support. An official of the Bureau of Immigration and the State Department both spoke in favor of the bill.

Briefs opposing the bill were filed by C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays office, Dr. Henry Moskowitz of the National Association of the Legitimate Theatre and Brock Pemberton.

Claim Local Board Selections Controlled By Big Distribs And Chain Houses—Frisco Boiling

New York.—There is an explosion simmering under the apparently peaceful front of the Code Authority here. Since the naming of the Grievance and Zoning Boards in twenty-one cities a week ago, and the equally significant failure to name in many cities, loud squawks of disapproval are pouring into the Big City.

The Code Authority is silent on the kicks, but other film men here, receiving letters from friends throughout the key cities, are not so backward in telling what is happening.

Columbo and 'U' in New Ticket Battle

Russ Columbo has resumed his battle with Universal for a release from his contract and this time is putting all he has into the fight for his freedom. Columbo has been under contract to that studio for five months without a picture.

N.Y. Reports MGM Signs Sam Rothafel

New York.—MGM has signed Sam Rothafel to a contract to manage the Seventh Avenue Roxy Theatre for them, the maestro returning to his first love July 1, according to reports current here today.

Definite announcement is said to be waiting on the ironing out of MGM's deal with the Roxy bondholders to take over the house. Roxy, denying any knowledge of this deal, and also of previously published stories about personal appearances with his Gang, admits, however, he may close with Paramount for a very brief tour with the Gang in the near future.

Five New Boards Named

New York.—The Code Authority today made appointments to the grievance and zoning boards for five additional cities, Albany, Atlanta, Chicago, Cleveland and Milwaukee. Appointments to boards in New York, Boston, San Francisco and Washington have been deferred for at least two weeks.

Harlow to Do 'Eadie'

Jean Harlow will do "Eadie Was a Lady" as the first picture for MGM since her recent contract squabble and the subject is scheduled to get under way in three weeks. Anita Loos and John Emerson are writing the original screen play and Robert Z. Leonard has been penciled in to direct.

Bill Howard Back Monday

William K. Howard returned to Hollywood Monday night and has his choice of a number of assignments as his next directorial trick at MGM. John Considine has bids in for him, offering "Mild Oats" or "Evelyn Prentice."

Lucile Gleason Ill

Lucile Gleason was rushed to the Wilshire Hospital Monday night for an emergency appendix operation, coming through the incident neatly.

NEW YORK THEATRES TO FACE STRIKE TOMORROW

New York.—It isn't bad enough to have the weather laying New York theatre business out in the alley. Yesterday the "Theatre and Amusement Employees Union" voted to start a general strike in all theatres Thursday of this week.

Organizers of the union claim they have some 11,000 ushers, janitors and box office workers in their ranks. So much mystery has surrounded its ac-

THE LOW DOWN

Joan Bennett played Momma to an eight pound baby girl yesterday—she waited "purposely" so that the infant would be born on her birthday—and it was! Joany, if we remember correctly, was just twenty-four yesterday, and Gene Markey is passing the cigars—extra special cigars for the double event! The new baby will be named Melinda.

Sam Harris and Inez Norton are going places very seriously these days—and are at the moment off to Arizona for a jaunt. There is also a story around that Harris just dropped around sixty thousand dollars in a gold-mine venture here. The mine is O.K., it seems, but after a huge sum had been invested in machinery, etc., there was a fire that destroyed the whole mine!

And now it appears that it is just a social faux pas that is behind the $3500 legal bill which is now giving the members of the Academy a headache. It seems, according to the story told, that the lawyer working for the Academy during the pay-cut period really never intended to present a bill, but was happy in the prospect of influential contacts. Then, at the conclusion of the fight, he invited the members to his ranch for a dinner and turkey shoot. When the day arrived, the crowd responding consisted of Lester Cowan and two Academy members. The next week the bill for $3500 was received.

While on the subject of headaches there are those who are wondering when the bill is going to arrive from Nathan Burkan for the days of hard work he spent in Washington on code matters for the Academy. The capable Burkan has never been known to be shy about the size of retainers. Nor to work for nothing where there was no element of charity involved.

Naval Idea on Shelf

MGM has shelved plans for the naval preparedness picture announced some time ago. Studio couldn't make the idea jell.

New York REVIEWS

"BOLERO"

Paramount prod.; director, Wesley Ruggles; writers, Horace Jackson, Ruth Ridenour, Carey Wilson, Kubec Glasmon.

Paramount Theatre

Times: The film, without coming close to realizing the real possibilities of the story as an overpowering study of megalomania, does manage to be moderately entertaining.

World-Telegram: It seemed a little too pat, a little too studious and deliberate in its plot fabrication to be as effective and as convincing as it might and should have been. Although the work of the cast is frequently effective, it is not effective enough to overcome the handicaps of an inadequate story.

News: The picture does not rate as highly as the cast which makes it a success. Its most happy feature is that it moves rapidly, and when it does get serious not too much time is spent trying to jerk tears or evoke sympathy.

Mirror: George Raft is such an unusual type and such an effective dancer he makes this movie a fairly entertaining one for the ladies.

American: Unfortunately, the film doesn't ring true, nor do its characters, nor indeed does its costuming, and the characters show no signs of aging though the action covers a period from the era of Theodore Roosevelt to that following the World War.

Herald-Tribune: In type and manner and dancing ability, George Raft is perfect for his part, but he has neither the acting skill nor the variety of moods necessary for the job. It should have been a lot better.

Journal: It's a moderately entertaining picture, the best work in the piece being done by William Frawley.

Post: The material has been thrown together without logic or dramatic climax; it is a hurly-burly of incidents, confused, meaningless and swabbed in sentimentality. The character which Mr. Raft portrays is weakly conceived. Nor does Miss Lombard contribute anything in the way of looks, acting or dancing.

Sun: Not very exciting as a drama, manages to be entertainment, nevertheless. There is an amusing background, and the costumes in themselves are fun, even if the story is a mild one and the production is a skillful one.

TURES that would mean big business to this industry.

Because of that feeling they go back tomorrow night and the next night and they get that old picture habit again.

tual organization that it is pretty hard to say just how serious the Thursday strike move will be.

Only one Broadway theatre, the Seventh Avenue Roxy, has definitely stated that it approves the organization and the scale of hours and work for which it stands.

The union recently sponsored a strike at the Paramount house in Staten Island which quickly collapsed, with the circuit now refusing to take back the men who walked out.

Distribs Worried on Cancelling Rights

New York.—The cancellation privileges in the NRA code seem likely to be the first issue in a war between distributor and exhibitor members on the Code Authority.

Sales managers are becoming alarmed at the possibilities in the legal interpretation of the clause by NRA attorneys, and the possibiliites of exhibitors whose rentals do not average over $250 per picture on block booking contracts slashing 10 per cent off pictures bought, which would play havoc with the delivery of the balance of this year's product.

John Flinn, executive secretary of the Code Authority, admitted yesterday that some of the distributors plan opposition to the NRA interpretation. The result might be a blow up in the none too secure ranks of the Code Authority that would extend down the line to its subordinate bodies, in various exchange centers.

Coslow-Johnston Assigned

Sam Coslow and Arthur Johnston were nominated yesterday by Paramount to write the music numbers for the next Burns and Allen picture, tentatively called "All for the Bridegroom."

Local Writers Honored

Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements are represented in Macmillan's "Short Stories of Today" with their story "Lobster John's Annie." Book is collection of modern short stories by representative writers.

'BOTTOMS UP' IN FINAL FORM IS PRAISED BY REVIEWER

Fox Musical Welded Into Good Show

"BOTTOMS UP"
(Fox)

Direction .....David Butler
Story.....B. G. DeSylva, David Butler and Sid Silvers
Art Director.....Gordon Wiles
Photography .....Art Miller
Dance Director.....Harold Hecht
Music and Lyrics: Berton Lane, Harold Adamson, Richard Whiting and Gus Kahn.
Cast: Spencer Tracy, John Boles, Pat Patterson, Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers, Harry Green, Thelma Todd and Robert Emmett O'Connor.

The new Fox picture "Bottoms Up" is just plain, downright, and excitingly good. In fact, it is so good that it must be something new in the way of entertainment.

But it isn't. It is a musical; it has a touch of back-stage story about it; it has a mistaken identity angle; it has the old, familiar triangle—it must be the way it is done.

Put this picture down as a CAN'T MISS. It is a triumph in every department, with direction, acting and the dance numbers heading the list. The musical part and the straight part balance each other nicely, with just enough of both; it has high, wide and fancy comedy with an overtone of pathos contributed by Spencer Tracy, and it is one of the most tastefully mounted productions seen in a long time.

The opening of the film is a honey. Three jobless men, Tracy, Herbert Mundin and Sid Silvers, pick up a girl, Pat Patterson, and take her "home" with them, knowing that she is broke, hungry and has no place to go. "Home" is a deserted miniature golf links hut. Tracy is the big talker—he has arrived in Hollywood to revolutionize the motion picture industry. Mundin just got out of jail for signing the wrong name to the wrong check, and Silvers is trying to sell the words to popular songs on the street.

Tracy gets the idea, inasmuch as Mundin and Miss Patterson both have English accents, of passing them off on gullible old Hollywood as Lord Brocklehurst and his daughter, fishing for a movie contract, as the girl is crazy to be an actress.

It works, all right, with Harry Green as the producer giving them all contracts, and Mundin, the expert, forging Green's instructions until Miss Patterson finally comes out in the picture as the star.

And then the showdown . . . .

Well, here's a picture that will talk money in any box-office.

For pure, different, delightful comedy, see the "Waiting at the Gate for Katie" number with John Boles. It's a wow. For something absolutely original and stunning, see the "Bottoms Up" number, with Pat Patterson singing away the depression and gathering after her a hot, laughing, jazzy parade of social leaders, chorus girls, bankers and brokers, with the set (all the buildings are built on a crazy, depressed bias) gradually tightening up. It's great.

This Patterson girl is swell. She can sing, dance and act. John Boles has a chance to combine music with drama and he does it beautifully. Sid Silvers is a comedy riot; Spencer Tracy apparently can't do a bad job if he wanted to; Herbert Mundin is perfectly cast; Harry Green is completely amusing and Thelma Todd is grand.

David Butler's direction is fast and smooth, and Harold Hecht's dance direction is something to rave about. B. G. DeSylva, David Butler and Sid Silvers wrote the story; Gordon Wiles' art direction is a thing of art, and the music and lyrics, by Berton Lane, Harold Adamson, Richard Whiting and Gus Kahn are good. Art Miller photographed it with taste and originality.

Don't worry. Just go ahead and show it—whether your house is Hollywood, New York, or the sticks.

Guild Plans Indie Standard Contract

Free lance writers of the Screen Writers' Guild are being backed by the organization in an effort to amicably work out a standard basic form of contract with independent producers, latter to have as great a voice in the drawing up of the contract as they wish, according to a Guild announcement yesterday.

John Natteford, chairman of the free lance group, which includes virtually every member in the field, has been given the okay by the Guild Board of Governors to push the standard basic ticket. He held his first huddle yesterday with Laurence Bielenson, Guild attorney, and the writers' draft of their independent contract will be forthcoming shortly.

Guild is contacting the indies first because of the practice among the smaller producers to engage writers without contracts, leaving the matter of writing agreements entirely up to the writers themselves with the result, in the past, that where contracts existed there was no conformity. A standard contract is expected to remedy this situation.

Princess Libel Suit On 'Rasputin' Opens

London.—Alleging she was libeled by MGM's "Rasputin," Princess Irina Alexandrovna's suit against the company was opened today in a hearing before Justice Horace Avory. The princess, niece of the one-time Czar, asserts MGM showed her as the Princess Natasha in the picture, the character in the story being seduced by Rasputin and becoming his mistress.

On the stand the princess denied she ever met Rasputin, which is regarded here as a point in her favor. As the trial continues the entire Romanoff history is expected to be rehashed, with the Sunday feature pages getting juicy spreads out of the suit. MGM, for its part, has entered a complete denial of the princess charges.

Wampas Decide to Foster Own Stars

The Wampas met last night and, after being notified that a majority of the producers had turned down their idea of putting this year's Baby Stars on the air, decided upon a new method of selecting this year's crop of "babies."

It was unanimously voted to elect thirteen "baby stars," but they will be girls who are not under term contracts at present. Reason given for this is that they are going on the theory that girls who are now under contract have already been recognized and are presumably on their way to stardom. Wampas selection will be from those who have not been given this chance.

It was also decided to select the "baby stars" this year from screen tests, rather than from photographs and personal observation as in past years. Those nominees who do not have screen tests to present will have arrangements made for taking one. Nominations will close on March 13.

Organization decided to delay plans for presentation of the stars until after they are elected. Then they will determine what manner of showing them to the public will be used.

FEDERAL COURTS MAY BE CALLED IN UNION DISPUTE

Film Loaders First Group After Action

Indications yesterday were that the first group in the film production field to take their protests to a Federal court and try to have employers fined for code violation will be the film loaders.

A spokesman for a group of film loaders from one studio yesterday declared that the loaders in his studio have become tired of "being horsed around" by the code officials and have sent final word to Washington asking that some action be taken on their complaint now with the Studio Labor Committee.

"If we do not get some action within a week we are going to hire a lawyer, go to the Federal District Attorney and swear out a complaint against the violators and try to get them into court," declared this film loader.

The film loaders' complaint is that they were placed in the wrong classification when the code was drawn. They were classed with cameramen in the Basic Agreement and drew $46 a week, and when they had worked 16 successive hours in one day they got the same overtime as cameramen.

Now they are listed as laboratory workers and claim they are getting only $30 a week, with no overtime. Their chief squawk is that on location the loaders are paid on daily basis of $8.50 per day, and have to work as many hours as company asks.

"Average is 18 hours a day," said a film loader, "and thus a loader can only work two days a week (36 hours), for which he gets but $17. Code won't let him work longer. Mr. Rosenblatt told us this was a mistake and that Studio Labor Committee would fix it at once. They won't act, so we will have to go to court, I guess."

Radio Waits on Gleason For Mystery Starting Date

The starting date on Radio's "Murder on the Blackboard," a sequel to "Penquin Pool Murder," is now contingent on James Gleason's arranging his work at Fox. CHARGE STUDIOS USED TO COLLECT IBEW UNION DUES

Charges that some of the major studios are assisting the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers in forcing their members to pay their union dues are among the latest of the complaints that have been lodged with the Studio Labor Committee by the various IATSE groups, it was learned yesterday.

The method used, according to charges by the labor groups is best explained by one IATSE man who has been on the inside of many conferences held to devise ways and means to get the Studio Labor Committee to take action on the many complaints filed with it.

"The head of a studio," explains this man, "has a list of the members of the IBEW union on his desk. This list shows those who are paid up and those who are in arrears with their dues. He calls one of the men in arrears and tells him that he plans to use him on a location trip next week. The fellow is happy and as he starts to thank the studio executive, said executive says, 'By the way, how about your union dues? Are you paid up? You know you have to have a paid up card to go on location. Better get right down and settle, if you owe anything.'

"The IBEW fellow rushes over and pays. Then, in more than 75 per cent of the cases he never hears from the studio executive again. This is going on in a lot of the studios. Same thing is true in connection with the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. It is a distinct violation of the code."

A lot of these instances are expected to be brought to the surface when President Elliott of the IATSE arrives this week.

Independent exhibitors, particularly in key cities where the strength of the independents is sufficient to worry the big fellows, are complaining openly that in all too many cases the appointments to the important boards were dictated by distributor and chain theatre interests.

The San Francisco situation is the one that is apt to blow the lid off. The appointment of the boards for this city has been stalled for two weeks now, giving chances for an interchange of letters and wires from New York to Frisco that may make snappy reading for General Johnson's current linen-washing session in Washington.

Bluntly, San Francisco independent exhibitors and indie exchanges mince no words in stating that the steps taken to remove Morgan Walsh and George Mann from the "appointment list" and the later stalling on naming the Frisco boards until the membership is "satisfactory to major distributors" constitute concrete evidence that the majors have taken the Code and its administration in exhibition and distribution into their vest pockets.

New York also is a territory where there is considerable murmuring, at present marked by exhibitor apathy towards signing "assents" and also including plenty of talk that Warners, Loew, and Fox chains are dictating the appointments to be made.

San Francisco offers the real dynamite of the moment. Here independent exhibitors put forth the names of George Mann and Morgan Walsh early for consideration on the list of appointments. Both are independent exhibitors of long and solid standing in the exchange territory. Walsh is president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association of Northern California, and Mann is head of Redwood Theatres.

The story received here is that three weeks ago Charles C. Pettijohn wired the San Francisco Film Board the names of the appointees approved by the Code Authority and that this list included the names of Walsh, Mann, and Grover C. Parson, veteran exchange manager of the district. All were appointees satisfactory to the large body of independent theatre men in the Bay section.

Then the funny work started. About a week ago a number of Frisco film men were requested to make additional suggestions for appointments, and this brought a flood of letters and wires to New York asking if this meant that the trio named above were to be sidetracked.

Apparently they were.

For it is reported that W. Ray Johnston, Ed Kuykendall and others wrote to San Francisco stating that "the major distributors led by Fox and Warner seriously oppose Morgan Walsh." Other statements to the same effect were said to have been made about the status of Mann and Parsons.

A highlight was a wire on Saturday from Kuykendall direct to Walsh stating that the distributor members of the Code Authority opposed his naming and ASKING IF THEY SHOULD BE REQUIRED TO STATE PUBLICLY THEIR REASONS FOR SO DOING, OR WOULD HE WITHDRAW VOLUNTARILY.

Walsh countered with a left hook —INSISTING THAT THE DISTRIBUTORS PUBLICLY STATE THEIR REASONS FOR OBJECTING TO HIM.

The distributors merely went into their shells, and replied "that the administrator has decided to withdraw Walsh's name as he is anxious for all nominees to the Boards to go on without opposition."

And incidentally some of the evidence that has been sent back to New York for possible passing on to Washington is said to be a telegram from John Clark, of Fox, to Herman Wobber in San Francisco stating that "ONE major distributor still objects to Walsh" so the theatre owner sending the word to New York asks, "What is to be the set-up of the Boards if the voice of ONE major distributor in any section is sufficient to overrule any and all independents?"

Exhibitor leaders here, acquainted with the facts, take this telegram to mean that no exhibitor will be selected for any board who is not passed upon and satisfactory to the major distributing corporations, and for that reason the supposedly representative members for independent exhibitors will not be truly representative. They put it this way, "Wherever a nominee is suggested as strong as Mann or Walsh, and able to fight theatre battles, they will oppose him, and fish around until they get an independent exhibitor who is not suffciently powerful to oppose the big fellows when it comes to any real action by the boards."

In New York, Harry Brandt's position is that his independent organization has not signed the Code and has no intention of doing so, and for that reason is expressing no opinions regarding the possible personnel of the local Boards.

The "appointment board" that consists of Sidney R. Kent, George Schaeffer, Charles O'Reilly, Nathan Yamins and W. Ray Johnston, refuses to make any comment on the rumors and outright statements of dissatisfaction with their work. In side-stepping the issue it was made known that no statement would be issued until the appointments for all cities were made and announced.

To date about 9000 assents to the Code have been received from exhibitors. The sudden miraculous jump of 1500 in the past few days is attributed to "home office" orders to the men working for the big circuits in the last few days to rush in signatures and take off the chill that was surrounding the whole machinery.

'Democratic Idea' Wins Block Praise

Ralph Block, well known screen writer and member of the Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild, today joined the vast army of Hollywood's picture people who are praising the Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit Competition.

"It is about time that someone came out with a plan that recognized distinguished merit in the motion picture business, that is not limited to a small, exclusive coterie of hand-picked voters," says Mr. Block.

"The Reporter is to be commended on its enterprise and understanding of the requirements of an industry so large as this, by devising a plan of awards which is democratic, uninfluenced by special privilege and widespread throughout the industry.

"The Reporter's method offers the most honest plan of awarding meritorious effort yet advanced."

Scores of other writers, actors, directors, executives and technicians have written in similar letters praising The Reporter plan of having the industry as a whole name the men and women who deserve public acclaim for their creative work of the past year.

To those who have not yet sent in their ballots: Please name the picture in which your player did his or her outstanding acting. Some ballots have come in with just the name of the player and no picture. These will have to be excluded in the final ballot. Read directions carefully and do not waste your vote. NRA CODE GROUP LAYS LAW DOWN REGARDING EXTRAS

First definite steps in behalf of the film "extras" was taken yesterday by the Code Committee for Extras when the committee forwarded to Washington recommendations that will force studios to pay extras for time spent in fittings, interviews and set a maximum and minimum meal period.

The new rules which the committee recommend to put in the Code for enforcement provide as follows:

That any extra who is required to be fitted for a costume must be paid a one-quarter day check or be given two sucessive days work with that costume.

That extras detained on interviews longer than one hour, or called for an additional interview, be paid on the basis of the agreed pay rate of extra for each two hours or fraction thereof of time in excess of the first hour. That there be allowed a minimum meal period of one-half hour and a maximum meal period of one hour in each eight-hour working day. And that only one meal period be allowed in said eight-hour day. Also provides that a meal period of one hour be allowed for each four hours or fraction thereof of overtime.

Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee, declared that heretofore there has been no protective law for men as far as meal periods are concerned, but there has been a State law governing women. She said that studios have done more or less as they pleased on all three of these matters, and the committee wants them fixed in the Code so the law can be enforced and the extras protected.

Vol. XCX, No. 42. Price 5c — TODAY'S FILM NEWS TODAY — Thursday, March 1, 1934

NEW DEAL FOR AGENTS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•METRO - GOLDWYN - MAYER will soon answer many exhibitor protests regarding their late start in the box office field this year with four or five pictures that should lift MGM back up to the top, where they belong.

The Thalberg production of "Rip Tide," with Norma Shearer, Herbert Marshall and Robert Montgomery, is touted as a cinch hit by those who have seen it. It's one of those smart pictures on the order of "Divorcee," and mentioning "Rip Tide" in comparison to "Divorcee" immediately places it in the winner class.

"Viva Villa" is certain to be a smash. Even the picture we saw some weeks ago when it was shown as a first preview had all the moneymaking qualities, but "Louie" Mayer, satisfied that Selznick had turned in a good production, ordered it back to make it a GREAT picture.

"Men in White," already previewed, proved to be excellent entertainment and one that will be pulled into the big money class through the presence of Clark Gable. "Queen Christina," disappointing in spots in its early release, will bring a lot of people back to the movie houses and send them home satisfied they have been given an IMPORTANT picture for their money.

Since "Tarzan" was played, every exhibitor who was fortunate in getting it has been yelling for a repeat. "Tarzan and His Mate" has been completed and will soon be uncovered for review. It will have to be pretty bad to keep it out of the top money class and the chatter around the studio rates it as better than the first version.

Add to the list of completed big pictures those that are soon to be placed in production, such as "The Merry Widow," "The Duchess of Delmonico's" and "Treasure Island," along with many others, and you will get a lot of strength from any sinking feeling you may have had towards MGM.

Catholic Dignitary Pans 'Anth.Adverse'

New York.—Monsignor M. J. Lavelle, for many years right hand man to Cardinal Hayes in the administration of Catholic Church affairs in the great territory covered from New York, is quoted in New York papers today condemning "Anthony Adverse" as "the rottenest book he had ever read."

Screen rights to the book are owned by Warner Brothers, who have had trouble enough trying to figure how to get it all in the space of one picture, without this new wallop from so influential a figure.

Paramount Execs Off To La Quinta for Gab

The Paramount executives, producers and department heads, headed by Emanuel Cohen, will leave tomorrow afternoon for La Quinta for the week-end.

This trip is made each year by company officials for the purpose of discussing and laying out plans for the coming year's production. The trip has waited this year on Russell Holman's arrival from the east.

Schenck Denies 'Roxy' Signed on Theatre Deal

Nicholas Schenck, MGM chieftain, denied yesterday that his company had signed a contract with S. L. Rothafel to manage the "Roxy" theatre in New York.

Schenck admitted that a deal to take over the theatre has been considered, but that it has not been settled, therefore he says it would be out of the question to hire a manager.

Presnell Renews at WB

Robert Presnell was handed a new contract yesterday by Warners to run for two years.

State Labor Commission Lays Down Stringent Rules Before Renewing Licenses Next April

Agents and their clients in Hollywood are both going to get a lot of fine print reading within the next thirty days as a result of efforts by the California State Labor Commission to put into practice a stringent and definite set of rules regarding the relations of representatives and workers.

Some of the ideas proposed by the State Labor Commission are radical changes. And the Commission is sitting in the saddle, and taking the position that unless the agents submit a standard form of contract which

Gore Wants 80 PC Over $75,000 Take

Washington.—Following publicity of the Federal Trade Commission's report on salaries to the Senate, Senator Gore yesterday offered an amendment to the pending tax bill to levy an 80 percent tax upon all salary and other emolument income above $75,000 annually. All sums above that he termed "excessive salaries."

The feeling here is that the Senate will adopt this amendment, which is believed to have the support of the White House. It will hit the high salaried picture crowd right on the nose.

Morris Cain Dies

Morris Cain, representing the Weber office on the Jack Dempsey tour, was killed Friday in an automobile accident in Georgia, according to word received by Harry Weber last night. Dempsey arranged for the burial in Atlanta, Tuesday.

House Threatens Imported Actors

Washington.—With evidences of Administration support behind it, the Dickstein Bill, aimed to put a curb on wholesale importing of foreign actors, is on the road to an early appearance on the floor of the House.

Yesterday it was reported out of committee, and immigration members will ask special rule to get it in House quickly. It is due any day now, and the prediction is that if Administration is shown definitely for it it will pass.

'Rothschild' in NY Mar.14

New York.—Darryl Zanuck's special "The House of Rothschild" is going to be given to audiences just as quickly as the United Artists can get it there. The Rivoli date here is set March 14. The picture arrived at the home office yesterday, was viewed by all the big wigs, and their enthusiasm resulted in the quick decision to set a Rivoli opening.

Postpone RKO Meeting

The meeting of the RKO board of directors slated for yesterday in New York was postponed until Saturday. No reason given for delay.

It is believed there is no hitch over the okaying of new Cooper and Berman contracts, but that Code entanglements of board members may be the reason for holdup.

Mrs. Stroheim Suit Starts

Jury trial on suit by Mrs. Eric Von Stroheim opened yesterday before Superior Court Judge Bush, director's wife asking $275,000 for burns received in the beauty shop operated as "Jim the Barber." Panel of jurors is being selected.

Jack Gain Laid Up

J. J. Gain, Fox studio manager, has been away from his office at the studio since Monday with a bad cold. He is recuperating at home.

LASKY-SHEEHAN BATTLE READY TO BREAK IN OPEN

Battlefront reports yesterday were that the Jesse Lasky-Winnie Sheehan situation was reaching the point of open warfare. Argument has grown up over new stories being considered, suggestions for casting, etc.

The understanding is that the arrival of Sidney Kent before the end of this month is the only thing holding off the shooting. Lasky, it is stated, feels that he wouldn't want to start something without a first opportunity to talk with Kent.

Frank Joyce Returning

A cable received at the Selznick-Joyce office yesterday revealed that Frank Joyce sailed on the Berengaria Tuesday for New York and will arrive in Hollywood within two weeks.

17 Grand for 'Nana'

Anna Sten and "Nana" hit the ball last night for close to $1700 at the United Artists Theatre. This is close to the top figure for the theatre.

New York REVIEWS

"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT"

Columbia prod.; director, Frank Capra; writers, Samuel Adams, Robert Ruskin.

Music Hall

Mirror: Always an imaginative and skilled director, Frank Capra has made another provocative and appealing picture out of a conventional "He-man tames spoiled heiress" scenario. From its lively and amusing opening to its bizarre conclusion it is picked with surprise, excitement, laughs and romance.

American: One hundred per cent entertainment is provided by this slick, thoroughly amusing, romantic comedy, which is just about the best picture either Mr. Gable or Miss Colbert has made in a long, long time. In other words, it's a honey. Don't miss it.

Herald-Tribune: It is lively and amusing even if a bit too long for complete comfort. It has the advantage of some engaging comedy scenes. Mr. Gable is at his best and Miss Colbert plays with her customary charm and skill.

News: The co-stars make a good team. They are an attractive pair and they play their respective roles with a refreshing lightness. The picture's weakness is its artificial plot. However, the direction is excellent. Frank Capra never lets his picture lag for a moment. It is never very exciting but it moves along snappily and it is full of amusing situations.

Times: A good piece of fiction, which, with all its feverish stunts, is blessed with bright dialogue and a good quota of relatively restrained scenes.

World-Telegram: The most charming, thoroughly delightful and diverting film that has come to Broadway in months. For pure, unadulterated entertainment nothing has equaled it since "The Prizefighter and the Lady." An ace among ace directors, Frank Capra has done his most adroit piece of work.

Post: Mr. Capra's skillful direction, plus the responsive acting of Mr. Gable, Miss Colbert and Walter Connolly, kept the audiences at the Music Hall in a constant twitter.

Sun: This is markedly a Capra production, acted and directed in that same amused and highly amusing fashion. Its values are mainly cinematic, quick inconsequential little bits of nonsense and drama. From the first scene to the last the picture is fun.

Journal: One sparkling situation follows another and the adroit turns taken by the story are at all times delightful. The picture never lets down and the finish is as gay as the rest. Gable is simply grand. The lines he is given to say are smart, and he puts them over smartly.

"DEATH TAKES A HOLIDAY"

Paramount prod.; director, Mitchell Leisen; writers, Alberto Casella, Maxwell Anderson, Gladys Lehman.

Paramount Theatre

Times: It is an impressive picture, each scene of which calls for close attention. Undoubtedly, Maxwell Anderson's share in the adaptation had a great deal to do with the effectiveness of this screen contribution. There is many a bright line in this film, which is far from being a gloomy subject. Mr. March's performance is pleasing, but his enunciation lacks the shading one would like to hear.

Sun: It is a beautiful and moving film, but one that requires imagination to appreciate as well as to create. The subject is morbid, but not, somehow, depressing. It has even humor, a rich sardonic vein of humor. The picture owes much to its cast, Mr. March, Miss Westley and Sir Guy Standing, but even more to its cameraman, Charles Lang, and its director, Mitchell Leisen. Settings and photography help to make this production worthy of the courage it must have taken to produce it in the first place.

Herald-Tribune: An interesting, frequently striking and occasionally beautiful dramatic fantasy that somehow ends by being unsatisfactory. Its chief virtues are the rather sensitive dialogue by Maxwell Anderson and Gladys Lehman, the intelligent direction by Mitchell Leisen, the settings, the photography and the playing of Fredric March.

Journal: The theme of the picture is definitely macabre. It is handsomely mounted. Mr. March attempts to lighten his sombre role and Miss Venable is youthfully appealing.

World-Telegram: That the picture will seem tedious to those who like their entertainment fast and furious there is no question. But it is a sincere attempt at something different in the cinema and is eminently worthy of your attention. This is a lavish and handsome production and the director has wrought delicately and knowingly the passages denoting the grim presence of Death and he has directed his players with precision and tact.

American: An unusual entertainment and a worthy effort to bring to the screen a story that is removed from the ordinary girl-loves-boy blueprint dramas of the studio. It is both sparklingly witty and weirdly terrifying.

News: Paramount has achieved in this fine production an artistic triumph and a picture that will give any one who sees it the horrors. It is built on a morbid theme which is morbidly presented. It has been beautifully and intelligently directed by Mitchell Leisen and is one that will haunt you for days.

'COME ON, MARINES' ROUGH, ROWDY AND VERY FUNNY

Cast, Megger and Script Hit the Ball

"COME ON, MARINES"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Henry Hathaway
Story by.....Philip Wylie
Adaptation.....Byron Morgan and Joel Sayre
Art Directors.....Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick
Photography .....Ben Reynolds
Cast: Richard Arlen, Ida Lupino, Roscoe Karns, Grace Bradley, Edmund Breese, Monte Blue, Virginia Hammond, Roger Gray, Julian Madison, Emil Chautard, Gwenllian Gill, Clara Lou Sheridan, Toby Wing, Lona Andre and Leo Chalzel.

Well, another good comedy hits the celluloid. Rough, rowdy, boisterous, "Come On, Marines" is a far better than average picture, with a foolproof comedy angle balanced by really dramatic tenseness and a human, believable love story.

Just a couple of snips of the shears is all that can be recommended. The last shot in the jungle is entirely too trite for the originality of the rest of the piece. Aside from this one lapse from the unusual, the picture packs good comedy surprises every foot of the way.

Richard Arlen is a marine who, because of one scrape after another with the dames, can't seem to keep his stripes on his sleeve. As punishment for his last scrape, he is sent to the jungles in the Philippine Islands—and there the fun begins. He heads a company to rescue a group of children who have been shipwrecked down the coast and are hiding from the bandit, Celano, in an old monastery with their chaperone.

The "children" turn out to be Ida Lupino, Gwenllian Gill, Clara Lou Sheridan, Toby Wing and Lona Andre, and the marines turn out to be only human. And the funniest battle ever filmed is where the tough, bearded, dirty fighters don the girls' flimsy evening dresses (in which they were wrecked) and saunter forth to lure Celano into the open. The sight of the apparently coy, charming, frilly bits of femininity racing recklessly through the swamps after the bandit chief, hurling oaths and machine gun bullets at him, is splittingly funny. The preview audience darned near died. This scene is almost equaled by the one where the girls and their hoity-toity chaperone beat it in the other direction, dressed in the marines' muddy outfits.

Another highlight of this picture comes right at the beginning. Of all the hot, low-down, dances that ever called for asbestos, Grace Bradley offers the most so. It's a knock down and drag out.

Richard Arlen troups beautifully as the marine who is "off women," and Ida Lupino is nice as the gal who changes his mind for him. Roscoe Karns has a swell comedy role and makes the most of it. Edmund Breese is well cast as a general, and Monte Blue is good as a lieutenant. Virginia Hammond is priceless as the girls' chaperone; Roger Gray does wonders with the small part of Celano, and all the girls enter heartily into the spirit of the thing.

Henry Hathaway's direction is responsible for the general speed and excellence of the production, and Philip Wylie can be proud of his grand yarn. Byron Morgan and Joel Sayre did a good adaptation; Hans Dreier and Earl Hedrick did right by the art direction, and Ben Reynolds photographed it in good style.

O.K., exhibitors, "Come On, Marines!"

Exhib Meet Nears

New York.—Prepare to put the pressure on for plans in connection with the MPTOA convention starting in Los Angeles April 10. Arrangements were concluded today for two of the special trains which will leave New Orleans and Chicago on April 6.

MGM Cashing In On Princess Suit

London. — Princess Alexandrovna may be "asking" for $2,000,000 from MGM in her libel suit here, but MGM is "getting" a million dollars worth of publicity for "Rasputin."

Princess says her character damaged by the character portrayed by Diana Wynyard, who plays the mad Monk's mistress. The papers have taken to it like ducks to water and the story of the picture is being dished out daily in the news.

'Thin Man' Keeps Two Good Girls at Home

Isabel Jewell yesterday postponed her trip to New York and Maureen O'Sullivan delayed her contemplated trip to Dublin and accepted principal roles in MGM's "The Thin Man," which W. S. Van Dyke will direct. Cast to date also includes William Powell, Myrna Loy and Porter Hall.

Rambeau on the Air

Marjorie Rambeau has been signed to appear on the Shell Oil Hour's next broadcast, Monday. Walter Kane, of the Weber office, set it.

Pic Code Authority Wakes Up Late

New York.—The picture business ignored the opening sessions of the grand "NRA REVUE" in Washington, but there must have been some hurried phoning, because it was announced yesterday that George Schaeffer, Sidney Kent, Nathan Yamins, Charles O'Reilly and John Flinn would be present at the hearings Monday.

It appears that until the boys read the headlines yesterday and learned that the Administration is going to swing the whip on evasive employers in all lines that they had the idea the NRA grand meetings were just a merry-go-round for Chamber of Commerce purposes.

William Frawley Moves Into Para 'Magoo' Role

William Frawley yesterday was set by Paramount to replace Paul Gerritts in the columnist role of "The Great Magoo," which Wesley Ruggles will direct. Gerritts will be used in another picture which has not been announced as yet.

Dorothy Dell, Roscoe Karns and Raymond Milland were also added to the cast of the Ben Hecht and Gene Fowler stage play yesterday.

MGM Imports Actor

MGM has signed Porter Hall, recently in the stage production of "The Dark Tower" in New York, for a spot in Dashiell Hammett's "The Thin Man," which W. S. Van Dyke directs. Hall is due to arrive here by the first of next week.

'Fuzzy' Gets a Spot

Fuzzy Knight was signed by MGM yesterday to replace Jerry Howard, Ted Healy's stooge number one, in the Marion Davies-Gary Cooper picture "Operator 13," which Richard Boleslavsky is directing.

Hays Speaks for M.P. Club

New York.—The reorganized Motion Picture Club will hold its first meeting today with Will Hays as the principal speaker.

Rogers-Para. Battle At Stage of Truce

Charles R. Rogers has apparently won some of his battles with Paramount, and it is understood that the unit producer has obtained permission from Manny Cohen to use two of Paramount's bigger stars, Miriam Hopkins and Sylvia Sidney, in two of his forthcoming pictures.

With this thought in mind Rogers consummated deals for the purchase of a story titled "Lizzie Skerritt," in which he plans to star Sylvia Sidney, and also "I Love an Actress," for Miriam Hopkins and Adolphe Menjou.

The latter story was purchased from Radio. It is an original by Gregory Ratoff, who sold the story to Radio with the agreement that he be starred in it. Rogers gets the finished script on this story, which was written by Humphrey Pearson.

Whale Returns with Idea Which Universal Likes

Universal is negotiating for John Galsworthy's "One More River" and will produce it as a special on next year's program if the deal is consummated. R. C. Sherriff will write the script in London and James Whale, recently returned from England, will direct.

Collier, Sr., Ill

Because William Collier Sr. is ill, B. P. Schulberg was unable to start "Thirty Day Princess" as scheduled yesterday. Studio has signed Robert McWade for the role and will get the picture before the cameras today. Marion Gering directs, with Sylvia Sidney and Cary Grant in the top spots.

Roach to Lay Off

With only 13 of the 42 comedies on the current production program left to be completed, Hal Roach will go into a two weeks' layoff period starting next Monday. Studio has an "Our Gang" and one of the musicals in work now, both of which will be finished Saturday.

Lasky Starts 'Redheads'

Don Hartman and Jay Gorney have been signed by Jesse L. Lasky to collaborate with Keene Thompson on the screen adaptation of "Redheads On Parade," in which Nancy Carroll will have the top spot, for Fox.

HEAVEN MUST PROTECT THE POOR WORKING EXTRA GAL

Code Committee for Extras today is trying to figure the reason for a squawk yesterday from the attorney for the Hollywood Picture Players Association, one of the several groups of extra players.

The Extra Committee voted unanimously to recommend to the Code Authority that the clause in the film code requiring that women applicants for work be interviewed by women and men by men be removed from the code.

Yesterday Eugene H. Marcus, counsel for the above named picture group, let out a blast against this decision, declaring it should be retained to protect the extra girls from chances of moral dangers.

"I can't figure it out," said Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the committee. "J. Buckley Russell, president of Mr. Marcus' group, voted with the other members of the committee to recommend elimination of the provision. Why Mr. Marcus should protest after that is beyond me. I guess I don't know Hollywood very well.

"We all felt that such a provision was a needless expense, and the extras on the committee declared that they had never seen any moral danger in casting offices. Anyway, if a casting director should overstep his bounds he would be settled very quickly if the girl should report him. We feel it is a protection that is not needed."

'SING AND WHISTLE' WEAK; 'SHALL NOT DIE' A PROBLEM

Doesn't Offer Much For Screen Version

"SING AND WHISTLE"

Play by Milton Herbert Gropper; presented by Gropper and Truex; setting by Cleon Throckmorton; staged by Ernest Truex. Cast: Sylvia Field, Ernest Truex, Dorothy Mathews and Donald MacDonald. At the Fulton Theatre.

New York.—Relishing the aspect of another evening with Ernest Truex, a first-night audience set itself avidly for a bang-up round of rowdy farce. What ensued proved, despite the very earnest labors of Gropper and Truex, tepid dishwater. True enough, there is a bit of anticipation in the second act when the wrong couple are very slowly and gradually preparing to get into bed.

While the mechanics used by the author to get Truex and his bed partner, and ex-sweetheart and the wife of another man, intimately together via a quart of whiskey, are justifiably employed, still one is apt to feel cheated as the curtain descends on this act with the lady pouring brandy on the head of maudlin and very sick Truex. First, because Gropper could have gotten much more out of this pregnant situation without forcing its development entirely by means of libidos set free in this fashion and second because of the awkward fashion in which the premise of "Sing and Whistle" is delineated in the first act.

Truex and Dorothy Mathews excelled with their expert work as inebriated ex-lovers. Truex uses every trick in his repertoire to good advantage, pleasing the audience immensely with his work. The Mathews girl more than held her own in her comical characterization.

Gropper's story deals in a meagre way with a marital quadrangle. The husband of couple No. 1 is suspected by his wife of still being in love with the girl he didn't marry. Husband of couple No. 2, married to the lady formerly beloved by husband No. 1, is fed up with hearing continually of the virtues of the other man whom she might have married. The irate husband pays a visit to couple No. 1 with the avowed purpose of laying that ghost. He makes no bones about it that he and the missus will visit couple No. 1 for a week, during which time the lady will learn to see that her ideal man has plenty of faults and is impossible to live with.

Complications arise, quarrels and misunderstandings ensue; the wife of couple No. 1 teams up with husband of couple No. 2 and they fare forth on an all night party in Harlem. The other two left alone in the apartment wind up in bed after a quiet evening of drinking. The final act is used to straighten both couples out—everyone concerned denying any wrong in their respective behaviors—couple No. 2 departs for Chicago—everyone has had an extra-marital fling and a chance to sing and whistle. The picture business can't be that bad off—to have to fall back on this dull piece of bedroom farce.

Propaganda Too Hot For Use on Screen

"THEY SHALL NOT DIE"

Play by John Wexley; presented by the Theatre Guild at the Royale Theatre; directed by Philip Moeller; settings designed by Lee Simonson. Cast: Linda Watkins, Ruth Gordon, Helen Westley, Claude Rains, Thurston Hall, Erskine Sanford, Brandon Peters, Douglas Gregory and 50 others.

New York.—Any powerful document such as "They Shall Not Die" is certain to create a lasting impression in the theatre, certain to stir human hearts and set the old think-tank in motion. With this play, John Wexley has not only improved upon his former works but also carves a permanent niche for himself in the Great American Scene, as the No. 1 dramatist of trampled rights.

His intensely stirring drama of nine negroes unjustly condemned to death in the name of southern fairness and justice, on the trumped up charge of rape of two white girls will, perhaps, keep our light-hearted care-free amusement-seeking element from a serious evening in the theatre. However, those who are social conscious will like this stark realistic play.

With such sterling and expert players as Ruth Gordon, Helen Westley, Claude Rains, Bob Ross, Linda Watkins, Louis John Latzer, Thurston Hall and others delineating the principal roles, the Theatre Guild again has given us as fine a production in cast and setting as money and brains can put together.

The play is a summation of the famous Scottsboro case with which most of the world is at present familiar and which has not yet reached its tragic or happy ending, whichever the future portends. Wexley goes behind the scenes and gives his version of the probable truth—the low character of the two wantons because of whom nine colored men may meet their death—the manner in which they were hounded into testifying for the State—the mass of testimony which presumably exists to show the deliberate frame-up of the nine men.

There are, however, several things which weaken the play, as it now stands. For one, it would have been much better to have opened the play with the trial scene and flashed back to the story of the scene of each witness's version of what really happened. Wexley has purposely sought to win his audience's sympathy at the outset by scenes of brutal terrorizing of the negroes in jail, before their first trial —otherwise the incredible happenings of their second trial, with which the play primarily deals, might not have been entirely credible. As propaganda to awaken people to the true state of affairs Wexley's method is good, but from the standpoint of expertness in play writing the above suggestion would have far better advanced the elements of suspense and curiosity.

Not enough was made of the escape of Lucy Wells from the vicious and vindictive circle of law enforcers down South and she should have been shown coming up North to divulge her confession of the true state of affairs to interested attorneys for the defense. Instead of the stirring appeal she could have made, the attorney in the play representing Samuel Liebowitz in real life is finally convinced he can win the case by arrival of a telegram containing favorable testimony.

Neither was enough made of the persecution of witnesses and the discrediting of palpably perjured witnesses in the course of the trial. We get instead a picture of a courtroom full of inflamed hot-headed lynch-inclined spectators to whom the State's attorneys pander—a picture of an unctious and hypocritical judge—a vicious and relentless prosecutor who drags across the trail of justice the red herring of Civil War rancor, race hatred of negroes and Jews and the honor and safety of Southern womanhood.

Claude Rains' performance as the principal defense attorney has gripping fervor—an impassioned quality that will stir the coldest of hearts. Ruth Gordon has never been better and Linda Watkins does a fine job. As to the play's suitability for transposition to the screen—the time is not yet. It would be far better to consider it several years hence when the case has died down and cinema goers strong enough to stand for a controversial dose of this kind.

Ziegfeld Follies Use Pics for Boosting

New York.—New York stage producers are going exploitation minded and using none other than the movies with which to do the exploiting.

REPORTER AWARD CONTEST NOW EXTENDED TO MARCH 9

Gives Full Time For Guild Voters to Act

At the request of many in the production end of the industry, The Hollywood Reporter today extends the voting time in its Awards of Merit Competition until March 9.

The original date set for closing the polls in this competition was yesterday. However, inasmuch as the idea of this awards competition is to give everyone in the industry the chance to express his or her opinion, this paper gladly extends the time.

Through courtesy of both the Screen Actors' Guild and the Screen Writers' Guild, who have shown a splendid spirit of cooperation in this competition, ballots were mailed this week to several thousand people who had been missed in the original mailing. Today ballots are being mailed to every member of the Screen Writers' Guild. Earlier in the week others were sent to the members of the Screen Actors' Guild. This was done through the assistance of these two organizations.

While every effort has been made to reach all the creative workers, still, in case any have been missed we are today printing a ballot on this page of the Reporter for the use of anyone who has not received one.

In order to have a part in the selection of those who have done outstanding creative work during the past year, just mark this ballot, tear it out and mail it to the Reporter. If you wish to see a complete list of the pictures eligible, just telephone the Reporter office and one will be sent you at once. Otherwise, just make your selection from pictures released during 1933, which is the period covered.

If you are a sound technician, vote for the picture in which you think is found the best example of sound recording. If a cameraman, vote for best photography. If a player, vote for outstanding performance. And EVERYONE may vote for the most outstanding production of the year.

As this is the first time that EVERYONE in the industry has had the chance to honor creative achievement, a tremendous vote is being recorded, and winners of the Reporter awards medals will be given a prize that has been voted them by an ENTIRE industry.

If you haven't voted yet, do so today.

The same men are slated to appear before Group No. 4, which is hearing complaints about code administration. It is not known whether they will appear before both.

Frank Lloyd Makes One Pic for MGM

MGM today closes a deal with Frank Lloyd to direct one picture under Walter Wanger's supervision. Undecided yet whether or not Lloyd will make his "Mutiny on the Bounty" on the ticket. This is outside his two-picture agreement with Fox. Edward Small is negotiating for the director.

Understood that if "Mutiny on the Bounty" is selected, Lloyd will do the picture before taking up his Fox contract, whereas preparation on another assignment will mean his doing the Fox trick first.

New Deal For Agents

embodies the State's ideas, no licenses will be issued on April 1. Which would make it more than April Fool's Day for the local colony of agents.

Already, however, Rlaph Blum acting as attorney for a group of agents, has been able to secure cooperation from the Commission which indicates that compromise may win on April 1. While securing no changes in the Commission's attitude and rules, Blum has secured interpretations and agreements on methods which make the rules more practicable and workable in the industry.

The new rules for example, start out with the statement, "It being understood that the validity of any contract between parties shall depend upon a continuous mutual benefit derived therefrom."

That would solve the headaches of a lot of clients who claim their agents haven't shown any "mutual benefits" for anything like a "continuous" period. But there is more to come.

Paragraph Two states that the contract can be terminated whenever the agent is unable to render services by "reason of physical incapacity, unreasonable absence, or failure to maintain an office."

Which doesn't mean much, because it's pretty hard to catch an agent with a broken leg, and they can always pay office rent.

The kick of the new regulations is in the next two clauses:

First: A client shall only be required to pay a commission where it is clear that the job has been secured by the agent;

Second: "Any written contract must contain a provision that failure of the agency to procure an engagement within four months from the date of the contract, or within four months after the termination of any engagement" shall be cause for termination of the contract.

The regulations close with a statement that EVERY—and it says EVERY—contract between agents and clients shall be filed at once with the office of the State Labor Commissioner.

On one clause, that which states that the client must not pay commission unless it is shown that the agent secured the employment, Blum has secured an agreement with the Commissioner's Deputy that "if the contract is in writing the agent is not required to show that he procured the engagement."

The showdown comes within the next thirty days when the agents get together to write a form of uniform contract which meets with the approval of the Commissioner, as outlined above, and faced by the fact that if they don't submit such a contract by April 1 no new licenses will be issued.

The "tag" line to that being the statement in the Labor Commission's outline, that at any time an agent's license "expires, is revoked, or suspended" ANY CONTRACT BETWEEN THE AGENCY AND CLIENT BECOMES NULL AND VOID.

Import First of Bergner Foreign Made Pictures

New York.—"Ariane," the foreign production starring Elizabeth Bergner, star of "Catherine the Great," will open at the Fifty-fifth Street Playhouse March 6.

LOCAL UNIONS JUBILANT OVER WAGNER UNION BILL

Forced Closed Shop Would Settle Aches

Local unions in the picture industry were jubilant yesterday over the news from Washington that Senator Wagner plans to present a bill to Congress this week that will force employers to recognize trade unions or else find themselves faced with fines that would drive some to bankruptcy.

Union officials yesterday felt that if the Wagner bill is passed by Congress all the difficulties of forcing the provisions of the NRA code will vanish into thin air and the atmosphere will clear between labor and employers in the industry.

Bill, drawn by Senator Wagner, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and research experts of the National Recovery Administration, is said to be really an effort to put teeth into the labor provisions of the NRA by equalizing the bargaining power of labor and capital and to prevent both strikes and lockouts.

It provides penalties ranging from $500 a day for unfair labor practices up to $5000 and a year in jail for assault upon a member of the labor board or any of its agents. Unfair labor practices as defined by the bill include:

Interference in any way with rights of employees to organize and maintain labor unions; refusal to recognize and deal with unions and to make every reasonable effort to reach agreements; participation on the part of employers and their agents in the supervision and formation of labor unions, or in influencing the formation of such unions; contributions by employers or their agents to the financial support of an organization of employees; compensation by employers or their agents of any person for services in an organization of employees; discrimination in hiring or promoting employees because of membership in labor unions.

Though he never actually appears in the Dashiell Hammett novel, MGM will use "The Thin Man" in the screen version of the book. Studio is looking for a very thin person, six feet two inches tall, 50 years old, thin white hair, mustache, and he must bite his finger nails.

Illness Hits Radio On Two Pictures

With two of Radio's players taken ill and confined to their beds yesterday, studio was forced to rearrange the shooting schedule to shoot around the players.

The players ill are Bette Davis, who is playing in "Of Human Bondage," and Lupe Velez, who appears in "Strictly Dynamite."

Vince Sherman Does Walk Four Days Before Closing

Failing even to offer an excuse, Vincent Sherman walked out of the top spot in "The Terrible Turk" at the Pasadena Community Playhouse last night. Seymour Robertson, directing and producing the piece, was forced to assume the role, a diffcult one running into 110 sides.

Player's move left Robertson doing a burn, claiming it was "completely unethical and uncalled for." Piece has four more days to run before closing.

Novarro In and Out

Ramon Novarro gets in the early part of next week from his personal appearances in the east and hops off a few days later for a concert tour of South America. He intends to be away more than four months.

Margaret Ettinger has taken new offices in the California Bank Building and will check out of her present spot in the Taft Building next week for larger quarters.

Kay Johnson Tagged

Kay Johnson was signed yesterday by Radio for one of the featured roles in the Leslie Howard picture, "Of Human Bondage."

What, No Crooner!

Clarence Brown used 300 extras yesterday on his "Sadie McKee" set, and still hasn't found a crooner for one of the chief male roles.

Seek Clive Brook for Two British Leads

London.—Indications are that Clive Brook will have the stellar role in two pictures here very shortly. A and B Films are doing the dickering.

They first wanted Laurence Olivier for the lead in "Blackshirt," but as the run of the New York play "Green Bay Tree" is indefinite an effort is made to get Brook instead. Figure on lending him to Basil Dean for lead in "Java Head" with Anna May Wong as soon as "Blackshirt" is finished. Eddie Cahn will direct both pictures, and Anthony Armstrong and John Paddy Carstairs will do screen plays.

French May Tax Stars To Boost Nation's Pics

Paris.—French Cambre Syndicale has been very active of late in effort to boost French films abroad, and have decided upon a novel scheme to further idea.

Plan being proposed, but likely to meet opposition from players, is to tax the highest paid stars a part of their wages and use this for fund to spread French picture propaganda.

The Brulatour Bulletin, published for more than two years in the leading Cinematographers' publications, was discontinued a few months ago because we felt that the field had been completely covered.

Meantime, scores of cameramen have asked us to resume publication of The Brulatour Bulletin.

Heads of camera departments at practically every major studio have made the same request.

Very recently we have received similar requests from studio production executives who found The Bulletin most helpful in identifying the cinematographers associated with important productions throughout the industry, during actual production period.

At its inception, The Brulatour Bulletin was frankly a publicity feature, designed to extend t he service and good-will of Eastman Kodak Company and J. E. Brulatour, Inc., Distributors of Eastman Films.

It proved to be more than that.

It developed into a barometer of photographic activity—closely observed by cameramen, their immediate department heads and top executives alike. This because it was always dependable, reliable, informative and briefly to the point.

Therefore, Eastman Kodak Company and J. E. Brulatour, Inc., will extend this vital service and henceforth will publish The Brulatour Bulletin each Monday as a feature of The Hollywood Reporter.

First issue Monday, March fifth—every Monday thereafter —Read it.

It will interest the industry.

EXHIBITORS BATTLE ERPI

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THERE have been hundreds of letters that have come to this desk during the past two months from men and women connected with the production end of this business, "daring" us to print them. But they have not been so BOLD as to sign the letters even though we have promised, time and time again, not to use their names in publishing the squawks nor to divulge the source of the bitter documents.

In the past two days there have been eighteen such letters and there is not one that we would not have gladly given space in our Open Forum, IF they had identified themselves. We ask particularly for the name of the author of the essay on Supervisors. It's a most intelligent angle on that situation and one that would cause plenty of comment, but if the writer wants to hide behind his writing with "A Friend of the Reporter" as his sign-off, then it must remain unpublished in so far as this paper is concerned.

Hollywood should have an Open Forum; we have invited such airing of grievances for publication in our columns. But we demand a signature and we pledge that it will never be divulged unless so specified. It is too easy to sit back and cut some person or some act to ribbons believing that we will print it as a manifest of our independence.

Consequently we suggest that the anonymous writers save their time and that of the editors of The Reporter. Unless there is a name and address, the letters will not be printed. If there is a proper identification of the author, we will be glad to give them publication should we feel that they will be of any benefit to the industry. And there is generally benefit to be had from any legitimate squawk.

And trust us, your name will NEVER be revealed should you so wish. So come on, boys and girls, let's have your troubles. We may not be able to help you, but they should prove good reading, if nothing else.

Western Electric Loses

202 New York Indie Houses In Suit To Recover Alleged Over Payments on Parts and Service

New York.—A suit of far-reaching importance to the theatres of the nation was filed here yesterday by 202 independent theatres in the Greater New York territory against Erpi to recover alleged excessive payments for sound parts and servicing of equipment installed in theatres.

The suit comes on the heels of one filed February 15 by Theatre Electrical Service, a local organization, against the American Telegraph and Telephone Company for $3,000,000 alleging a monopoly in the supplying of sound equipment parts which forced exhibitors to pay exorbitant prices.

A Broadway rumor yesterday was that Erpi had offered to go into a huddle with the exhibitors and work out a compromise that would settle the case out of court.

Say Holly Lawyer Hatched MGM Suit

London.—Somewhat of a sensation was created in film circles here yesterday when it was declared that Fanny Holzman, a Hollywood woman lawyer, had prompted Princess Alexandrovna to bring the $2,000,000 libel suit against MGM on the grounds that her reputation was damaged by scenes in "Rasputin."

This charge in the trial of the suit was one of the highlights in a day of sensational testimony during which the prosecution finished its case. Local dailies giving it a bigger play than at any time.

'Rothschild' at N.Y. Astor

The New York opening of "The House of Rothschild" is at the Astor Theatre, on March 14, and not the Rivoli, as erroneously reported yesterday.

Zanuck Bids $60,000 To Get George Raft

George Raft received an offer from Darryl Zanuck to make one picture for $60,000 after Twentieth Century's shutdown period. He is wanted for the top spot in the Damon Runyon story, "Gentlemen, The King," which has been adapted to the screen by Gene Towne and Graham Baker.

Raft's contract with Paramount permits him to make one outside picture a year, but the studio is now talking a deal with the player for a new exclusive contract. If the new Paramount deal does not go through Raft will likely accept the Zanuck offer.

Rosy in N. Y. Labor Sit.

Washington.—Sol Rosenblatt today arranged with Independent Theatre Owners of New York to appoint a committee which will meet with the theatre owners and the IATSE unions to discuss the general labor situation in New York. The committee will probably meet in Washington.

Only $80,000 for '1 Night'

'Bedside' in Mayfair

New York.—Warners is in the midst of a huge ad campaign to launch Jean Muir as a star, but even that couldn't keep "Bedside" from going to the lowly Mayfair for its Broadway first run. It opens Monday night. Muir is also in "As the Earth Turns," which is yet to see its New York bow.

THE LOW DOWN

So it seems there's a beeg attraction for the femmes down at Caliente—in the form of a Mexican doctor who is supposed to be tres handsome and have more sex appeal than Rex, the Wild Horse. Seems, too, that he was first discovered by the wife of a prominent exec—but she by no means has the "exclusive" on him. Oh, no—the gals have been flocking to his more or less professional side in droves. Which is one (or maybe the only) reason that a lot of Hollywood husbands are no longer urged to "come along to Caliente" when the wives shuffle off!

New York has gone completely Hollywood so far as being "camera conscious" and "opening conscious" goes. Even at the Mayfair dances the photographing boys now hop from table to table with their flashlight bulbs, snapping celebs here and there. One of the recent laughs was provided by Lady Furness and Gloria Vanderbilt, who, as everyone knows, have been with A. C. Blumenthal constantly for a long time. But when a camera boy wanted to take their picture the other night—they made "Blumey" leave the table while the pictures were being made! Of course—they let him come back when the check came around!

We had a loud howl when we heard the following: Al Green, it seems, went to the bright, particular producer on a picture he's just finished and said: "I've just seen Frank Borzage's picture 'Man's Castle' and I realize that we have the same opening scene in our picture that he has. I think we ought to remake the opening because the two are identical—a park bench, a girl, a man—and a similar situation, etc."

And the producer answered, "HOW can you say they're the same? One takes place in the daytime—and the other at night!" (!)

Carey Wilson says the only thing wrong with the story that he and Carmelita Geraghty will marry any day is that the event is really set for about two months from now.

New York REVIEWS

"MANDALAY"

Warner-First National prod.; director, Michael Curtiz; writers, Paul Hervey Fox, Austin Parker, Charles Kenyon.

Strand Theatre

Mirror: The story moves too slowly to be burlesque, and the many fine actors play with perfectly straight faces. It is old-fashioned melodrama which succeeds in being mildly entertaining through the well-known excellence of its cast.

American: It is worth the price of admission just to hear Kay's fascinatingly husky intonation of a first-rate torch song which she sings in varying tempos as befit the mood of the drama. And it is also worthwhile to watch the Cortez histrionics in a role of the type in which this trouper excels. Director Curtiz has done well in establishing the eastern atmosphere and save for some repetition tells his tale effectively.

News: The film suffers with lack of reality in continuity and the audience suffers in seeing how the three principals are allowed to overact. This picture has three assets, good photography, colorful settings and Kay's song, called "When Tomorrow Comes."

Herald-Tribune: Considering that "Mandalay" was directed by the artistic Mr. Curtiz and had the darkly beautiful Kay Francis as its star, it is not entirely clear why it turned out to be so dull, unless it is that the plot is a rubber stamp of all tropical stories since motion picture time began.

Times: The screen of the Strand may be as near as most of us will ever get to Rangoon; if it is, "Mandalay" will make an adequate vicarious substitute. A fundamental flaw with the film is that Ricardo Cortez generates so much sympathy as the villain that his demise removes the one character for whom the audience feels anything like affection.

Sun: "Mandalay" is one of the Warners' pleasantly incredible bits of showmanship. Its facts and motivations do not perhaps bear much investigation. Its timing is too swift, its action too crowded, to require much background of character. Of its kind, which isn't bad, it's pretty good.

World-Telegram: The woman with a past which is forever casting shadows over her future is not an unfamiliar figure in the cinema. It is on this plane that Miss Francis and her supporting players have to work—and have, indeed, to work doubly hard, for seldom before has this story been told on the screen with such extreme banality and artificiality.

Cut Looms in MGM Junior Stock List

There is a move on at present at MGM to weed out a large number of the 50 or 60 junior actors receiving from $25 to $100 a week and now attending the talent school on the lot run by Oliver Hinsdell.

The few in this group that show traces of talent will be kept and the others will be dropped to make room for a new crop to be given this coaching.

Out of the group enlisted in the past year Jean Parker, Mary Carlisle and Irene Hervey have stepped right into the big time, with Miss Parker hitting stardom.

Los Indios in Close Defeat

Los Indios polo four went down to defeat in a regular moving picture finish to Midwick yesterday by the margin of one goal. The game had a strong motion picture flavor, with Darryl Zanuck and Hal Roach both riding in the No. 1 position. The final score was 13 to 12, with Zanuck almost upsetting the Midwick cart by a miraculous shot that just missed the goal by inches as the eighth chukker ended. The winning goal was scored by Eric Pedley in the ninth chukker.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Bill:

Thanks for the good words on Capra. Any praise for him is a slam at Pseudoism, and a boost for genuine entertainment and genuineness all around.

Capra's pictures are what they are because he is what he is. No gaudy defenses for inferiority. No swagger of imagined genius. No pseudo-pioneering, no pretense to Symbolism and Technique, nor any of the other tricks of make-up. His simplicity is really an idiosyncrasy here—and that is a comment on our sunny town, Bill, and its product.

Once I found myself defining a successful producer as "a man who had a Capra for a director." I caught myself in time. As you know, with more Capras, there would be no jobs for eminent supervisors like myself.

As ever,
MYLES CONNOLLY.

MEMBERS OF WRITERS' GUILD OKAY NEW 'WORKING RULES'

Walkout Clause Left to Board

The Screen Writers' Guild announced yesterday that Articles 12 to 16, inclusive, for its Code of Working Rules have been adopted by a three-quarters vote of the active membership; and that all the proposed amendments of the by-laws have been passed.

The new articles, with the exception of Article 12, will go into effect within five days after the publishing date of the Screen Writers' Bulletin, which is now going to the printers.

Article 12, which is being withheld, is to be put into effect at the discretion of the Executive Board, according to the announcement. This article, it is pointed out, makes it possible for the Guild, in case of a strike or walkout, to prevent studios from signing important writers to contracts and eliminating them from joining their fellow Guild members in any group action.

Also, under this article the Executive Board has the right to limit members to sign contracts beyond a named date. This, however, they explain, does not affect any contracts signed now or in future, until the Board issues such an order. Even after the order is issued members may sign contracts if they obtain a clause to the effect that the contractual member may walk out with his fellow Guild members in case a producer is declared unfair.

Article 13 is somewhat similar, but more limited. Under this article the Executive Board has the power to prohibit signing of contracts with any producer in cases where the Board is voting on whether or not the producer is unfair.

Article 14 is aimed to insure honesty and fair dealing among members. It provides the vital information regarding term contracts and deals shall be given the Executive Board. Also provides that every Guild member file with Guild a copy of his present contract under which he is working, or any new contract he may make. This applies to week to week agreements as well as term, also to contracts for sale of material. Members are also compelled to furnish full information as to whether employed and terms. This part of the article, it is explained, will not be put into effect until the Board has worked out proper machinery for functioning.

A penalty of $10,000 is to be inflicted upon any Guild official who divulges any of the confidential information relative to contracts and terms given by members.

Article 15 pertains to story credits and advertising. Article 16 is devised for free lance writer employed to do job for lump sum. In it is the statement that no free lance writer may write on speculation.

Unions Picket N. Y. On Wholesale Scale

New York.—It was warfare yesterday on the New York theatre front when, in the greatest mass picketing ever attempted in New York, operators from Local 306 and the Allied Operators Union picketed all New York picture theatres.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BURNEY

"Dodsworth" brought out one of the swankiest audiences ever seen at a Broadway play opening . . . Among the creme de la creme of notables were Sam Katz, Lawrence Tibbetts, Edmund Lowe, Lil Tashman, Harry Warner, Sol Rosenblatt, Clayton Sheehan, David Sarnoff, Tullio Carminati, Paul de Kruif, George Palmer Putnam, Russell Holman, Dick Halliday, John Bryam and about ten tons of ermine and sable wraps on the backs of Society blue-bloods . . . boy, oh, boy, how a Max Gordon premiere brings 'em out . . . Walter Huston, complete master of himself both in the play and in his curtain speech and evidently gratified by the swell reception accorded the play said: "It is a great pleasure to be back on the stage again after four years in Hollywood." And if he had known how well the play would go over he would have come back to the stage much sooner.

Wonder if Spencer Tracy, now on the top rung of cinema success, can look back three years ago when he was rehearsing in a Sam Harris-Owen Davis play "Dread" . . . It was tried out in only two spots, Washington and Newark, and then folded . . . leaving Tracy broke, worried and discouraged. . . . In the cast with Tracy incidentally were Helen Mack, Madge Evans and George Meeker.

We defy any Hollywood-senseless-divorce to top this one. . . In Chicago Mrs. Helen Rowland sued for her freedom and got it on the ground that for 27 years of her marriage her husband never relaxed his formality enough to address her in any other manner than "Mrs. Rowland." . . . In Philadelphia, the Presbyterian Ministerial Association adopted a resolution requesting newspapers to eliminate pictures and articles which refer to motion picture stars as "Dumb Doras." . . . Will the Casting Bureaus stand up and give three cheers?

Two fine examples of gallantry come to mind, both of them extremes. . . . A Denver man was divorced by his wife because he was so cruel he didn't even hold his wife's chair when she was seating herself at a dinner party . . . and in Devonport, England . . . where fire broke out in a local shop . . . a cat, ignoring smoke and flame, entered the shop three times and each time brought out a mouse.

The mystery of what makes Flaming Youth so reckless and sex-crazy is solved at last, according to Professor Watson of Columbia University. . . . It isn't the "movies," joy rides, dance-halls or just bad gin . . . no sir . . . as the doc explains it, "The basic tragedy of American youth in 1934 is that so few have anything to live for. . . . Boys get mixed up in sex because they have nothing else to play around with."

Cain at MGM

GORDON'S 'DODSWORTH' GETS NEW YORK CRITICS' RAVES

Huston the Hi-Lite In Sure Screen Bet

"DODSWORTH"

Max Gordon presents Walter Huston in Sinclair Lewis' famous novel; dramatized by Sidney Howard; directed by Robert Sinclair; settings by Jo Mielziner; at the Shubert Theatre. Cast: Walter Huston, Nan Sunderland, Fay Bainter, Harlan Briggs, John Williams, Hal K. Dawson, Frederic Worlock, Kent Smith and 28 others. Three acts, 14 scenes.

New York.—"Dodsworth" spells an evening of substantial adult entertainment in the theatre. With three of this season's biggest hits already adding lustre to his fame and a modicum of gold to his pocket, namely: "Her Master's Voice," "Roberta" and "The Shining Hour," with "Dodsworth" Gordon assumes the mantle of New York's leading producer of legitimate successes—not alone in point of number but in quality too. Such tribute goes not unnoticed, judging by the smartest and most important audience of the year.

To the observant Lewis' book and play, so excellently adapted to the stage by Sidney Howard, is the old tale of the eternal triangle in several versions—plus the saga of Main Street's leading citizens when they spread their wings in search of adventure, beauty and love. Nevertheless, the sharply etched and poignancy of bitter realization depicted by Lewis, Howard, Huston and Bainter, impresses one with the inevitable finality of life: boundaries. The hands of time move forward inexorably.

In the beginning we may laugh at and with Sam Dodsworth and his spouse who thinks 40 is still a splendid age for romance in spite of a humdrum life in a mid-west city as the wife of a business automaton. Sam is persuaded by Mrs. Dodsworth he ought to retire from activity and the prosaic automobile business in which he has achieved wealth. Yes, laugh at their delight in discovering the charm of the old world and their initial success at making new friends among penurious aristocrats of England, France, Germany, Austria and Italy. But soon your heart goes out in sympathy to Sam in his disillusionment and Frau's pitiful attempt to hold on to youth and love of a more romantic kind than Sam has ever known how to give.

As the rupture between this Zenith, Ohio, couple widens and Frau's eyes remain shut to Sam's breaking heart, you feel that Sam should haul off and beat some sense into her attractive head. But no, Sam cannot bring himself to feel that way, hoping against hope that his wife will return to him.

Eventually, after her second serious romance founders on the shoals of truth from the lips of an ancient Viennese grandame, Frau's quest for the unattainable is ended and she calls off the divorce. But too late to rescue the fish from the fire—as Sam has found solace elsewhere and Frau "gets the air."

As the gruff, bluff, automotive executive, Huston repaid Max Gordon for his faith in him for this role. Miss Bainter never had a role as fat as this nor ever played better. The rest of the cast, the workmanlike expert job done by Sinclair and Mielziner's faithful settings, all were highly satisfactory.

"Dodsworth" as a film is almost all arranged for in advance, if Huston plays it in shadowland.

Month from Stage to Screen on 'Showoff'

Pasteur Theme Also On Paramount's List

New York.—They are all climbing aboard that idea of Winnie Sheehan's, a picture on the life of Pasteur. Research on this story was the reason given for his last European trip. A few days ago it became known that Warners were considering a yarn on the subject, and now Paramount has dug up a play produced here some years ago by Henry Miller based on the life of Pasteur.

Paramount has the inside track on a deal for "Yellow Jack," which opens here Tuesday night, and is holding the Miller play up its sleeve in case the "Yellow Jack" deal falls through.

'Dark Tower' Goes Mon.

With Archie Mayo directing, Warners will put "The Dark Tower" into work Monday. Edward G. Robinson, Mary Astor and Ricardo Cortez have the top spots. Tom Reed and Niven Busch have scripted from the Alexander Woollcott and George S. Kaufman New York stage play.

MGM yesterday called off immediate production on the Dashiell Hammett novel "The Thin Man," in which William Powell was to have been starred under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke, and has switched both the director and star to do "Manhattan Melodrama" instead.

The cast of the latter picture now includes Clark Gable, William Powell and Myrna Loy in the top spots. The David Selznick unit is producing.

REELING around LONDON

This week's big hand, laurel wreath and Mister Winchell's orchid go to Junior Fairbanks for the performance of his career in Alex Korda's production "Catherine the Great." In the opinion of this scribe young Fairbanks is going to rank Number One Male Star in the very near future; one film critic thought he overacted in this pic, with another saying he underplayed; we'll take vanilla because we think he was swell! . . . The magnetic Elizabeth Bergner won torrents of applause for her British talkie debut, but methinks she was miscast.

Paul Muni slipped very quietly into town and out, as did Tom Moore, just in time to read Adela Rogers St. Johns' opening chapter of the Fairbanks-Pickford love story. . . . After he had taken a photo for his paper of James Whale leaving for Hollywood, the newshound then asked who Whale was, a famous actor? . . . As another scribbler wanted to know if Dave Bader (seeing Jimmie off) had played the part of the Invisible Man, we think it's high time some of those Fleet Street boys went to a movie!

The Cary Grants took a basin of tea with the H. W. Bunny Austins prior to leaving for home here, and the conversation steered round to things that one could not say in England and America—with highly comic and disastrous results! . . . Virginia wanted to stay just about a day before the boat sailed because both Gaumont and BIP increased their very substantial offers. . . . Bill O'Brien eagerly scanning the American papers for news of Liz Allen in "Men in White," reason being Metro has taken up her option and this pic definitely settled it. . . . Chris Dee column in the Dispatch here commented on a letter received from Tom Mix to say he had just decided to leave the screen and join a circus—hm, that letter musta taken a coupla years crossing that ole debbil Atlantic. . . . The London press did a few nip-ups over Dorothy Wilson this week and also wondered when Hollywoodians would do right by lovely Ann Harding (you see we aint seen "Gallant Lady" yet) . . . Sol G. Newman and henchman Ralph Hanbury taking time out after fillum work for Radio, to look-see legit shows. . . . Leslie Williams pulled a grand stunt for Universal with his trade show tickets in a passport form with the tag "Passport to Universal Entertainment." Kinda neat, Steve! . . . and Paramount did a nice exploitation job on "Eight Girls in a Boat"—sure, we know it had lotsa exploitation angles and they did right by it, so there!

We'll try and send Rowlie V. Lee and the Lasky boys a pot of Fortnum and Mason caviar for that swelegant job "I Am Suzanne." . . . And what with every company now going after long titles we were not surprised when that caption writer dabbed his soup-stained bosom with an "I'm a Fugitive from a Water-covered Shirt Front!" . . . Dorothy Bouchier (still awaiting a real screen break) is going back to "Chili" Bouchier again—it's hotter—and it suits her!

There is a studio in town where you can grab yourself a supervisor's berth for about ten grand. . . . Chris Mann Savoy Grilling Molly Lamont t'other evenin', Julius Hagen of St. Margarets, Director Maurice Elvey, Lothar Mendes, Actor Donald Calthrop and Musician Noel Gay also there. . . . George Grossmith at the Plaza of an evening.

Dave Sarnoff, the Tim Whelans, Claire Luce, Laura LaPlante and Irving Asher made up an all-American dinner party at the Louis Starlings recently. . . . Ernest Betts had not heard of Ted Healy until February 10 this year; fie fie! and Ernest is film critic to the Sunday Express. . . . Frank Joyce, Charlie Laughton and Irving Thalberg had a long London-Hollywood tele talk to okay Buster's doing the job opposite Norma at Culver City.

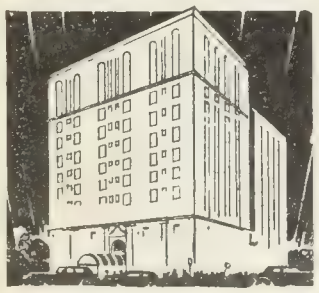
TODAY'S FILM NEWS TODAY

ERPI DEMONSTRATES NEW 'NATURAL SOUND' DEVICE



Electrical Research Products, Inc., yesterday announced what it declares to be a more sensational development in sound recording than was silent recording. It is a new device which it is claimed will eliminate all unnaturalness in sound on the screen.

This week a demonstration was given at the Erpi laboratories on Santa Monica boulevard before the heads of the sound departments of most of the Hollywood studios. As a result, the device is being tried out at Warners, Fox, Columbia, Paramount, MGM and the United Artists lots.

Blurred sound, huskiness of movie voices and varied sound distortion which has many times marred otherwise perfect recording will be eliminated, according to the Erpi officials' claims, by the use of this new development. Even screen kisses will no longer sound like a cow pulling its foot out of the mud or like a pistol shot, but will be recorded naturally.

Present distortion mostly caused by difficulty of running a film at an even, regular speed during the recording process, Erpi officials point out. The new device, they claim, controls the passage of an electric current to a millionth of a second and thus overcomes this difficulty. With it they claim it is possible to record accurately whether film is intermittently stationary or moving at an irregular pace. Device developed here and in Bell Telephone laboratories in New York.

Et Tu, Caesar!

In an argument with Henry Henigson, Arthur Caesar declared that the writers who slam the picture business seem to be making the most money, which is what he plans. "First thing I'm going to do is write a book about supervisors and call it 'Little Mind, What Now?'"

More Exhib Howls On Code Authority

New York.—More headaches piling up for the Code Authority, as exhibitor opposition gains strength and voice.

Setting Sherman Right

Vincent Sherman, actor, out here a few months from New York, seems to be the victim of a twisted news story in the account of his departure from "The Terrible Turk" in Pasadena. "Warners and Paramount," stated one member, "had a fight over who has the right to give free contract talent to the Pontiac radio hour. Warners won, and they're the worst set against our broadcast idea, which is hard to understand when they say that their exhibitors complain against it. The Pontiac hour goes on Saturday night during the hour in greatest competition to pictures."

Extension of Award Date Meets With Approval

Widespread appreciation was expressed yesterday by many in the industry for the extension of time given for voting in the Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit Competition.

Originally intended that polls close on February 28, but flood of requests for extension resulted in setting March 9 as closing date. This was done so that EVERYONE in the industry would be given a chance to vote in this, the first competition in which the industry as a whole does the selecting of those to be honored for outstanding achievement.

Judging from the ballots that poured into The Reporter office yesterday, many had overlooked the closing date. All are urged now to send in ballots as early as possible so that there will be no slip at the end and no one will be deprived of voting.

If you have not received a ballot, and did not use the ballot printed in yesterday's Reporter, one will be sent you if you telephone or write The Reporter office. And—remember—when you mark your ballot be sure to indicate the name of the picture in which your player, director or cinematographer does his best work. Otherwise your vote will not count.

And—Vote NOW!

Work For Love In Future, Says Rice

Washington.—Elmer Rice, famous playwright, speaking at the Jewish Community Center today, created a sensation when he belittled motion picture censors and capitalists, classed as "trash" the pictures "Grand Hotel" and "Dinner at Eight," and pointed with hope to the Soviet theatre.

Rice declared that the commercial theatre of today is doomed in the future, adding that playwrights and actors would join hands and produce plays minus the producer, for the sheer joy of the work, and with no thought of profits.

POLITICS BUBBLES OVER EXTRA COMMITTEE LIST

A well defined movement was on foot yesterday in the ranks of the Hollywood extra players to have one member of the Code Committee for Extras removed and a woman "extra" put on the committee in that member's place.

Just how they plan to go about the shift was not explained, but a number of prominent extras were outspoken in saying that they feel a woman representative of the extras should be on the committee.

Incidentally it developed that such a movement solves one of the squawks of the extra players. While they are quite satisfied with practically the entire makeup of the committee, there is a number who are bitterly opposed to one male member. They figure that by putting over the idea of having a woman extra on the committee they will make it easier to get the one man off that they are opposed to.

Feeling in favor of Mrs. Mable Kinney is growing by leaps and bounds in extra ranks. "She is turning out to be a good egg," is the way many of them now speak of the chairman of this committee.

Radio Buys Berlin's 'Manhattan Madness'

Who's Lion Shy?

MGM has been having some little difficulty in getting a player for a singular role in "Sequoia." A pet mountain lion made David Landau and Tully Marshall change their minds about the part owing to its playful habit of taking a swipe at a player and tripping him up. Paul Hurst finally signed for it.

CHURCH WAR ON FILMS

TRADE VIEWS by W.R. WILKERSON

•THE casting problem is becoming a greater problem each and every day; all because the majority of our production heads have no vision nor have they the good sense to advance this industry by the creation of new casts. It's a damned shame.

Pictures are being rushed into production with the casts all screwy. The poor director or the writer has NOTHING to say, that is, what they say means nothing. The producers throw any person that is available into spots that ruin the picture even before it gets started and then we wonder why most pictures are so bad.

All this cooperation between the major studios to help one another out in their casting difficulties was—and is—a lot of bunk. There is not a studio in town that can properly cast its yearly output of pictures. And the worst part of it is that ALL of the studios are carrying people, who, if given a chance, might blossom into production assets instead of studio liabilities or producer comforts.

There is absolutely no effort exerted in an attempt to create new screen faces. They can't be created unless they are given a chance to show what they can do and that's just the stumbling block. Those in charge of a production would rather miscast a name, thereby hurting and possibly ruining a picture, than give an unknown a chance.

Occasionally, for one reason or another, a new face is given a chance and just as often makes good, and on comes the rush from other producers trying to borrow that new face, willing to pay a hundred times the price they could have had the person for IF they were willing to do a little gambling.

There has been no real casting in this town since the LeMaire-Zanuck combination started to work on all fours at Warners three years ago. They took chances and made more stars in a single year than the others were able to dig up in the past ten.

Hollywood is filled with important artists who are virtually starving for opportunities while the producers are starving the whole industry because they won't give them a chance.

You figure it out—if it requires that.

Warner Trust Suit To Start March 13

Roxy to Europe; Ducking Para Deal

New York.—There is much mystery over the sudden collapse of the deal for Roxy and His Gang to do twelve weeks of personal appearances for the Paramount key houses.

On the eve of signing the papers Rothafel withdrew yesterday and sailed for Europe on the Olympic last night. The action gave new life to rumors that he is considering a July deal with MGM.

Mystery About Names On San Francisco Boards

New York.—Additional Clearance and Grievance Boards have been named for Washington, Philadelphia and San Francisco, but will not be made public until the Code Authority approves them at the next meeting on March 9.

Much speculation here about the identity of the San Francisco names because of the strong protest of independent exhibitors there against efforts to side-track Morgan Walsh and George Mann.

Gable Formality Done

MGM yesterday clipped a coupon off the Clark Gable contract, extending it for another year. A group of assignments are being lined up which will keep the player on the hop for the next few months.

New York.—One of those things that you have often read about but were never able to have confirmed is causing the locals here a lot of laughs.

RAMBLING REPORTER

The "Candid Camera" is getting to be quite a menace in Hollywood—flocks of locals now have them, and one intrepid song-writer snapped Eph Asher, with two black eyes, smoked glass and a beautiful girl, lunching at Palm Springs—and then he hopped over and all unbeknownst to Mitch Leisen snapped the director as he was illustrating a very swishy dance step on the set at Paramount the other day to some girls in the scene! . . . New York REVIEWS

"MYSTERY OF MR. X"

MGM prod.; director, Edgar Selwyn; writers, Phillip MacDonald, Howard Emmett Rogers, Monckton Hoffe.

Capitol Theatre

Times: An ingenious pot-pourri of excitement, fun and romance. Edgar Selwyn, the director of this production, gives to his task a good pace and a satisfactory conception of London atmosphere.

Herald-Tribune: We should be grateful for the smooth and finished quality of the production, the humor and dexterity that have gone into the dialogue and the situations, the admirable playing of an expert cast and the general effectiveness of the narrative.

Mirror: This Scotland Yard thriller is an exceptionally good one. Its harrowing suspense is relieved with charming humor. Its romantic theme is strong and appealing. It is tastefully produced and brilliantly acted by an unusually attractive cast. The unusual quality of genuine romantic charm lifts this far above the usual detective thriller. Don't miss it.

Sun: A lot better than its title promises. Rather a jolly picture full of pleasant little chuckles and merry incident. Director Selwyn has, with a handsome production, managed to keep the London atmosphere.

News: One of the most exciting adventures I've encountered on a Broadway screen recently. The picture has been directed with a great deal of skill by Edgar Selwyn and is thoroughly well acted not only by Montgomery but by Henry Stephenson.

American: One of the most entertaining mystery comedy dramas seen since Jimmy Walker was the talk—and the toast—of the town. It's full of laughs, suspense is delightfully maintained and its climactic sequences possess an excitement that called forth a variety of squeals, shrieks and screams from a house jammed with paying guests.

World-Telegram: Full of action, suspense, sly humor, romance and good character drawing, as well as adroit playing by its principal performers.

Post: If you do not insist too much on plausibility you will find it continuously interesting. It swerves neatly from a pleasant kind of drawing-room comedy to hair-raising thrills. With the expert acting of Montgomery and the supporting cast, aided by intelligent dialogue and facile direction, both these aspects of the picture ring true.

Journal: An entertaining romance is woven into the yarn. Suspense is neatly sustained in the piece and the cast is excellent. In addition to Montgomery, who is grand in his role, and Miss Allen, who is decorative, the players include Ralph Forbes, Henry Stephenson and Lewis Stone.

'Thin Man' Script Set

Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich turn in their completed script today to Hunt Stromberg on "Thin Man." Writing team also check off the MGM payroll on a six month absence during which they will put a play on Broadway.

Soviet Offer for Rapper

Irving Rapper, MGM contract director, received a cable from Moscow yesterday offering a deal to direct the stage play, "Five Star Final," at the Lenin-Soviet theatre. He directed this play in London about two years ago.

Joe Rivkin Coming

New York.—Joe Rivkin, associated with Leo Morrison, leaves by plane for the Coast today to line up film stars for personal appearances and also cover the breach while Morrison goes to Honolulu for a vacation.

subsidiary for RKO-Radio. Plans and policies of J. R. McDonough and M. H. Aylesworth during their recent trip here were stamped. Former will divide his time between studio and New York. Purpose is to weld a closer understanding between the widely separated divisions of the organization.

The action of the Board and subsequent announcement set at rest rumors that B. B. Kahane was dissatisfied with the new deal and contemplated resigning.

Film Notables on List For 'Tingel Tangel' Bow

Frederick Hollander at his tea for the press gave five selected numbers from "Allay Oop," the revue that will open the new Tingel-Tangel theatre Monday night. Nothing like this show has been seen in Hollywood since Balieff brought his "Chauve-Souris" here. The Tingel-Tangel is a national institution in Germany.

Reservations for opening night already include Gloria Swanson, Marlene Dietrich, Josef von Sternberg, Ernst Lubitsch and most of the other members of the Hollywood German colony.

Repeat 'Snow in August'

"Snow in August," which was presented at the Pasadena Workshop last Saturday night, will be repeated tonight at popular request. Whole flock of folks from Antelope Valley going because that is where yarn is laid.

Herb Moulton a Daddy

Herb Moulton, Paramount advertising man, became the father of a baby girl yesterday. Mother is at the St. Vincent's Hospital. Incubator baby weighed less than two pounds, but is coming along neatly.

Sparks Buys 'Spit Fire'

New York.—The Sparks Circuit, covering Florida, has closed a special deal for early running of "The Spitfire" to cash in on the tourist trade interest in Hepburn.

OPEN FORUM

Dear Bill:

May I add my modest indorsement to Myles Connolly's letter regarding a certain Frank Capra. I personally believe it is time we pushed things aside and let this genius step out into the full light.

Concerning your present campaign to determine the best of this and that in the motion picture industry for the past year I personally suggest that you abandon the contest so far as the directors are concerned, throw the ballots into the Seine, and allow this Capra guy to occupy the position he has deserved for a great number of years past.

Give him the cup and go back into the grocery business.

Humbly and sincerely,
GREGORY LA CAVA.

Zirn Knocked Out But Bobs Up Again

New York.—Attorney Samuel Zirn, who is leaving no stone unturned in an effort to upset the present Paramount set-up, lost out in the Appellate Division of the New York Supreme Court yesterday, but announced he will appeal still further to the United States Supreme Court.

Zirn appeared for Herbert S. Levy, a Paramount bondholder, who alleges negligence on the part of Para officers in allowing stock repurchase deals, and transfer of negatives to Film Productions.

Henry Guttman Returns

Henry Guttman returns this morning from New York by plane. Figures on polishing off several details here for the production on Broadway of his play "Red Commissar."

Reed Turns Tables

Reed put in a word for him he was promised reinstatement. This was weeks ago.

Yesterday Walter Reed became the owner of the City, having bought the 75 percent interest in the house held by Harley Clarke, and the relative went back on the door.

And that's not all. Reed has made an offer to the receivers for the whole Skouras operated metropolitan chain and one that insiders believe the receivers will accept.

It would be funny if that firing of the relative would unseat the Skouras boys entirely in this sector.

UNION EXPLOSION IS DUE WITH ARRIVAL OF ELLIOTT

Ill-Fated Strike Set For Airing

With the arrival here of President William C. Elliott of the IATSE, one of the biggest "blow-offs" in the history of the organization is expected. When the smoke clears, those close to the situation say that Elliott will either be in the union doghouse or else several individuals connected with the local IATSE unions will find themselves out.

The matter has been simmering at varying degrees of heat ever since the ill-fated strike was called and lost last summer. In practically every one of the IATSE groups there have been murmurings and grumblings that at times have reached an ominous rumble. Charges and counter-charges have been hurled back and forth via the sub rosa trail. But, due to the weakening of the IATSE groups' position with the losing of the strike, nothing has come out in the open.

Chief howl on the part of the grumblers was anent the calling of the strike and its handling. Upshot of it all was that as the buck was passed back and forth it eventually was tossed into Mr. Elliott's lap, and the general impression was given that if anyone blundered it was Elliott.

There have been many stories told regarding the way the strike started and why it was lost. Throughout the industry it has been pretty generally accepted that if the first cameramen who belonged to the ASC had walked out and stayed out with the others the complexion of the entire strike results would have been changed for all of the IATSE groups.

And so, when some of the grumblers charged that certain union officials had been told these men would not stand by the strikers, and then called the strike anyway, it has caused rankling that has become very bitter.

One of the charges being made is that certain union officials were called into conference with the ASC group the night the strike was to go into effect. The story is that these officials were told by ASC men that if the strike was called they would not support it. Then, according to the charges, the union officials talked until after twelve o'clock and finished the conversation by saying:

"Well, it is twenty minutes after twelve, gentlemen. Whether you realize it or not, you have been on strike for twenty minutes."

Members of the various locals declare that if this is so the strike should have been stopped before the order went into effect. They feel that there is much that must come to the surface, and that if there is any blame it must be cleared up and placed on the proper shoulders.

It is understood that Elliott has been closely in touch with the local situation, and that before he leaves Hollywood the whole matter is due to explode.

'Let's Be Ritzy' Far Too Scorching

Universal had a studio showing of "Let's Be Ritzy" last night for the critics, and the high light of the evening came when a reel jammed in the machine, burned up, and caused the calling off the show. The climax was not in the original script.

Nothing Hot in New B'way Plays

New York.—Nothing to excite picture story buyers in the two openings on Broadway this week, "Ragged Army" and "When in Rome."

Openings next week include the much discussed "Yellow Jack" at the Martin Beck, Tuesday; and "Too Much Party" at the Masque, Monday. "Wednesday's Child," bought for pictures by Radio, closes its run at the Longacre tonight.

Tuchock-Radio Deal Remains Up in Air

Radio yesterday refuted the report that the studio owned "Portrait of a Rebel."

Company is cold on the yarn and has not worked out a new deal with Wanda Tuchock, who was said to be working on the story. Negotiations, however, are in progress and writer-director is scripting her own original idea untitled.

U. A. Official to Russia

New York.—Arthur W. Kelly, vice president of United Artists, sails for Europe shortly. One of the main objects of trip is visit to Russia to confer with Soviet officials regarding boosting of his company's pictures there, this being the only country throughout the world in which United Artists has no distributing organization.

Nancy Carroll at Springs

A shuffle in the schedule of "Springtime for Henry" at Fox has given Nancy Carroll a chance to get away to Palm Springs for a rest. She plans a five-day stay.

Weather Wallops Broadway Grosses

New York.—Picture theatres took it on the chin in New York last week, none of the houses giving any signs of approaching records.

Final check up on "It Happened One Night" at the Music Hall showed $86,000. Other figures for the week are: "Mystery of Mr. X," Capitol, overcame the weather to a good $53,-200; "Death Takes a Holiday," Paramount, $44,000; "Palooka," at the Rivoli, will probably do $38,000 for its first week ending Monday night, a good figure under conditions; "Hips, Hips, Hooray," eight days at the Roxy, $29,500; "Dark Hazard," Rialto, $15,000; "Mandalay," second week at Strand, $11,500; "Orient Express," Mayfair, $8300.

NRA to Jump on Local Theatre Give-Aways

Local theatres indulging in the practice of giving "passes" good for admission to theatres upon payment of a "service charge" will be placed on the NRA pan very shortly, according to announcement yesterday by Charles E. Cunningham, head of the local NRA Compliance Board.

Investigation of this practice follows a ruling from Washington that such tactics are unfair and a violation of the code. Survey will be made and theatre managers will first be warned to stop the practice.

New Soviet Film

New York.—The Soviet film "Broken Shoes" will be released here this month. It is first production of Margarita Barskaya.

WRITERS' BOARD SAYS APR. MEETING CAN DECIDE ISSUE

The Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild, in a statement issued last night, threw down the gauntlet to any dissenting or rebellious members of their organization who might wish change of leadership, and asked them to attend the annual membership meeting on April 5 and present their squawks out in the open at that time.

Accusing the "rebel" members of the organization of "hiding behind anonymous press attacks," the Board declared that among this group "is a handful of members who have always wanted to destroy the Guild and leave the writers of Hollywood no other organization for their protection except the outworn Academy."

The statement points out that the fact that Articles 12 to 16 of the Guild's code were passed within the last few days by a majority vote of more than 75 percent of the active members proves the Guild is in no danger of being disrupted by dissenters. Board also explains that any member of the Board may be removed by a vote of only 60 percent of the active members.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By JERRY WALD

Finding himself lonesome with so many of the other microphoners down in Florida, Jack Pearl left for there after his radio airing last week. . . . And starting April 22 Jimmy Durante replaces Eddie Cantor on that coffee program. . . . The program will be radioed from the Coast, with Dave Rubinoff and his fiddle leaving for those parts April 15. . . . Cantor starts on his annual picture for Goldwyn, which we understand is to be an Arabian background, so you can expect Cantor has a sheik. . . . And while on the subject of pictures, it looks like Master Phil Harris will be out in Hollywoodland this summer for a picture. . . . With what company has us stumped! . . . March 2 found Sally Rand, her fans and what-have-you at the Brooklyn Paramount.

There's a newsreel war on between the Embassy and the Trans-Lux, with both theatres using all sorts of ballyhoo methods to bring the folks with their quarters into their theatres. . . . Leonard Goldstein (whose twin brother looks after the managerial headaches of Abe Lyman) is now looking after Harold Stern, whose music making crew plays at the Montclair Hotel. . . . Ona Munson hikes to California for a short visit, then shoots back here and on to London to play in the English production of "Her Master's Voice." . . . Tony Canzoneri, the fighting lad, is the latest to join the flock of short producers here in town. . . . Tony's first effort will be a musical two-reeler with Ozzie Nelson and Harriet Hilliard of the Wild Waves, with Educational set to release the picture. . . . The flop of "Queer People" will set its producers back some one hundred grand, which in these days is DOUGH.

Jack Cohn has a mad on against those "star systems" of reviewing. . . . Eddie Dowling goes into production on April 1 with "Big Hearted Herbert" and using Eddie Nugent, who is starring in the stage production, in the screen vehicle. . . . Mary Pickford, if you care to know, is sitting in with Elsie Janis on the rehearsals of Leonard Sillman's new revue, which had suffered backer trouble until last week. . . . Art Jarrett is a-coming east with his wife for some personals around the Loew circuit, while Jarrett, Sr., might go plane-ing to the Coast at the call of Bill Rowland. . . . Al Christie is trying to snare the radio Easy Aces for a six-picture deal.

spot that was occupied by M. C. Levee about two years ago, but which has been unoccupied since he left the organization. Hurley's present duties of handling the writers will likely be added to the duties of A. M. Botsford and the producing of westerns will also be shifted to someone else.

'RAGGED ARMY' SOCIAL PLAY HEAVY FOR ENTERTAINMENT

Screen's Wide Scope Might Improve It

"RAGGED ARMY"

Play by Beulah Marie Dix and Bertram Millhauser; presented by Crosby Gaige at the Selwyn Theatre; staged by Crosby Gaige and assisted by Felix Jacoves; settings by Ramond Sovey. Cast: Alice Ann Baker, Irby Marshall, Lalive Brownell, Ann Dere, Mathilde Baring, Johnny Downs, Justine Wayne; Emily Lowry, Thomas Chalmers, Roy Roberts, Lee Baker, Lloyd Nolan, Edwin Vickery, Fleming Ward, Roy Gordon, Byron Shores, Richard Bartel, Forrest Taylor, Philip Van Zant and William Dorbin.

New York.—The most exciting thing about "Ragged Army" is the fact that for the second time in less than a week the Broadway stage has opened its doors to a play that is neither a retreat to the musty pages of history for its drama nor to the shopworn subject matter of racketeering crime as presented in the newspapers for its themes.

Here, as in the Guild play "They Shall Not Die," we have an attempt to throw some light, even though it be the highly artificial light of the theatre, upon current, social and economic problems that have hitherto dominated the conversation and interest of the speakeasies but had not succeeded in breaking through the traditional reserve and caution of the theatre.

"Ragged Army" tries to show that our fighting ancestors—of Bennington, Saratoga, Bunker Hill—were Revolutionists no less than the striking mill-hands and marching waiters of today. This it tries to show by the use of a device faintly suggestive of "Berkeley Square" and only faintly succeeds in accomplishing its purpose.

The Page family of Dunbury are well-born, aristocratic, financially powerful and socially important. At the outset of the play they are concerned about two problems: Mrs. Page, chairman of the pageant committee, has invited Geoffrey Carver, famous Broadway actor and descendant of one of the old Dunbury families, to play the leading role in the tableau to be given shortly.

Mr. Page, head of the local mill industry, is concerned about the fact that the strike of his employees which has been in progress for several weeks has resulted in bombings and threats of riots, all under the instigation of a radical leader named Rubini.

These two apparently incongruous themes are merged through the love affair of the daughter of the household with a young Irish law student whose class consciousness causes him to take sides with the workers.

In a more or less fantastic second act the authors try to show the attempt of the powerful interests to down the Revolutionary spirit of the mob while the real or fantastic character (this is never explained), Geoffrey Bryant, brings home to these pseudo-aristocrats the realization of the fact their ancestors were inspired and driven by the same feelings and thoughts that are stirring up the strikers on the other side of town today.

Here are the elements of a good play—a mixture of fantasy and realism, an idea that is important and a plot that is essentially dramatic. Unfortunately, however, these elements demand a much greater play-writing skill than has been brought to bear on the pages of this script. Producer, director and cast struggled valiantly with uneven results.

Lloyd Nolan, that vital young actor who made the appealing drama of "One Sunday Afternoon" so alive and real, here recreates a revolutionary officer of great power, dignity, simplicity and authenticity.

Here is a play that cries for the freedom in scope that the films can give it. There are half a dozen fine directors in Hollywood who could make this Broadway production seem puny and ineffectual in comparison with what they could transfer to the screen with this material, assuming, however, the necessary courage to tackle such controversial subject matter existed. Incidentally, the playwrights might be more helpful in its screen adaptation than they were in its stage production.

Del Ruth Surprised

Roy Del Ruth is shooting along on "Bulldog Drummond" ahead of schedule and about the happiest director in town. He can't get over the fact the execs at Twentieth Century leave him alone to do his own job.

Omaha Exhibs Now Squawk on Code

New York.—And still they come, kicks by exhibitors against the code boards. Omaha is the latest, independent exhibitors there registering a complaint yesterday that the boards for their territory are dominated by MPTOA exhibitors.

Another item of trouble is coming to the Code Authority in the necessity of changing boards due to film company employees being transferred to other cities.

MGM Planning Record Campaign for Exhibitors

Playing the field on advertising and exploitation plugs, MGM is getting behind a tie-up with the Victor recording company for a series of discs on their pictures with the idea of serving them out to exhibitors for radio splurges.

Discs are timed for from 4½ to 14 minute programs aimed at etherizing.

Riding Actors Entertain

Riding Actors' Association, organization of film cowboys, added music to NRA discussion last night at their weekly meetings at 6472 Santa Monica Boulevard.

Organized to protect their interests under the Code, the group figured a little entertainment would go well with the squawks. So cowboy singers, members of their own group, were added to the program last night and gave a hotcha program.

Burton Directs 'Hellcat'

Columbia has assigned David Burton to direct "Hellcat" which is scheduled to start early next week. Adele Buffington and Fred Niblo Jr. wrote the original screen play. Picture is the third for the director at Columbia, having handled "Let's Fall in Love" and "Sisters Under the Skin." No cast on "Hellcat" as yet.

Make Police Shorts

Aiming at a major release, the General Film Library has assembled the first in a tentative series of twelve "Calling All Cars" shorts. Subject deals with police department activities and the first has been dialogued by Los Angeles Police Chief Davis.

Para. Borrows Tom Brown

Gordean Will Stick

Jack Gordean yesterday withdrew his resignation from the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office and will stay on as an associate of that firm.

Inspiration

When Bernie Grossman was preparing to get married he advertised in a Hollywood paper for "A Little Green and White House." Then the responsibilities of marriage caused him to turn the line into a song, and now it looks like a hit.

The BOOKWORLD

New Authors Getting Break in Late Books

It is amazing and encouraging the number of first novels appearing these days. Peter Neagoe has worked on his first for longer than four years, during which time he lived in Paris, Santa Fe and Chatham, New Jersey. The book, "Easter Sun," will be published on March 15 simultaneously in London, Paris and New York. Coward-McCann will publish it here.

Stanley Hopkins is also a new writer. His book, "The Ladies," was published by Harpers last September, but created more of a furore in England than in America. And so Harpers is reissuing it with this explanation: "Because of the fact that in this country it was published at a time when it was swamped in a flood of books by famous authors, it is now republished in the hope that it will reach the wide audience it deserves."

Miss Nola Henderson saw her first book off the press this week. Its title is intriguing: "This Much Is Mine!"

Ronald Fangen, a Norwegian novelist, will have his first novel to appear in English published by Viking. It is "Duel," and is highly recommended by Sigrid Undset.

There are two other new authors appearing on the Viking Spring List. One is Antonia White, a young English woman who writes the story of a girl in a convent school. Her book is called "Frost in May." The other is Laura Gilfillan, an American girl who graduated from Smith College and then went to live in a mining town in Pennsylvania. She tells her experiences in "I Went to Pit College."

One of the prize titles of the year is Branch Cabell's "Smirt." Almost as surprising as the title is the poem Cabell has placed opposite the copyright page. The poem is titled "For George Jean Nathan," and reads, in part:

"Gifted, Smirt forever finds
Everywhere inferior minds;
Jesting, Smirt provokes insanely
Each and all reared less urbanely;
And, derided, Smirt derides."

The great and widespread success of "Anthony Adverse" brings up an interesting comment from Paul Sifton on the present American enthusiasm for old-fashioned clothes, pictures, plays and books.

He says: "America is in mass flight from the present—America is returning to yesterday, to the recent and the remote past, seeking escape from a somewhat difficult present and a future as yet not wholly clear. It is a sentimental journey of recollection, of solace and reassurance, made with smiles and sighs and courage subtly renewed."

He goes on to remark that of the eight successful plays in New York this season six are laid in prewar times, and that of the books there are too many to list.

The books reviewed this week are consistently fine, and several destined to be best sellers:

"The Postman Always Rings Twice"

Author.....James M. Cain
Publisher.....Alfred A. Knopf

Just pick it up and you can't lay it down. It is tersely bard-boiled; exciting; rowdy; tragic as life and funny as death; frankly sensual; heartbreaking, and entirely exciting all the way around.

It is the story of Frank Chambers, who was thrown off a hay wagon in front of one of the many hot-dog stands in Southern California. The Greek proprietor is able to argue Frank into accepting a job . . . after Frank gets a look at the Greek's sullen, sulky, good-looking wife.

The three of them are ruthless. They cheat, lie, steal, murder . . . and love. You'll have to stick your chin out as you read it and pray for a strong stomach. It's strong, uneasy stuff.

"Mr. Thompson in the Attic"

Author.....Anna Gordon Keown
Publisher....William Morrow & Co.

This is a tender, fantastic, subtle and wholly delightful story of Mr. Thompson, who came to teach school at Shillingdean, and remained only a month . . . because he learned to drink sherry and to love the headmaster's wife.

"What," asks Mr. Thompson, "is anxiety but an unwieldly obstacle we deliberately throw down in our path in order to put ourselves to the pain of unnecessary jumping exercises?"

So, when the lady refuses to follow up her smiles, he joins a tinkers' caravan and takes to the open road.

"An Altar in the Fields"

Author.....Ludwig Lewisohn
Publisher.....Harper and Bros.

One of the finest novels on marriage today is this story of Dick Belden and his wife, Rose, who marry for better or worse and find it much worse. They grow apart; they take refuge from their unhappiness in a trip to Paris, and they begin to hate each other. Finally, they make one more attempt. They take a home in the country where Dick begins to raise vegetables and flowers. They begin to build together, they settle down . . . and Rose has a baby, which seems to be the answer to everything.

"Women Are Like That"

Author.....Alice Elinor Lambert
Publisher.....Vanguard Press

The book preaches that every business girl leavens her passion for business with the hope of winning some man's admiration. The girl in this one worships her boss, even after he is a helpless paralytic, useless and discarded. Then she marries his son.

There is good characterization here.

"The Story of the Sforzas"

Author.....L. Collison-Morley
Publisher ..... Dutton

Here is the meat and meaning and the pounding blood of great drama. This story of the conquest of the Duchy of Milan by Francesco Sforza is full of treason and hate and love and corruption and passion.

Beautifully written, packed full of swift action and slow treachery and brief gallantries, this book is a strong and colorful comment on humanity and history.

"Come in at the Door"

Author.....William March
Publisher.....Smith and Haas

Leaning upon the curious mentality of the negroes, whites and French settlers of Mobile, Mr. March has written a striking book of strange superstitions, inhibitions and twisted lives.

His hero is a little boy named Chester who is influenced by his colored nurse, indifferent, cruel and ignorant. She takes him with her to attend a hanging . . . and Chester suffers over it for the rest of his life.

His father is always coldly silent; his uncle is ill and spineless; the wife he finally marries is a puritan . . . all are totally lacking in understanding, and Chester comes to believe that under everything lies a rotten cruelty.

This is a strong, moving and unhappy book.

"About Levy"

Author.....Arthur Calder-Marshall
Publisher ..... Scribner's

This is an account of a murder trial, with Dr. Claude Levy suspected of killing Christopher Hall who is about to marry the girl Levy loves.

It is the judge who sums up the case, telling the details. Levy never appears.

"Salah and His American"

Author.....Leland Hall
Publisher.....Alfred A. Knopf

Here is a queer, astonishing story, laid in Morocco.

It tells of an American who accidentally comes into possession of a black slave, and in turn becomes the owner of the slave. He is caught between the romantic idea that it would be novel to have a runaway slave for a servant and the natural and civilized hatred for anything that resembles slavery.

One of the most interesting sections of the book is where the American determines to get rid of the slave by teaching him a trade: giving him driving lessons so he could be a chauffeur . . . and then the questions that torture the man as he asks himself whether he should put the slave into the power of our machine age.

Fascinating and strange.

"Richardson's Second Case"

Author.....Sir Basil Thompson
Publisher.....The Crime Club

Sir Basil Thompson, who has been the governor of Dartmoor prison and of Wormwood Scrubs and knows about London's underworld backward and forward, writes a new mystery novel.

Helen Dunn, 50, servant of James McDougall, is the victim, and the clues are a parrot and a Mr. Moore, both of whom are missing, and a wallet.

"The Vatican: Yesterday, Today, Tomorrow"

Author .....George Seldes
Publisher ..... Harpers

The Catholic Book Club makes this book by a Jew its monthly selection:

George Seldes, who was ejected from Italy by Mussolini, freely admits his admiration for the Catholic church. He says: The Church will survive Mussolini; the Papacy is stronger today than at any time in the past century; and there may be some day an American pope.

"Murder Made in Germany"

Author.....Heinz Liepmann
Publisher ..... Harpers

Weep over this book. For it is a bloody, cruel and sorrowful saga of the sufferings of the Jews in Germany since April last.

The book is banned in Germany, but it is appearing simultaneously in eight languages.

"I will answer with my honor, my livelihood and my life of the fact that all incidents in this book have actually happened," the author writes.

The incidents are violent, hateful and atrocious.

"Junglemania"

Author.....Arthur Torrance, M.D.
Publisher.....The Macaulay Co.

Here is the account of two tropical expeditions conducted by the British Research Institute into the depths of Africa.

It is an interesting mixture of jungle lore and medical facts. The book is full of adventure and is not wanting in information that will interest medical students.

"Bloody Mary's"

Author .....Geoffrey Dennis
Publisher.....Simon & Schuster

There has been quite a flood of stories of youngsters lately, and "Bloody Mary's" is one of the best.

It is a penetrating inquiry into the heart of a boy, who can't quite reconcile his ideals with the ideals of the school which he attends.

He is humiliated, jeered at, beaten up until he can't stand it any more, and he "peaches." School becomes a torture for him . . . until he changes and accepts the morals of a community life.

One of the most amazing characters in literature is the headmaster of the school who gets into such rages that he feels murderous and yet is able to inspire into the boys a loving loyalty.

The story is intense and apparently so autobiographical that it rings too, too true.

"Lost Man"

Author.....E. L. Grant Watson
Publisher ..... Harpers

Not for the squeamish, featuring as it does two remarkably horrible deaths . . . . one by the bite of a poisonous snake and the other from fear, thirst and starvation.

The basis is the old triangle . . . a brute of a husband, a charming English girl and the sympathetic lover.

"Private Affairs of George Washington"

Edited by.....Stephen Decatur, Jr.
Publisher.....Houghton, Mifflin

Practically anything you want to know about the Father of his Country can be found in this fascinating story of Washington, his life and time.

It is human and amusing.

"The Eight of Swords"

Author.....John Dickson Carr
Publisher.....Harper and Bros.

The victim of no apparent motive, Septimus Depping, a connoisseur of wines and food, is shot in the Guest House of a large estate in Gloucestershire.

But leave it to Dr. Gideon Fell, the amusing detective who figured in "The Mad Hatter Holiday."

"Ogden's Strange Story"

Author.....Edison Marshall
Publisher.....W. C. Kinsey & Co.

An airplane crashes in Alaska and Ogden Rutherford comes to with acute amnesia. He becomes Og the Dawn Man, falls in love with an Eskimo lady and learns all about outdoor life . . . and love.

"She Was a Lady"

Author.....Elizabeth Cobb
Publisher ..... Bobbs-Merrill

Irvin S. Cobb's daughter, Elizabeth Cobb, is a chip off the old literary block, as her book, "She Was a Lady," proves conclusively.

The story is racy and different. The writing is sparkling. The characterizations are true and vivid.

It is the history of Moira Vane, daughter of Acoola's prize drunkard. She inherits from him the aristocratic Vane strain which he has never quite lost in any gutter. One day he dies trying to rescue a little kitten from a burning house, and Moira determines to take her rightful place in his English family.

She goes about it in an astonishing way—some time spent traveling with a circus, and four lucrative years at blackmailing. But through it all she remembers her grammar, her heritage and her "class."

The book is whimsically gallant and wholly amusing.

"Rain On The Mountain"

Author .....Green Peyton
Publisher .....Little, Brown

Green Peyton, one of the most distinguished of the younger American authors, writes a half-good, half-bad novel of the old South.

His characterizations and general mood of the locale are superbly handled. But it is in some of the more intense and dramatic situations where he weakens.

However, it is one of the better books of the season.

"Murder Rehearsal"

Author .....Roger East
Publisher .....Alfred A. Knopf

You'll have to keep your wits about you when you read this one. The author tells, at the same time, of the writing of a mystery novel, and a series of murders that are almost identical with those in the novel.

It is, at first, a little confusing, but once you get the hang of the thing it is completely absorbing.

"Amour-French For Love"

Author .....Cecil Barr
Publisher ..... Liveright

No beating around the bush in this one. The author writes of a young Englishman who, realizing his ignorance in all affairs pertaining to sex, goes to Paris to correct the situation.

Very amusing and plain-spoken.

"The best mystery thriller I have ever read" is what E. Phillips Oppenheim says about Valentine Williams' "The Clock Ticks On." Mr. Williams has a new novel, "The Portcullis Room," coming out in March.

Here are two books for the lazy: "The Art of Relaxation," by Walter B. Pitkin, to be published by Simon and Shuster, and "A Guide to Civilized Loafing," by H. A. Overstreet, to be published by Norton.

Readers in Great Britain bought 10,000 copies of Feuchtwanger's "The Oppermans," during three weeks of publication. Viking will bring this book of a Jewish family in Hitler Germany out here next month.

Horace Stokes has recently returned from England with two books he will publish here. One is "Cheap Jack," by Phillip Allingham, the story of a young man from Oxford who leaves his family and starts off with a few shillings to tell fortunes in the British fairs. The other book is "Faint Harmony," by Vivian Ellis, who besides being an author, is a composer of popular songs.

Alfred Knopf is publishing soon a collection of short stories by Langston Hughes called "The Ways of White Folks."

H. L. Mencken is now in Europe for a long vacation. He will be back, however, in time for the publication of his new book, "Treatise on Right and Wrong."

Covici, Friede, who will be from now on the American publishers of Professor Albert Einstein, announce a new book by the great scientist, "The World As I See It," to be brought out late this spring.

Knopf reports the third edition of James E. Cain's book, reviewed before, "The Postman Always Rings Twice," and Harcourt, Brace are issuing the third and enlarged printing of "Fireweed," by Mildred Walker. Norton is happy over a sell out of the first edition of "Julia Newberry's Sketch Book."

John Dos Passo's new book is non-fiction and is called "In All Countries." Harcourt, Brace will publish it in April.

Once upon a time Edwin Palmer and Phillip Wylie wrote "When Worlds Collide," a tale that proved immensely popular. Now they have written "After Worlds Collide," which Stokes will publish.

Dr. Robert L. Lederer, who supplied S. S. Van Dine the mathematical data for the "Bishop Murder Case," and who has the largest private collection of fish in New York, is writing a book for Afred A. Knopf. It is "The Care and Feeding of Tropical Fish."

Church War on Films

theatre men are suffering for the sins of producers.

Literary Digest also declares that both the Jewish and Protestant churches will eventually be enlisted in the wide-spread campaign.

Highlights of the Digest summary follows:

"All the Catholic priests throughout the country, and there are 30,000 of them, have been asked to use their influence with their local congregations for the success of the drive for cleaner films. Members of the religious sisterhoods and brotherhoods in the Catholic high schools and colleges, as well as in the parochial schools, have been enlisted as auxiliaries.

"All the Catholic national and diocesan weeklies and monthly magazines have been enlisted in the drive. They reach a total of 20,000,000 or more Catholic laymen, and will ask them to lend a voice in the drive. Parents are called upon to be stricter in supervising the attendance of their children at picture houses.

"In one day the Catholic diocesan weeklies, which have a combined circulation of 7,000,000 subscribers, made a concerted attack on suggestiveness on the screen. All of them carried excerpts from a criticism by Bishop T. Cantwell of Los Angeles in which he declared that 'some action of heroic proportions must be taken if we are to save the youth of America from a pollution and debauchery the like of which America has not known heretofore'."

N.Y. ASKS PAY CUTS BACK

TRADE VIEWS
W. R. WILKERSON

•THE open forum letters of Myles Connolly and Gregory LaCava anent Frank Capra have started a lot of talk around town. Capra has been the source of conversation for quite a while, but suddenly the boys pounced on the idea that the Capra success was the greatest argument against the production supervisor that could be uncovered.

"But," says one producer, "there is only one Frank Capra." Which is a lot of applesauce. If ten or fifteen other directors were given the same opportunities that Frank has enjoyed, that same freedom of expression in fashioning his pictures, there would most certainly be another story regarding the quality of our pictures.

Capra's greatest asset in his continued production of good pictures is the fact that he is the boss of his production. He stands for no production interference and none is even thought of. He works with a writer, helps wherever he can; casts his picture, or okays the casting, and shoots as his best judgment prompts him.

Suppose Harry Cohn should interfere with him as he does with others or as does every other producer in this town, do you think the Capra product would be as good? If you think so, try to get a look at the personally produced picture that Mr. Cohn made for his company in London and many others that are turned out on that lot. And this is not said as any reflection on Columbia pictures.

Others argue that Capra's pictures are expensive. That's silly when compared to what they take in at the box office. And taking that amount in at the box office helps Columbia's studio, its distributing organization, the theatres that play the pictures—in fact almost everyone connected with this picture business.

And we insist that there are many other Capras; but they are hamstrung by stupid producer interference, dictation from men who do not know what they are talking about. And with such directorial interference, it is reasonable to assume that the writers are given the same trouble by the same producers.

Why not do away with the supervisor? How many supervisors do you think could write an acceptable screen play or direct a good picture?

'Christina' Still Tops in Good London Wk.

London.—No complaints from film men here with business brisk all the week, especially for "Queen Christina."

Others that enjoyed good returns were "Catherine the Great," "Jack Ahoy," "Duck Soup" and "The Queen's Affair." They are holding over, along with "Christina."

Newcomers on the list are "Footlight Parade," at the Regal; "Man's Castle" at the New Gallery; "Waltzes from Vienna," Marble Arch Pavilion.

'U' Joins Majors in Cancellation Fight

New York.—Major distributors' opposition to the ruling of Sol Rosenblatt allowing the 10 percent cancellation clause of the code to be retroactive to December 7 was strengthened Saturday by the addition of Universal to the opponents' ranks.

Columbia has given no official intimation of its stand, but is expected to join the others.

'Treasure Island' About Ready To Go

The MGM production of "Treasure Island" is about ready to go with Victor Fleming directing from the screen play of John Lee Mahin. Wallace Beery will be the star with Jackie Cooper in chief support.

The plan of going to Hawaii for locations has been ditched with 90 per cent of the picture to be photographed on the MGM lot.

Bob Ritchie, manager for Jeanette MacDonald, is sailing for Europe on the Berengaria March 7. The star and her mother arrive on The Chief tomorrow.

Publication Of Executives Juicy Bonuses Hits The Home Offices Hard—Morale Low

New York.—There are seething and turmoil here in the home office picture ranks, and undercover agitation for some means of bringing into the open a concerted demand for the restoration of the many pay slashes picture workers have suffered in the past two years. This is the first result of the publication of executive salaries and huge bonuses by the Federal Trade Commission.

Labor Action From NRA This Week

Various studio labor groups are hoping that the Studio Labor Committee, appointed to handle NRA complaints for labor, will get under way this week.

Committee was bogged down for weeks, with explanation that it had not been officially appointed. Appointment came through last week with proper stamps and seals, so all labor groups that have complaints on file are pushing for action.

Frank Lloyd-MGM Set 'Mutiny' Deal

Although it is several months off, "Mutiny on the Bounty" will serve Robert Montgomery as a starring vehicle under Frank Lloyd's direction. MGM is polishing off the final details on the Lloyd deal in order to purchase the director's story.

Lloyd will first do the Gaynor-Farrell story for Fox, then going to MGM to fulfill his one-picture ticket.

Del Rio As 'DuBarry' And 2 Year Ticket

Warners did themselves proud over the week-end by signing Dolores Del Rio to a two year straight contract and asigning her to the title role in "DuBarry," which they expect to place in production within the next two weeks.

The cables are working in an effort to persuade Charles Laughton to give up his Old Vic assignment in London and come to Burbank and play Louis XIV in the same picture.

Roy Hunter On Job As 'U' Lab Reopens

Roy Hunter returns to his old post as laboratory chief for Universal with the re-opening of the plant March 15.

THE LOW DOWN

Walter Winchell announced over the air last night that the Herbert Marshalls are divorcing—it's not true —they have no thought of it.

The Randy Scott-Kathryn Menjou amour seems to be in the on again-off again stage. Leastways, as they say in the country journals, Randy beaued Kathryn to the big party that Mrs. Hugh Murray gave Friday night. Mrs. M. hired most of the Beverly Wilshire and entertained, plus many more, the George Hearsts, the Raoul Walshes, Ray Long, Edgar Allan Woolf and Mary Carlisle, the Alan Dwans, Henry Clive, Lila Lee, the Charlie Farrells, the Wes Ruggles, Lew Cody. A very good fortune teller provided the guests the amazement!

We hear tell that at the time Sam Goldwyn started "Nana," Dr. Frenke, husband of Anna Sten, was pretty much in his way. So Sam is supposed to have given him a bankroll and told his to go make a picture of his own. Whereupon Frenke hired studio space, wrote a story, signed up actors on the "co-operative plan" and proceeded (for months and months) to make a picture. The film was finally finished and the preview notices are now history. Sooo—unless Frenke suddenly gets himself another production berth, it looks as though Sam will have him right back "in his hair."

The thing that tickles Dolores Del Rio most about the new two-year contract she just signed with Warners, is a certain clause in that contract. Dolores won't have to be a "bird of Paradise" any more—or any other kind of a bird. She won't have to play native girls—or let her hair grow. Which is what she's been striving for for a long time. Nothing but beautiful modern clothes or costume pictures from now on. Coming to think of it, the Del Rio contract is a swell break for both the star and the stujo—where, outside of Kay Francis, there isn't (in our opinion) a glamorous beauty on the lot!

New York REVIEWS

"HIPS HIPS HOORAY"

RKO-Radio prod.; director, Mark Sandrich; writers, Harry Ruby, Bert Kalmar.

Roxy Theatre

Mirror: This latest production of Wheeler and Woolsey is similar to their previous ones, a lively series of reliable gags. There is a good song, many fetching Hollywood cuties, handsome settings and provocative clothes. The Wheeler-Woolsey enthusiasts will find this less original than their previous pictures, but if they like the clowns they will be diverted by it.

World-Telegram: Messrs. Wheeler and Woolsey are, to put it mildly, pretty disappointing in the film, and its title confirms all the advance misgivings. It is a film built on a formula, and one which, unless the central characters are humorously portrayed, is pretty apt to be stale and tasteless. But it just about suits the gibberish.

American: It's a better picture than average and it is handsomely embroidered with girls and music. As usual, there is a running patter of comedy, some of which is very funny and some not so much. Mark Sandrich has kept his picture moving all the time, so that there isn't opportunity to do much but giggle.

Times: This film is up to their usual standard. There are three reasonably hilarious gags and perhaps fifty more that depend on whether you are for or against the er-vaudeville clowns to begin with.

Sun: A typical Wheeler and Woolsey romp. The comedy, of course, is mainly slapstick with trick comedy photography usually confined these days to cartoons and short subjects. In short, it is a picture built to amuse children.

Journal: Goofier than most of their farces, this has several musical interludes. The plot really doesn't matter at all; the film is just a succession of gags.

News: Some of the escapades of these comedians are funny, but most of them are so worn out that they hardly force a weak smile. The dialogue is less suggestive than that of previous Wheeler and Woolsey films. The dances are not extravagant, but a nifty powder puff chorus proves entertaining.

Herald-Tribune: It is not really up to the standard of their former work. There just isn't any plot; the lines did not seem overwhelmingly witty nor was the theme song accompanied by appropriate gestures. The interiors, however, were well staged and the direction is fast and lively.

Carminatti Signed For Lead With Grace Moore

Columbia has signed Tullio Carminatti for the lead opposite Grace Moore in her first picture for that studio which will be directed by Victor Schertzinger. Carminatti will arrive here from New York shortly.

The title "Don't Fall in Love" will not be used for this picture as originally intended as it might be confused with "Let's Fall in Love" which Columbia also produced.

'Witching Hour' Starting

Signing Ferdinand Gottschalk, Purnell Pratt and Frank Sheridan Saturday, Paramount puts "The Witching Hour" into work today with Henry Hathaway directing. Tom Brown, Judith Allen and John Halliday head the cast.

Young Crosby in Short

Featuring Bob Crosby, brother of Bing, Paramount put a short into production at the studio Saturday with George Arthur directing. Musical is untitled. Anson Weeks and his orchestra make up the cast.

Warners Change A Title

Warners dropped the title of "Hit Me Again" Saturday and replaced it with "Smarty." Picture has Joan Blondell, Warren William and Claire Dodd in top billing.

Col. Borrows Patrick

Columbia got Gail Patrick from Paramount Saturday for one of the top spots in "Murder in the Studio." Ross Lederman is piloting under Irving Briskin's supervision.

Struss and Marion Repeat

Karl Struss, cameraman, and Frances Marion, writer, who are finalists in the Academy Awards of Merit Competition, hold the unique distinction of having been winners in their classes before. Struss won the cinematography award once, and Miss Marion has won the writing award twice.

rial berth to concentrate on the work of an associate producer.

In keeping with this, company's executives moved their furniture around in a mad scramble over the week-end, getting into new offices. Mastroly took Henigson's office, Henigson moved into Eph Asher's office, Asher took Stanley Bergerman's office, and the latter took Julius Bernheim's suite. Whereabouts of Bernheim's office is a mystery, indicating he will be the only one whom agents will be unable to annoy.

Churchill-McCrea Leads in 'Deacon'

Joel McCrea gave the nod yesterday to a loan-out deal from Radio to Universal where he goes into the top spot in "Alias the Deacon," under Kurt Neumann's direction.

Edmund Grainger, picture's producer, signed Berton Churchill through Kingston-Harris for the title role, player re-creating the part he played on the stage when Broadway first saw the play. Madge Evans, at MGM, is reading the script before deciding on the spot opposite McCrea. Ralph Spence, Earl Snell and Clarence Marks on the screen play.

Warners Hold Jory For Additional Two Pics

Warners took such a yen to Victor Jory, latter reciprocating, that the company has received Fox's okay for another loanout for the player, this time for two pictures.

He is scheduled for "Dark Tower" and "DuBarry." Fox gave him permission to withdraw from its picture, "Now I'll Tell," signing Robert Gleckler in his stead.

Milton Gropper On Way

Milton Herbert Gropper leaves New York this week to arrive here March 10. The Small-Landau office has several irons in the fire for him.

'JOURNAL OF A CRIME' HEAVY PROBLEM YARN

Chatterton Good And Carries Pic

"JOURNAL OF A CRIME"
(Warners)

Director.....William Keighley
Story by.....Jacques Deval
Screen Play.....F. Hugh Herbert and Charles Kenyon
Photography .....Ernest Haller
Cast: Ruth Chatterton, Adolphe Menjou, Phillip Reed, Claire Dodd, Henry O'Neill, George Barbier, Edward McWade, Frank Reicher, Henry Kolker, Leila Bennett, Harold Huber, Noel Madison.

"Journal of a Crime" emerges as what might be termed an interesting picture, even if one that presents a puzzle when guessing at its general audience appeal. It is a curiously involved psychological study that needs light touches, but offers little room for them if the problem is to be told sincerely.

Drastic cutting should help liven the picture considerably. There is, for example, a scene of Ruth Chatterton in delirium that can easily be eliminated, since it is both repetitious and a bit hard to take.

Miss Chatterton proves, in a difficult, unsympathetic part, that she is actress sufficient for the role, even if the choice does not vindicate her judgment. Menjou is deft in the role of a cold-blooded husband, no longer in love with his wife.

The story finds Chatterton, though obviously desirable, making the mistake of being too much in love with her own husband. Menjou appreciates his wife's devotion, but not so much that he is prevented from falling for the wiles of Claire Dodd.

A convenient bank robbery brings Noel Madison, as the fleeing bandit, to hide in the theatre where Menjou's musical comedy company is rehearsing. Dodd is murdered back stage, with the bank robber caught and accused of the crime. However, Menjou finds his own revolver backstage and realizes Chatterton has killed the vamp.

There follows a curious, sadistic interlude during which Menjou waits for Chatterton to break under the strain. During his cruel vigil he keeps a diary of her reactions. Chatterton, on the verge of a nervous breakdown, desires to give herself up, but on the way to the District Attorney's office, miraculously escapes death in an auto accident, only to come out of it suffering from amnesia.

There is a happy ending, with Menjou teaching Chatterton to say "mountain," "sun," "darling."

There is the story. You can judge it for your own audiences. It is not a gay story, though an interesting one. One has the feeling that it could have been more adroitly told; or rather, that it is the individual work of Chatterton that is holding the interest that the picture does possess.

Somewhere between direction and the script must be placed some blame for a certain obviousness in the method of the tale's unfolding; while at the same time giving credit for making an American job of a story taken from a continental source, and typically continental in its emotional aspects. The backstage scenes have been particularly well handled, and we could stand seeing and hearing more of Walter Pidgeon, who possesses a fascinating stage presence, plus a beautiful voice. Claire Dodd clicks and sparkles. Phillip Reed and George Barbier are seen to advantage.

Ernest Haller's photography is in his usual excellent style. The picture is richly staged, with the gowns deserving special mention.

Cameramen, Note!

There should be more cinematographer votes in for the Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit. Photographers as a class have been most anxious for a method of rewarding outstanding merit that would allow ALL their fellows to vote. So full advantage should be taken of this opportunity. Only a few days left—hurry!

Powell-MGM Deal Stretched To Two

William Powell's one picture deal for the top spot in the Dashiell Hammett story, "The Thin Man" has been stretched into a two picture contract by MGM. Powell will still do the Hammett story "Thin Man" after he finishes "Manhattan Melodrama." W. S. Van Dyke will direct Powell in both pictures. The star is getting $60,000 per picture.

Mrs. August Belmont Research Council Head

New York.—The Motion Picture Research Council, which is waging a strong fight against block booking as a means of opposing objectionable pictures, on Saturday elected Mrs. August Belmont active president, with Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard, retiring to the post of honarary president.

Dr. Lowell was originally named by President Roosevelt to the Motion Picture Code Authority, but withdrew when he found he would have an inactive post and no power to put the Research Council drastic program into operation.

Seek Brent For Stage

Danny Wells is after George Brent to play the male lead opposite Alice Brady in the stage production of "Biography" which will open at the Biltmore theatre on Monday, April 2. Edgar MacGregor will direct.

Rankin On Col. Termer

Columbia Saturday handed Arthur Rankin a term contract and immediately spotted him in two pictures. Goes into "Murder in the Studio," then into "The Party's Over."

Nugent Dons Greasepaint

Elliott Nugent's yen for greasepaint has made him take a small part in "Strictly Dynamite," which he is directing for Radio.

Quotas Boomerang In Foreign Theatres

New York.—Severe contingent and quota restrictions laid against American pictures are proving a boomerang in many foreign countries when exhibitors awake to the famine in good attractions.

Czecho-Slovakia is an example, the first run theatres now petitioning the Government to loosen up on Americans. The country needs about 350 pictures annually but in 1933 had only 180 sound pictures. There were only 35 domestic productions. Over eight hundred sound equipped theatres in the country.

Al Dubin Disappearance Just A Vacation Trip

Mystery of Al Dubin's whereabouts during the past two weeks was solved Saturday when he returned to the Warner studio from a two weeks' hideaway at Delmar, California.

Studio had reported itself unable to find him, his disappearance preventing the starting of "Dames." With Warren, his team-mate, he had been writing the song numbers for the picture.

Universal Seeks Loan Of Scott From Para.

Universal started the machinery yesterday for the loan from Paramount of Randolph Scott. Want him for "Humbug," which Max Marcin is producing under Eph Asher's wing.

Another bid registered at Radio for William Gargan will likely go cold, latter planning to put the player into "The Great American Harem," with Pert Kelton.

All Code Yeas Extended

Washington.—General Johnson on Saturday extended the time for approval of all elements of the picture industry to the NRA code until March 10. A similar extension had already been granted by the Code Authority in getting exhibitor assents to the distribution-exhibiion code.

'Scarlet Letter' in Sound

A "talker" of "The Scarlet Letter" will be the first feature for the newly organized Globe Pictures Corporation, of which Larry Darmour is the head. The Nathaniel Hawthorne story will go into production at the Darmour studio around April 1. No director or cast signed as yet.

Basil Woon On The Way

Basil Woon, author of "Life of Sarah Bernhardt," arrived in New York from Europe Friday, according to a wire received by the Ivan Kahn agency. He is enroute to Hollywood to fulfill picture contracts here.

Talbot-WB Talk Terms

His option due within four weeks, Lyle Talbot and Warners are discussing terms on a new contract.

Writers Guild Board Boosted To Fifteen

Increasing its board of governors from eleven members to fifteen is the next move decided upon by the Screen Writers Guild in an effort to get every faction within Guild ranks represented among the directors. Machinery of selecting candidates for the April 5 election has been changed in order to accomplish the same purpose.

With each ballot distributed, according to the new plan, there will also be a list of Guild members. Each ballot will have room for fifteen selections by the individual voter. The thirty candidates receiving the highest number of votes will form the final slate from which the new board will be chosen by the entire Guild membership at the annual meeting.

Code Extra Committee Down To Hard Work

The Code Committee for Extras will be busy this week. Slated for meeting of full membership tonight and tomorrow night.

Idea of Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman, is to get the most pressing problems and complaints of extras settled as soon as possible. Committee is attempting to get all knotty questions of extras' section of code untangled and clarified so there will be easy sailing on complaints in future.

Prinz Quits Paramount With Indie Pic Plans

Leroy Prinz, who has been at Paramount for the past year directing musical numbers, has handed in his resignation and plans to go into independent production.

Prinz plans on making a series of shorts with puppets. The puppets are to be patterned after screen characters. He has already finished the first short, with the Mae West character featured.

'Little Man' Moves Today

Universal's "Little Man, What Now?" gets under way today, with Frank Borzage at the megaphone. This is the second picture for Margaret Sullavan. Opposite her will be Douglass Montgomery.

Barrymore Back To Capitol

Lionel Barrymore will return to the Capitol theatre in New York next week for another week's personal appearance. The star is playing in Columbus, Ohio, this week.

Librettist Writes Play

New York.—Fall production is planned for a play which has been written by Richard L. Stokes, noted opera librettist, in collaboration with his wife, Muriel Stokes.

Want Kenyon For 'Corn'

Radio is after Doris Kenyon for one of the featured roles in the Ann Harding picture, "Alien Corn," which is scheduled to start in about ten days under the direction of E. H. Griffith.

Crosland Pic Finished

Alan Crosland wound up shooting on "One Man's Woman" Saturday at Warners. Glenda Farrell and Pat O'Brien in the top brackets.

Asks Pay Cuts Back

few years and previous to most of the employees' cuts, but they counter with the statement that, while many of the execs wept crocodile tears over taking the salary cuts themselves, the published figures make it clear that the higher-ups did not suffer in any comparison to the rank and file.

They also point out a few instances of execs who took ostensible salary cuts, but still retained bonus and percentage privileges that left them very well protected against the storms and rigors of the depression.

And United Artists, where Joe Schenck restored practically all salary cuts the first of the year, gives them a shining example to hold up to the others.

To any observer, the effect of the publication of the top figures on the morale of distribution staffs has been serious. To say that the rank and file of employees are "resentful" is putting it mildly. And the result is the present effort towards some form of concerted action that will bring the execs to time, particularly with the latest picture company figures showing an upturn in business all around.

Nick Musuraca bossing the boxes on "Dover Road," Biroc and Barth, assisting.

Ollie Marsh who covered himself with plenty glory through his work at the cameras for "Dancing Lady" is currently turning 'em over for "Sadie McKee" (M. G. M.). His assistants, Mead, Greer and Brigham . . . Hal Rosson is responsible for the photography of "The Cat and The Fiddle" (Novarro-MacDonald) playing currently Loew's State . . . Solly Halperin (Fox) back home from New York with the snow still in his ears . . .

DEAR MR. WILKERSON:

You're a perfectly swell salesman . . . whether it's caviar, rare vintages or printer's ink. Too, the quality's generally as good as you claim it to be. So what?

So I agree with you in your statement that the production bosses are more and more interested in their photography . . . That they want to know more about their own cameramen as well as the other fellows' . . . That it's not always easy for your boys to get the dope (and get it right) . . . but that it's a cinch for us to tell the story (and tell it right) because we're as close to the camera as you are to the printing press.

We know the photographers. They know us. We've kept faith with each other for generations. We've never overlooked a bet when we could give SERVICE to the photographer or his employer. We agree with you that The Brulatour Bulletin tied in with the Hollywood Reporter is a service natural. Therefore, I accept your suggestion . . . Here's . . . The Brulatour Bulletin.

And now, Mr. Wilkerson, may I MAKE a suggestion to you . . . Agreeing that photography (and the cameraman) are just as important as you claim them to be to EVERY production . . . I venture the opinion that the PRODUCERS will read, with genuine interest, anything you or your writers may have to say about this vital feature of productions in any review you print.

Lang on Musical

With his splendid camera achievement, "Farewell To Arms" set up in the sweepstakes of The Academy as a top contender for the award on outstanding photography, CHARLES LANG of Paramount has turned in creditable encores with "Cradle Song" and "Death Takes A Holiday" . . . (both Paramount); and now steps up to prove his versatility as he completes the tag shots for the Bing Crosby-Carole Lombard melody-mounting, "We're Not Dressing." Bob Pittack, Harry Hollanberger, Cliff Shirpser and Irving Glassberg are Lang's seconds and assistants.

Lyons Continues 'Malibou'

Chester Lyons continues on his Marathon assignment for M. G. M., "Malibou." Picture has been in production several months, and the dailies disclose some of the most unusual photographic material with wild animals as subject matter. Lyons has covered several thousand miles to various locations during his photographic work on this production.

Polito With Keighley

Sol Polito, who set up bigger and better standards for the boys to shoot at through his work with Bus Berkeley in the spectacular dance numbers of the Warner musicals, has been assigned to Director William Keighley, and is photographing the muchly discussed, "Dr. Monica."

Edeson Shoots New Star

Warner Bros., launching the starring destiny of Aline McMahon, placed her photographic fortunes in the lap of Arthur Edeson, while Al Green is taking care of the action. With this fool-proof combination of cameraman and director, a new star of even lesser capabilities should be a cinch.

McGill Returns to Century

Barney "Chick" McGill, contract lenser of Twentieth Century, who has been on loan-out to Fox where he accounted for the photography on two feature productions, returns to his home lot, where he will be in charge of the cameras on the George Arliss production, "Head of the Family," with Sid Lanfield directing.

Barnes Completes Del Monte Location

George Barnes (Warner Bros.) completed location shots at Del Monte on the Lloyd Bacon production, "Without Honor" and resumed studio work this week.

Applause for Valentine

Camera and laboratory staff at Fox Hills were unanimous in commending Joe Valentine for his photographic work on "Three on a Honeymoon," with Sally Eilers. . . . Unusually effective work, particularly with the star, whose popularity will never grow less because of this picture.

'IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT'

Asserts The Reporter (discussing Columbia Pictures) . . . that a producer had cracked, "I'll give a million dollars for the contracts of Frank Capra, Sam Briskin and Bob Riskin" . . . so OKay! . . . But that same producer would be smart to also offer at least a hundred'G's for the contract of Joe Walker who turned an uncanny crank on the cameras for "It Happened One Night." We take not a thing away from the credit deserved by the million dollar trio above mentioned but we'll bet real dough that they'll be the first to agree with us that Walker should be included in the deal. . . . Few short years ago and this boy was photographing program stuff. Today he's crowding the best. Walker's photography makes you believe Riskin's story and Capra's action. Briskin assigned all three of 'em. . . . Any new offers?

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION:

WHAT'S YOUR FAVORITE SHOT?

OLIVER MARSH (M. G. M.): "Big head close-ups—and I mean BIG close-ups—the bigger the better. The more vital the expression the greater the close-up. You can say it again: my favorite shot is a big close-up."

ERNIE PALMER (FOX): "My favorite shot has always been a marine view. I do not mean that I am particularly or exclusively interested in shooting only sea stories, but my idea of beauty is the long sweeping coast line or the silhouette of a cutter along the horizon."

VERN WALKER (RKO): "Naturally a projection background shot, but it must be so well done that it defies detection."

EDDIE CRONJAGER (RKO): "What do you mean? Photography . . . or . . .?"

HAL ROSSON (M. G. M.): "A close-up of Jean Harlow."

JACKSON ROSE (M. G. M.): "Pictorial interiors where the actor does not detract from the photographic beauty." (Migawd, Jack, do they always assign you to Durante's pictures?)

HAL MOHR (FOX): "I am particularly strong for close-ups of young and very beautiful girls with classic features. By the way, have you seen 'David Harum'?"

L. W. O'CONNELL (FOX): "Exterior long shots, particularly those where trees lend themselves to pleasing composition."

LEN SMITH (M. G. M.): "Out of a sand trap with a 9 iron."

LUCIUS LOOSTONE: "A test of the supervisor's sister."

CODE PROGRESS SHOWN

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•TO a time-worn veteran like the writer it is pretty hard to work up anything approaching enthusiasm concerning conventions.

But there is an affair shaping up and heading towards Hollywood that revives our jaded spirits, and makes us think, "Maybe here is a convention that will serve a purpose, and accomplish some good."

We refer to the coming gathering of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, to be held in Hollywood April 10, 11 and 12.

President Ed Kuykendall, in a letter to The Reporter, emphasizes the fact that all the pre-convention publicity and planning is based on the hope and the determination to get three days of real value to exhibitors in their visit to the source of the merchandise they sell.

The "play" note is being subordinated.

Exhibitors have come through some tough years. Just as producers have.

Exhibitors, for much of the time during those tough years, depression or no depression, have all too often placed most of the blame for their problems on the producers.

They are coming here to see and be shown.

They will learn a lot.

And may we add a postscript thought that Hollywood can learn something from the visiting exhibitors. Recalling our own days playing the exhibitor convention circuit, we can't remember learning anything from the speeches, but we do recall many a nugget of hard show wisdom gleaned in a lobby corner from a battle-scarred exhibitor just talking "his patrons."

Many a good thought. Many a valuable tip on titles, on types of pictures, on whether certain stars were going UP—or GOING down.

Welcome these exhibitors, boys and girls of Hollywood. They're playing in the same game with us—if they lose, we lose. Inevitably.

National Screen Profits Jump

New York.—National Screen Service Corp. reported a profit of $107,010.75 for the year 1933. Profit for 1932 was $95,556.47.

Radio In Jam Over Play 'Tobacco Rd.'

New York.—Prospects of the play "Tobacco Road" winning the Pulitzer prize have thrown a snag into plans of Radio pictures to buy it for the screen.

It is claimed that Radio took a verbal option on the play two weeks ago, at a tentative price around $35,000. Now the play producers are hemming and hawing on whether there was an option.

Al Werker Signs To Meg W. C. Fields

Al Werker, who recently completed "The House of Rothschild," yesterday closed with Paramount to direct the next W. C. Fields picture, "Grease Paint."

Part of the deal includes a three-year option by Paramount on Werker's services.

Walter Connolly Up For 'Louis XIV' Role

Warners have placed a bid with Columbia for the loan of Walter Connolly to play the role of Louis XIV in "DuBarry," Dolores Del Rio's first starring vehicle under her Warner contract.

Flinn Report Tells Of Gain In Employment And Payrolls In All Branches Of Industry

Washington.—A satisfactory increase in numbers of employees, heavy increases in expenses, especially in production, and the fact that the code of fair competition for the picture industry is not yet fulfilling all the hopes of its advocates, are the main points in the report of progress, made yesterday by John C. Flinn, executive secretary for the Code Authority, to Sol Rosenblatt.

The report states that, before the code provisions were in effect, one studio, which averaged seven pictures in production, employed 478 persons

New York REVIEWS

"SHADOWS OF SING SING"

Columbia prod.; director, Phil Rosen; writer, Warden Lewis E. Lawes.

Mayfair Theatre

Times: The chief point of interest in the production is the background of a police department bureau of identification through which comes a surprise ending to the tale of love and woe. Needless to say the arm of coincidence here is no shorter than usual.

Herald-Tribune: Despite its lack of a finished production, is an entertaining and ingenious little timekiller of considerable merit. The film is not especially exciting, but the climax is admirably and rather convincingly worked out.

American: While the basic plot is scarcely redolent of stark realism, its little fictions are plausibly explained and its entire structure is skilfully and suspensefully wrought.

Sun: Those shadows of the title creep too often into the picture, foretelling too many approaching events. Thanks to its cameraman and its trick ending, this is a pleasant, unexciting little melodrama.

Post: It is pretty trashy stuff, with only one moment—when the defense attorney springs his big surprise in court—of any dramatic value.

World-Telegram: If you want a bit of good, old-fashioned melodramatic entertainment, this should just about fit the bill. It has practically everything in it that the average program thriller demands. However, it has been rather carelessly put together and is told in a static manner.

Journal: It's an entertaining little melodrama that sustains suspense smoothly and offers several interesting demonstrations of police procedure.

CODE PROGRESS SHOWN IN REPORT TO 'ROSY'

per picture each day. After the code, the same studio, with five pictures average, had a 20 per cent increase in employment.

"Another studio," said the report, "estimates that its production costs will be increased $500,000 in the first year."

It is the same story in distribution and exhibition. One national distributor reports an increase of 83 employees in the home office and 31 exchanges, and a heavy payroll increase. Another concern reports 61 additional employees.

In exhibition, average payrolls have been increased from 10 to 15 per cent, the report states. It is believed that the improved business of the theatres is due to better pictures, as the public is still shopping for its screen entertainment and will not take mediocre product. The increase in attendance since last August is set at from 12 to 15 per cent.

The report details the machinery that has been set up for the protection of labor and to insure fair trade practices, and also the provisions for the arbitrations of wage disputes. This abitration machinery centers in 62 quasi-judicial boards in 31 cities, 52 of which have already been named, while the other ten will be appointed within a week. The report concludes:

"The Code of Fair Competition for the motion picture industry has yet to fulfill in practice and application the earnest wishes of its advocates, who worked arduously in its preparation and for its adoption, and the time has not yet arrived for criticism or praise."

There was a mass conference yesterday of all the motion picture code members, but today they split into five groups so that one can attend each of five meetings held simultaneously. The members in attendance are John C. Flinn, secretary; Ed Kuykendall, W. Ray Johnston, Nathan Yamins and Charles O'Reilly. R. H. Cochrane was to have attended, but is ill. Kuykendall, Yamins and Louis Phillips, of Paramount, will attend the meetings on the small industry problems, while Flinn and Johnston will sit in on the code administration meetings.

In addition to these, the Motion Picture Laboratory Association is represented by Stephen Eller, Alan Friedman, Herbert Huebner, C. Hurleman, Frank Myers, E. H. Rosenberg, Arthur Poole and Herbert Yates.

General Johnson has extended the evidence of compliance date to March 10, and given Rosenblatt until April 7 to make his report on the salary and trade practice investigation.

RADIO'S 'CRIME DOCTOR' NEW, INTERESTING MURDER YARN

Kruger, Morley and Asther Tops in Cast

"THE CRIME DOCTOR"
(Radio)

Director .....John Robertson
Original.....Israel Zangwill
Adaptation .....Jane Murfin
Art Directors.....Van Nest Polglase and Al Herman
Photography .....Lucien Andriot
Cast: Otto Kruger, Karen Morley, Nils Asther, Judith Wood, William Frawley, Donald Crisp, Frank Conroy, J. Farrell MacDonald, Fred Kelsey, G. Pat Collins.

"The Crime Doctor" is something new in murder mysteries. The audience is in on the whole thing from the start, and, with the exception of one clue near the beginning of the picture, is able to predict pretty well the general working out of the plot. But there's a surprise every minute, and you watch the darned thing, utterly intrigued and fascinated all along the way. And then the ending comes, and you find that you have been thoroughly fooled after all.

There really is no mystery. The audience sees the murder, knows the motive, and then has the fun of watching the detectives send an innocent man in the direction of the electric chair. The picture is beautifully timed and the plot is slyly and expertly worked out.

Otto Kruger is a master-mind detective, and he flatters himself that he could commit the perfect crime. An opportunity comes, when he suspects his wife (Karen Morley) of being unfaithful to him. So when she tells him that she loves Nils Asther, he determines to kill Judith Wood, who has been blackmailing Asther, and lay the blame on him through a series of cleverly contrived clues. A detective—and a jealous one at that—is a bad person to be married to.

Everything works out as he plans, and Asther is condemned to die for the murder of the girl. But the trick ending takes care of everything happily.

Kruger is uncanny in the role of the detective. No technique is apparent. He just IS Dan Gifford. A remrakable piece of acting. Karen Morley is thoroughly good as the wife, and Nils Asther is splendid in his part. Judith Wood does nice work as the hard-boiled blackmailer, and William Frawley has a role that is not worthy of his talents. Fred Kelsey is fine, as usual, as a dumb dick; Donald Crisp plays the district attorney well, and J. Farrell MacDonald and G. Pat Collins are outstanding in smaller roles.

John Robertson has gotten a swell tempo in his direction; Jane Murfin's adaptation did right by the Israel Zangwill story, and Lucien Andriot photographed it with distinction.

This is an above-average murder mystery, and, with Kruger's performance added, should be a good hit.

Conference All Wet

The songwriting team of Gordon and Revel along with Lou Diamond, Paramount exec, and two others were lost at sea for twelve hours in a water taxi en route to Catalina Island over the week-end. The skipper said he was kept so busy answering questions fired at him by Revel that he didn't have time to watch the compass.

Free Lance Writers Ready For Action

Following three meetings during which the policy of the committee was set, the Business Management Committee of the free lance writers in the Screen Writers' Guild gets under way officially tonight. Establishment of the committee was prompted by a variety of problems repeatedly facing the free lancers, who will now get advice, suggestions and help from the new body.

Prime purpose of the committee is announced as an effort to "avoid unfair deals" for writers. Body's scope excludes the major studios. John Natteford is chairman of the group, which includes Tristram Tupper, John Grey, Wilfrid MacDonald and Harold Shumate. Alternates are George Sayre, Harry Fraser and Sherman Lowe.

Crosbys Nursing Young Bob So MGM Deal Cools

The MGM-Bob Crosby deal for the crooner to play the role of the crooner in the Joan Crawford picture "Sadie McKee" is off.

The deal was queered by the crooner's brothers, Bing and Everett, who do not believe that he is ready for a part as fat as this for his first crack at pictures and want him to go for a proper build-up. He is at present making a short with the Anson-Weeks for Paramount as an introduction to the screen.

Tingle-Tangel Theatre Draws Film Patrons

Among those attending were the Fredric Marches, Walter Pidgeons, Herman Mankiewiczes, Benn Levys, Ernest Vajda, Ernst Lubitsch, Francis Lederer, Maurice Chevalier, Jesse L. Lasky, Dorothea Wieck and many others.

Judels Coming West

New York.—Charles Judels, who has been working here in comedy shorts, leaves for Hollywood shortly. He is under the guidance of Ivan Kahn agency.

'U' Is Reissuing 'Quiet,' 'Airmail'

Tying in with the news, Universal is rushing out new prints of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Airmail," the former having been cut to seven reels. The idea is to take advantage of the war photographs being published in many newspapers and of the airmail scandal.

"All Quiet" was first released in 1930, and "Airmail" in 1932. No definite general release has been set for either picture, but they will be spotted in various territories as wanted. "All Quiet," one of the big pictures of its year, was directed by Lewis Milestone, and George Cukor directed the dialogue.

Margaret Lindsay Barthelmess Lead

When she returns to the studio from her recent operation, Margaret Lindsay will get the feminine lead opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Old Doll House."

Helen Lowell, Phillip Reed, Joan Wheeler and Gordon Westcott will have principal roles. Alan Crosland directs, when the subject gets under way in about three weeks.

Col. Adds Two Writers

Two writers were added to the Columbia writing staff yesterday on one picture assignments, the deals being made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office. Becky Gardner goes to work on the Carole Lombard story under Sam Jaffe's supervision and Joseph Moncure March on a yarn for Felix Young.

Olive Fay with Kahn

Olive Fay, who returned from New York recently, has been signed to a managerial contract by the Ivan Kahn agency. Miss Fay was a child star in pictures several years ago, but has since been on the New York stage, recently appearing in Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

hibitors showing the picture, but the hint was allowed to drift out from persons close to the legal advisors.

While "Rasputin" has not been shown generally on the continent, its British, American, Canadian and Australian exhibitions would mean suits running into the thousands. Film men here, however, expressed the conviction that on the evidence shown there would be some doubt of the case standing up under American libel laws, far less stringent than the British in protecting the complainant.

New York.—J. Robert Rubin, of MGM, today spoke for the company saying: "We are deeply shocked at the London verdict and are advised by our counsel in London that they feel the judge misdirected the jury, and the appellate court will reverse the trial court. An appeal will be filed. A stay of execution pending appeal will be filed tomorrow."

Wampas To Extend Scope of 'Baby' Test

At a luncheon of the Wampas board of directors held yesterday at Levy's Tavern, arrangements were made to include in the list of candidates for baby stardom the names of various girls who are regarded as promising material by the various studios, but who have not yet been placed under contract.

The first name to be submitted in this class was Cecilia Parker by Sam Cohn, publicity director for Hal Roach.

A resolution was passed giving George Landy, Wampas prexy and chairman of the baby star committee, complete authority to establish proper organization for handling candidates. This will include setting up a procedure for screen tests by which this year's stars will be selected.

Another resolution was passed by the board, which will be voted upon at the next meeting, recommending the reduction of annual dues from $24 to $12.

Beecroft, Fla. Filmer, Views Holly Studios

Chester Beecroft, for many years studio executive with Famous Players and Cosmopolitan, and in more recent years active as an independent with his own studios in Florida, is in Hollywood to look over production here. He is accompanied by William A. Dawson, scenario editor for his recent productions.

Beecroft bears the sorrowful distinction of having held an option on Mae West's picture services for three years and being unable to get his Florida backers to go through with the deal.

LeMaire an Agent

Rufus LeMaire has tossed overboard all idea of producing plays in New York and will, very shortly, open an office here representing a group of artists.

LeMaire's first client is George Arliss, whom he will handle for a group of radio broadcasts that is in the planning stage in New York. This Arliss arrangement has no connection with or any bearing on the deal Twentieth Century has with that artist.

'WHEN IN ROME' SATIRE WITH MOSS-GROWN PLOT

Weak on Stage And Nil for Pics

"WHEN IN ROME"

George Smithfield presents "When In Rome," a comedy by Austin Major, staged by Austin Major, settings by Yellenti, at the Forty-Ninth Street Theatre. With Herbert Weber, Laurence O'Sullivan, William Stein, Frank Jacquet, Mabel Kroman, Robert Toms, Kenneth Daigneau, Charlotte Reynolds, C. Edwin Brandt, Frank Rothe, Louise Latimer, Garland Kerr, Maurice Freeman.

New York.—"When in Rome" is a slangy satire on modern political corruption in terms of ancient Rome. But it takes more than Roman togas and Vestal Virgins to make present day municipal skullduggery hilarious, especially when it is all caught up in a plot that is essentially decrepit.

It is all about a political boss named Cataline who is out to grab the consulship of Rome for himself. He is opposed by an honest and oratorical senator named Cicero. Cataline is the sort of boss who stops at nothing. He is a grafter, puts his enemies on the spot, frames people, and corrupts judges and elections in the approved and orthodox fashion.

But he makes the mistake of seducing a Vestal Virgin. This is going too far for the yokelry of Rome and old Cicero, who happens to be an uncle of Lydia, said virgin. In the end, deserted by all save Lydia and one regiment of mercenary mobsters, Cataline goes forth to meet death at the hands of the legions of civic pride.

The rest of those who add to the creakings of the plot are Fabius, a scandalous Roman Walter Winchell, who bounces in and out; Spartacus, Cataline's gladiator bodyguard; Abraham, an Hebraic henchman; Aurelia, madame of many brothels; Fulvia, Cataline's long suffering spouse; Marcellus, a charioteer who is put on the spot; Augustus, an honest cop from Hibernia; and Tiberius, a lecherous and bibulous judge.

Following an old Roman custom, this department will not identify the players—that would be the most unkindest cut of all.

Rubbing It In

On the bulletin board at Local 659, cameramen's union, is a newspaper clipping showing the salaries and bonuses of the big fellows in the picture business as revealed to the Senate.

Over the top is penciled:

"Just try to get our ten per cent back."

Unions granted ten per cent cut some time ago to help out in the depression.

New York.—In excess of 84,000 people weekly take advantage of the free radio shows in auditoriums, according to a survey made by the joint Legit and Picture Code Committee.

The committee's report condemns the free shows as unfair competition with industries which formerly used such auditoriums exclusively.

George Arthur Withdraws From Local Play Field

George K. Arthur yesterday announced his withdrawal from the local play producing field, severing connections with the International Group Players at the Hollywood Playhouse.

Arthur, in association with E. E. Clive, has run continuously for over eleven months, making a good record for the local show business. Clive will continue to produce at the Hollywood Playhouse.

Parker-Brown a Team

MGM is planning on teaming Jean Parker and Tom Brown in the Florence Ryerson yarn, "Mild Oats," a story dealing with youth. Brown is under contract to Radio but it is understood a loan can be obtained. The two players appeared together in "Wild Birds" for Radio.

BYRON MORGAN

JOEL SAYRE

with the ART DIRECTORS

Danny Hall of Universal is the only art director in Hollywood who is doubling in brass right now. He is doing the sets for the Margaret Sullavan-Douglass Montgomery picture, "Little Man, What Now?" at Universal, and is also doing special sets for Charlie Chaplin's next picture. Charlie swears by him. . . . Incidentally, Hall's sets for "Little Man" are going to be something to talk about. He is said to be doing something really outstanding in his portrayals of scenes in a German village, also some Berlin exteriors.

Willie Pogany is a sort of "Man Friday" for Busby Berkeley over at Warners' lot. Berkeley only has to give Pogany an inkling of the idea and Willie gives him special set effects that make 'em gasp when they are thrown on the screen. Pogany did the special set effect in "Wonderbar" and "Fashions of 1934" for the Berkeley sequences. He is now doing the same on the "Dames" picture.

Everyone at Universal is talking about the sets which Stanley Fleischer designed for the Lee Tracy picture, "I'll Tell the World," which has just been finished. Fleischer had a chance to let his imagination run riot, for a lot of it is laid in one of those mythical European kingdoms. Some of his interiors in that kingdom are said to be more than unusual.

At RKO, under the general supervision of Van Nest Polglase, head of the Art Department, Al Herman, Carroll Clark and Chick Kirk are as busy as bees. . . . Herman is doing the sets on "Stingaree," the Richard Dix picture that William Wellman is directing. This is made with an Australian background, and Herman did considerable research before he started on it. Some unusual ranch sets are among the highlights. . . . Herman is also working on the sets for "Green Mansions." This is going to give Herman and Polglase an opportunity to create effective settings, for it is laid in the South American jungle. Some very fantastic sets will result, according to those who have seen the drawings.

Carroll Clark is portraying a little bit of Merrie England in the sets for "Of Human Bondage." These are being erected at the RKO ranch, and are said to be models of authenticity. . . Chick Kirk had to study up on the middle west corn belt before he started on the sets for "Alien Corn." Yes, sir. That's just where it is laid—right in the corn belt, and Polglase says Chick now knows his corn area (no pun intended).

Esdras Hartley, who is responsible for the settings in the Joe E. Brown picture, "Sawdust," at Warners, says he is glad that he is designing the sets and doesn't have to handle the lions that have so playfully slapped Mr. Brown around. Incidentally, the settings for this picture are eye-popping. . . . Bob Haas, also on the Warner lot, is the gentleman responsible for the settings in "Friends of Mr. Sweeney." He won't tell you about them, but the other folk on the lot say Bob has done his usual fine job.

Over at the Fox lot Max Parker, Gordon Wiles, William Darling and Duncan Cramer are mighty busy, with "Free Gold," "Too Many Women," "The World Moves On," "The World Is Ours," "Springtime For Henry" and "Now I'll Tell" in production and others coming up.

Jack Okey is doing the sets for "The Happy Family" at Warners. At the same lot we find Anton Grot on "Doctor Monica," and "Without Honor"; John Hughes doing "The Return of the Terror."

At Paramount, where all the art directors are working under the personal supervision of Hans Dreier, Ben Herzbrun is on "It Ain't No Sin"; W. B. Ihnen is doing "Thirty Day Princess"; John Goodman, "Little Miss Marker"; Earl Hadrick on "The Witching Hour"; Robert O'Dell, "The Double Door"; and Ernst Fegte the gorgeous sets for "Murder at the Vanities."

Jugoslavian Heiress Back to Hollywood

Planning to build a picture studio in Jugoslavia, Frances Taucher, one-time Chicago waitress who fell into the Taucher macaroni fortune, has arrived in Hollywood to get talent for her pictures. Attorneys Oscar Collins and E. E. Morris are incorporating the company locally.

McDonnell Quits Erpi

H. A. McDonnell, studio manager for General Service, resigned suddenly Saturday. Stanley Hawkins, on the way from New York, may be given the post.

Smith Levee Contact Man

Charles Smith becomes contact man for M. C. Levee, severing relations with the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office to take a part of the Levee responsibilities on himself.

WB Seek Brook For Francis Lead

Warners are trying to borrow Clive Brook from Radio on a one-picture deal to play the lead opposite Kay Francis in her next picture, "The Firebird," which will follow "Dr. Monica."

Reginald Baker, the London representative of Associated Talking Films, is trying to get Brook to go to England and make a picture there under the production wing of Basil Dean.

Buzz Berkeley's New Warner Ticket 7 Yrs.

Busby Berkeley was all smiles yesterday. Warners handed him a new seven-year optional ticket negotiated through M. C. Levee.

Contract specifies he is to direct pictures outside of the musical class, although he will be called in when important filmusicals need his hand at dance direction.

ConsiderExtras' Transport.

Special group of five members of the NRA Code Committee for Extras met last night to frame a resolution dealing with extras' transportation problem.

The matter was up at recent meeting of main committee which got nowhere with it. Whipped into shape last night, and will be presented to general meeting of entire committee of fifteen tonight.

We Can Spare Some

Tuchock Deal Closed

Radio finally settled the contract dispute with Wanda Tuchock, after several days of differences, and handed the writer-director the tilt in salary that her option called for. She is writing an original story titled "Portrait," which she will also direct.

'Baby' Shorts Fold

Educational is reported having chucked the second "Baby Burlesque" series after making two of the six planned. Jack Hays, working picture-to-picture for the company, is out with other production plans up his sleeve.

WRITERS, CAMERAMEN IN LAST MINUTE AWARD RUSH

Writers and cameramen are staging a last minute voting rush in the Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit Competition.

Actors and directors started voting early, but the writers and cameramen lagged. Yesterday their ballots began to come in like a deluge. And the results in the cameramen circles will be surprising when the votes are counted and the cinematographic winner is announced.

This is the first time in picture history that ALL the cameramen have had the opportunity to vote in the naming of the best cinematographer of the year. There have been many bitter complaints in the past over some selections. Now the cameramen have the chance to do it themselves. If any cameraman has not received a ballot, a telephone call to the Reporter will bring one immediately.

Among the writers a half dozen pictures are running neck and neck for original story award honors. About as many are bunched in the race for first place among adaptations. So close are they grouped that it will not be until the very last ballot is in that one could safely pick the winner.

Art directors have been sending their votes in steadily, but there are still a number who have not voted. The competition is fast drawing to a close, so we take the liberty of advising the art directors who have not voted to send their ballots along before it is too late.

HOLLYWOOD

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The "HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD" column, which has been appearing daily in the NEW YORK MIRROR and some FIFTY NEWSPAPERS throughout the United States for several months, was handled until February 14, 1934, by the King Features Syndicate, which at no time held any contract with GWYNN, the writer of that column.

On February 14, 1934, the "working agreement" between this writer and the King Features Syndicate (which had placed this column into several Hearst newspapers) ceased. It ceased BECAUSE on that day Gwynn signed a long-term contract for the distribution of the "HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD" column with the UNITED FEATURES SYNDICATE!

This writer was offered a very good deal to continue with King Features, but signed with UNITED FEATURES instead, figuring that this organization, which serves over 1200 newspapers throughout the world, several hundred of which are in the U.S.A. (including twenty-six of this country's largest and most important dailies) is a far more ADVANTAGEOUS set-up for the interests of the column and its author.

It has always been and will continue to be this writer's intention to print all the news and gossip of Hollywood, except such information which could be construed as anti-Hollywood. The "HOT FROM HOLLYWOOD" column will always be BY, OF, and FOR HOLLYWOOD!

COHN BOYS ON THE PAN

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•A CHAP said to us yesterday, "What do you mean, Hollywood can learn something from lobby corner conversations with exhibitors? With all the high-powered production brains, at least high-salaried, we have in this town—do you think some small town exhibitor playing to three hundred people a night can tell us anything?"

He didn't put it in quite that conceited way, but you could read between his breaths and get the meaning.

And we have given the substance.

Which brings us to a thought.

We have an old line group of producers in Hollywood who grew up in this game when your company had to make money or fold.

Louis B. Mayer, who used to sell 'em over an exchange counter; Darryl Zanuck, who had to MAKE MONEY out of a dog star to keep his place in the business; Charles R. Rogers, who used to hit the Pullman route to sell 'em; Hunt Stromberg, who thought up pretty pictures and phrases to put 'em over; Irving Thalberg, who learned in the greatest school in the business, Universal, where a company stands or falls yearly by its pictures; Ben Schulberg—we could go on and on.

And then the business reached a glorious Seventh Heaven—a span of years that developed producers and supervisors who merely had to think of turning out something to SATISFY THEMSELVES.

The boys who could shrug a shoulder if you asked, "Well, did the company make any money out of your pictures?"

It was a blissful period.

Three weekly salaries for fellows who never had to worry about how the salesman was going to sell their personally nursed orchid, or the exhibitor to apologize for it.

Shucks—we can forget the higher realms of creative bunk and come down to hard pan: Fellows who wouldn't even cooperate with their employer to try to meet a release date. Knowing that missing the date was giving the company a six figure loss.

And with the dawn, we can tell you something, boys and girls of Hollywood. Go back to the school

30-Hour Week

Washington. — While dodging the point of being specifically quoted, the members of the picture industry Code Authority here for sessions with General Johnson and Administrator Rosenblatt, off the record expressed themselves as willing to back the President's expected demand for a thirty-hour week. But no quotes.

Zanuck Sends Offer To Swedish Prince

London.—On behalf of Darryl Zanuck, Ray Griffith yesterday made a picture offer to Prince Sigvard of Sweden, and Erika Patzek, the blonde German screen star who is to be his bride. Their coming marriage has been an international headline for weeks.

The offer is not so far from becoming a deal as you might imagine. Not only is the bride of the royal youngster a screen player, but Prince Sigvard has had considerable production experience both at Ufa in Germany and in English studios. The negotiations are on in earnest.

Jory for 'Du Barry'

Victor Jory's deal at Warners, on a loan-out from Fox for one picture and extended to two as already reported, was stretched in order to have Jory in line for the part of the Duc D'Aguilon in "Du Barry."

Two Weeks for 'Spitfire'

New York.—The Katharine Hepburn picture, "Spitfire," has been booked for the RKO Music Hall here for a two weeks' run. Starts Easter week, March 29.

Monday Set For Hearing In Stockholder's Suit Kicking About Salaries And Bonuses

New York.—Just in time to follow the spread headlines about big salaries and bonuses in the picture business as disclosed by the Federal Trade Commission, the Columbia Picture executives come to the gridiron. Supreme Court Justice McGeehan yesterday set Monday for the hearing in the suit of Mrs. Emma Cohen, claiming anything and everything against the company's heads.

Attorneys House, Grossman and Voorhaus represent the stockholder.

Para. Said Planning To Do Own Shorts

On the heels of news that Paramount would make a short featuring Bob Crosby, younger brother of Bing, comes a strong report that the picture company will make all its own shorts next year instead of farming to independents.

Arvid Gillstrom and Phil Ryan made the bulk of the Paramount comedies last year. Both producers have been in session with Lou Diamond, head of Para's shorts for the past two weeks, but no decision reached.

'Schnozzle' in Person

New York — Jimmie Durante is scheduled into the Capitol Theatre for personal appearances starting March 16.

Hays to Miami

New York.—Will H. Hays and his wife are on their way to Miami to spend a week's vacation.

Dick Rowland Deal At Radio Closed

New York.—Indications were yesterday that the deal which will bring Richard A. Rowland into the Radio Pictures situation in an executive capacity is closed. J. R. McDonough, Ben Kahane and Rowland spent an hour in conference.

It is understood the Rowland spot will be in the East in an advisory capacity, much in the same line he followed while on the Fox production staff.

Code Auth. Officials Report and Go Home

Washington.—The group of picture executives here to make their report to NRA higher-ups yesterday decided that they might as well go home after filing the report presented by John Flinn. The feeling is that the picture code hasn't begun to function yet, anyway, so there are no particular problems to iron out.

Next Week's N. Y. Pics

New York.—A very ordinary week in view for the Broadway picture palaces. Monday brings "Bedside" to the Mayfair," a drop for a Warner picture; "Heat Lightning" at the Rialto, Wednesday; "Spitfire" at the Music Hall, Thursday, and on Friday, "Six of a Kind" at the Paramount and "Midnight" at the Roxy.

'Palooka' Goes Big

New York.—In spite of the blizzard, Jimmy Durante's "Palooka" did the biggest first week business at the Rivoli here since "Roman Scandals." It rang the bell in the box-office to the tune of more than $38,000.

N. Y. Banker Arrives

Arthur Lehman, of the New York bankers, Lehman Bros., is in town to look over his Radio property. He was a guest of David Selznick at MGM yesterday.

FOX TRIES TO BEAT GUN ON ACADEMY ART AWARD

Art director circles buzzed yesterday as a result of a Fox publicity story, despatched to all newspapers throughout the country, giving the impression that the company had already won the Academy award for art direction. Studio announcement inferred Fox had been given the nod for "Follies" because of Gordon Wiles' art work. Wiles was given last year's award for "Transatlantic."

Offending paragraph in the Fox blurb reads, "The ingenuity an art di-

THE LOW DOWN

There's a story all over town which spread like wildfire—probably because so many were glad to hear it. It's about the composer who was supposedly playing the score for the new Dietrich picture for Josef von Sternberg the other day. He had played only a few bars, we hear, when the director said, "I wish I could find words to tell you how lousy your music is!"

Whereupon, we are reliably informed, the composer grabbed his score, tore it in half, and threw it in Von Sternberg's face, saying, "Well—this is ONE way!"

A side-light and a high-light on the opening of "Allez-Ooop" at the new Tingel-Tangel Theatre, Tuesday night, is the fact that Francis Lederer called off that night's performance of "Autumn Crocus" to be master of ceremonies at the opening, in which Steffie Duna was the star. A very nice gesture, if you ask us! The Duna was so lovely in her numbers that no doubt she'll be chased immediately by picture producers (for pictures, of course!) and the number "Tears" composed by Frederick Hollander—who did everything connected with the show—is destined to be a hit. Didja know that Hollander wrote the music for Marlene Dietrich's "Blue Angel"?

One of your favorite cowboy stars (or maybe not!) got himself in a nice mess at Palm Springs the other ivvening. Trying to imitate a sponge, and absorbing much too much liquid dynamite, he proceeded to call his wife a lotta mean names, and to break up the furniture in his hotel room. When the manager tried to interfere, the cow-boisterous actor pulled a gun—so the manager retired until morning when the star was gently but firmly ejected from the Inn. Manager may sue for the damage done—in which case you'll know whom we're driving at—not that it matters!

New York REVIEWS

"DARK HAZARD"

Warner-First National prod.; director, Alfred E. Green; writers, Ralph Block, Brown Holmes, W. R. Burnett.

Rialto Theatre

Times: The film is guilty of an irritating abruptness in its transitions, and it is apparent that the director has used this as a device to convey a false illusion of speed.

Mirror: An excellent story by W. R. Burnett proves slightly disappointing as a movie for Mr. Robinson. He plays his part bravely and he is supported by one of the usual excellent First National casts.

Herald-Tribune: It has been directed by Mr. Green with a simple, almost homespun treatment without frills, but with a human quality which recalls some of those gripping silent pictures of William DeMille. The picture has pathos, humor and believability. All in all, we recommend "Dark Hazard."

Sun: It ambles along peacefully for the most part, with little suspense and not much excitement. But a colorful background and a competent cast keep the interest alive. Its main assets are the star's pungent personality and a new background for motion pictures, the greyhound races.

American: It is difficult for Mr. Robinson to be convincingly sappy and in the hen-pecked sequences of the film he isn't very happy, for then the one glamorous character in the yarn is plucked of its fine, dashing feathers.

World-Telegram: In writing, characterization and plot it sets a high standard, and although the players who attempt to recreate Burnett's story and the characters on the screen are sufficient in every way, the film lacks the gusty comedy and bitter tragedy of the original.

Post: Edward G. Robinson possesses the gift, unhappily not common among his contemporaries, of bringing a humanizing conviction to most of his film characterizations, and this altogether welcome quality is to be found in his current work, "Dark Hazard."

News: Alfred E. Green adds fame to his megaphone with this smooth, fast production. Add the work of W. R. Burnett, who wrote "Little Caesar," and you have a picture you can bet on.

Journal: It's a milder role than Robinson fans expect of their hero, but the picture has been nicely handled and has its share of diversion. Genevieve Tobin does well with the not especially sympathetic characterization of the nagging wife, and Glenda Farrell is excellent as a breezy blonde who was part of Turner's past and ultimately becomes his future

A. J. Balaban Going In With Fanchon & Marco

New York.—Following news from Chicago that Fanchon and Marco flesh shows were going into Balaban and Katz houses comes the information that A. J. Balaban is to associate himself actively with the Fanchon and Marco organization.

Move is interesting in view of the incipient revival in flesh shows throughout the key cities.

Seff-Bartlett Team On Latter's Original

Manny Seff has been assigned to collaborate with Cy Bartlett on the screen play of the latter's original story, "Princess from Kansas City," which will co-star Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell for Warners.

'In Conference' Given to Murphy to Direct

Harry Joe Brown will not direct "In Conference" for the Charles R. Rogers unit as was planned, but will work on several stories that the unit has just purchased, turning over the assignment to Ralph Murphy.

"Canal Boy," which Murphy was to do next, will be assigned to another director.

Sylvia Thalberg on 'Honor Bright' Solo

Sylvia Thalberg is proceeding on the additional dialogue of "Honor Bright," which Louis Lighton produces for Paramount. Austin Parker, who collaborated with her, has gone to New York, and Tay Garnett, who was to direct, has moved over to MGM to handle a picture there.

Barred Yarn for MGM

'LET'S BE RITZY' LIGHT AND PLEASANT COMEDY

Cast, Direction and Photography Okay

"LET'S BE RITZY"
(Universal)

Direction .....Edward Ludwig
Original Play....Wm. Anthony McGuire
Screen Play.....Harry Sauber, Earle Snell
Photography .....Charles Stumar
Cast: Lew Ayres, Patricia Ellis, Isabel Jewell, Frank McHugh, Berton Churchill, Robert McWade, Hedda Hopper, Addison Richards, Adrian Morris, Betty Lawford, Clay Clement.

While the screen version of William Anthony McGuire's play, "If I Was Rich," will set no worlds on fire, neither will it send people away muttering into their beards. The picture is a pleasant, if unimportant, program attraction, designed simply to entertain. One of its main charms is that it has no illusions of grandeur. It is a light comedy, content to be merely light—and comic.

The story concerns a boy and a girl, married and living in a New York one-room flat upon their salaries as a shipping clerk and a stenographer. The girl accepts attentions from her boss, while the boy putters about with the housework. Behind with the rent, his friend, a loud-mouthed radio announcer, attempts a bluff to avoid dispossession. The shipping clerk is represented to be the son of a millionaire, struggling because he wants to make his own way. His landlord, rising to the bait, invites the young couple for a week-end party. Hoping to advance himself by this association with wealth, the boy accepts, only to discover that the landlord is facing bankruptcy and is bluffing too.

Some of the material has dated a bit since McGuire wrote his play. The adaptation is workmanlike but a few labored spots remain, despite vigorous direction by Edward Ludwig. Photography is standard.

The picture might well have been stolen by Robert McWade, playing the grouchy employer of our hero, had not McWade played with such a heavy hand. He is too grouchy. Contrast this performance with the always adept one contributed by Berton Churchill.

Lew Ayres and Patricia Ellis have both been seen to better advantage. Isabel Jewell and Frank McHugh make the most of their opportunities as the friends of the couple. The other parts are no more than bits.

The keynote of your campaign can be found in the original title, "If I Was Rich." Certainly there are enough variations of this theme to sell any picture. Promise your patrons a pleasant evening and leave it to the picture to deliver.

Asbury at Columbia

Herbert Asbury arrived in town yesterday to take up a term writing ticket at Columbia, where an assignment for him will be selected today. His deal was set through the William Morris office.

Baby LeRoy-Fields Feud Healed at Last

If the Hollywood Reporter's Award Contest does nothing else, it will go down in picture history as having been the means of healing one of the most bitter and long-standing feuds in the industry, that of W. C. Fields and Baby LeRoy. Ballots received by the Reporter show that each has voted for the other for the best acting performance of the year.

Pic Shortage Brings More Chi 'Vaude'

Chicago.—The Balaban and Katz Oriental Theatre has added six vaudeville acts to the screen bill and capped it with a reduction in admission prices.

This move steps the Oriental up alongside the State-Lake Theatre, operated by Jones, Linick and Schaefer. This house has been doing a big business with combination of vaudeville and pictures.

Barrymore Signed For 'Wednesday's Child'

John Barrymore was yesterday signed by Radio for the lead in "Wednesday's Child," a Broadway play by Leopold Atlas. Barrymore goes to Radio when he completes his work in "Twentieth Century" at Columbia.

Frank M. Thomas, a youngster of 12 who had the top spot in the play, will be featured. Willis Goldbeck is scripting.

Beachwood Plant Revives

California Studios, Inc., yesterday announced it has taken over the plant and equipment of the Beachwood Studios at 1420 N. Beachwood Drive. Announced that many improvements in lighting, stage and sound equipment have been made.

Morris Back This Week

Chester Morris will return from New York this week in time to start his next picture, "Practical Joker," for Universal on Monday. Edward Laemmle will direct and Stanley Bergerman is producing.

Smith on Radio Mag.

Frederick James Smith is again editing a radio magazine. Tower publications today brought out the first issue of a new radio book with Smith as managing ed. Last year he introduced a similar magazine for Fawcett.

Walthall Not at Para.

Henry B. Walthall did not go into "The Witching Hour" at Paramount as previously announced by the studio. Player recently finished his work in "Operator 13" at MGM.

Fields on West Yarn

Herbert Fields checked in at Paramount yesterday to develop an original story for a Mae West starring vehicle, to be produced by the William LeBaron unit.

Arliss Contract Protects 20th Cent.

Rufus LeMaire states that his deal with George Arliss covers personal management for future picture contracts, has no relation to radio work, and that LeMaire himself has not abandoned plans for stage production.

The Arliss contract with Twentieth Century is understood to contain a clause which gives that organization a six-month period after the release of his second picture before deciding on future commitments. With "House of Rothschild" going out as a two-dollar road show, this puts the release date for the next Arliss considerably in the distance, and consequently also postpones new negotiations by Le Maire for his client.

Agents Suffer by MGM Ban on Solicitors

MGM is putting the screws on agents in its latest order putting up the bars against solicitors. Studio is trying to get rid of he hawkers who invade offices at all times of day, selling everything from behind-the-counter literature to racing turtles.

Artist managers are the unwitting sufferers, since the ban cancels the freedom of the lot heretofore enjoyed by them.

Rogers After Title of 'Stormy Weather'

Charles R. Rogers is dickering with Arlen and Kohler to purchase the title of their song hit, "Stormy Weather," sans the score. Paramount producer wants it as the title for his "Canal Boy" production.

Yacht Club Elects

Mike Boylan succeeded Bill McNutt as commodore of the Pacific Writers' Yacht Club as the result of an election held yesterday. Other officiers include, Dick Schayer, vice-commodore; Harvey Gates, rear-commodore; Milton Cashy, fleet commander; Franklin Hansen, port commander; and Russell Coller, fleet secretary.

Adams-Murfin to Team

Although he has three more weeks to go with Charles R. Rogers at Paramount where he is writing the script of "Lizzie Skeritt," Frank R. Adams was signed by Radio yesterday to join Jane Murfin at a later date to write a story for Frances Lederer. The Rebecca and Silton office negotiated.

Somborn Will Okayed

The will of Herbert Somborn, late proprietor of the Brown Derby restaurants, was admitted to probate yesterday. The document leaves 60 per cent of his estate to Gloria Swanson Somborn, daughter of Gloria Swanson, whose second husband Somborn was.

'Beef Trust' Wanted

Leo McCarey is searching for a Beef Trust chorus. Director wants a bulging line for the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin."

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BURNEY

With the entire motion picture industry almost completely unionized or codified by this time, about the only ones left unprotected seem to be patrons of motion picture theatres. So, a New York editor has devised a code for the lads who deposit their quarters at the box-office till—to wit: A demand for the production of a greater number of comedies—so that our evenings at the talkies may tickle our risibilities more and our tear-glands less. . . . All directors to stop worrying about "trick" camera angles and to realize (noting the success of Mae West) that the public is far more interested in curves. . . . Sound equipment in all theatres to be reduced in volume because under the present conditions members of the audience can hardly hear what they are saying to each other.

Recognition of the fact that the Adonis on the screen is not always the real hero. It's often the man out front who has the endurance to sit through the picture. . . . The setting apart in each theatre of an isolated section for the exclusive use of young couples who don't love to go to the movies, but who go to the movies to love. . . . And, finally, producers to give more thought to the stories of the pictures and stop depending so much upon their lucky stars.

Quite the baldest and boldest move ever made in this country to dignify the existence of professional gigolos was attempted this past week in New Yorк. Billy Rose, impresario of the Casino de Paree, addressed a newspaper ad to the ladies which reads as follows: "May I present a group of sophisticated, amazingly handsome young men? If Madame's escort doesn't feel like dancing, she can trip the light fantastic with Mr. Three or Mr. Seven (they have no names). They see, they hear, but they remember nothing! You'll know them by their lapels. LOOK FOR THE GREEN CARNATION!" A swell idea, but the floral decorations should be RED.

Anybody in Hollywood who thinks he or she is being overworked playing in two productions simultaneously or something should hide his head in shame . . . and Jack Williams of the good old legit is the lad who puts them to shame. . . . Playing in "Peace on Earth," the Theatre Union Group production at the Civic Repertory on 14th street, Jackie establishes what is probably an all-time record by performing seven roles in one night. . . . As the play advances he is a striker, a German sailor, a college alumnus, a bailiff, an admiral, an army recruiter and a financier. . . . Only Paul Muni, to our knowledge, could equal this feat!

'Tight Breeches' For N.Y.

New York.—"Tight Breeches," a play by Taintor Foote and Herbert Hayes, will be given a tryout here in the Spring. Rowland Stebbins recently gave an amateur performance of it in Charlotte, N. C.

REELING around LONDON

The Selznick-Joyce gang must be having a hearty snicker at the people who have been gagging about Frank Joyce's extended British "vacation"—for Frank, despite all the society stuff, has been working overtime here and has wangled some ser-well contracts, and we don't mean maybe. . . . Max Milder, Warner chief, sitting in the lobby of the Prince Edward, Derby hatted and big cigaro in mouth, superintending a booful display for the trade show of "Fashions for 1934"—and in our opinion this title can qualify for one of the worst lows of the year—nevertheless Max and henchman Dillon Damen smacked it over with a beeg bang.

Johnnie Farrow taking time out from Culver City to write his British Mayfair acquaintances for a suggested name for his noo scooner. . . . Ana Lee, now radiantly blonde and going into the new Al Parker pic, is looking a million and one dollars these days. . . . Ned Mann giving London the once-over, he's going to do the model stuff for the Korda-Wells fantasy. . . . Marian Marsh takes Momma around with her on parties; she should team up with Miss Ida and Mrs. Stanley Lupino! . . . Anthony Bushell starting a new fashion here, red and white spotted scarf, black hat, coffee colored coat and banana suede shoes—oh, we nearly forgot, he carried a rolled umbrella!

Betty Stockfeld dancing at the Cafe de Paris with Russell Fawcus, who originally put her into the flicks; 'tis rumored Betty may go to Universal City if she's a good girl. . . . Walt Disney's "Pied Piper" is re-playing date after date in this town; they love it, and what a hand it gets ,too. . . . Hugh Findlay and Bob Flaherty lunching to discuss exploitation of Bob's new epic "Man of Arran." . . . John Betjman, new movie critic on the Standard, is still trying to out-Walter Winchell, and still hasn't mastered the idea yet. . . . The reason Betty Astell visits the Royalty Theatre stage door is—snap! Crackle!! Pop!!!—her brother is the stage manager.

Joe Schenck told a few folk he thought Aileen Marson was a hit for pics and in less time than it takes to say "Cut!" British Lion got her John Henry to a year's contract; too many Hollywood talent scouts in town today! . . . Last year our biggest studio here admitted that it did not have to sign people; it could always get them for a pic when needed; but with featured folk and even bit-players taking the New York boats with contracts in their pockets, there is a little more British talent hunting in this town than there used to be.

It is time some one was assigned to DIRECT Judy Kelly in a flicker; that girl has got plenty, if only some one would go after it! . . . Michael E. Balcon, Herman Fellner, Anna Neagle, Joe Friedman and Herbert Wilcox among the celebs watching Garbo wowing them in "Queen Christina." . . . Irving Asher lining up a big production schedule, but how come, Warners, that you are re-making "The Church Mouse" so soon? Even if it is only in England?

Chris Mann fixed the Gregory Ratoff-Gaumont deal here. . . . There is a British star who freely admits that she would fall on her, well, face—if she ever gets the chance of playing opposite Junior Fairbanks; now what do you say about that, Gertie Lawrence? . . . Buster Laughton, who has been to the South of France for a few days' vacation, is back legitimating again. . . . Dave Bader recuperating from a bout of flu. . . . When is some one going to give Pearl Argyle a real movie break?

LONDON PAPERS DO RAVES OVER 'QUEEN CHRISTINA'

London.—Greta Garbo's "Queen Christina" has set a new record for reviews in the press of London. Without exception, the critics lauded Garbo and the picture to the skies, praising in terms seldom if ever used before. Some of the papers even went so far as to issue special contents bills, announcing the reviews. Following are some excerpts:

Daily Herald: Garbo's best . . . a triumph . . . never has done better work.

Daily Express: Garbo's new triumph . . . greatest personality on the screen.

Daily Mirror: Garbo's greatest.

Daily Sketch: An outstandingly fine picture.

Times: Deliberately brilliantly composed.

Sunday Times: None exceeds for brilliancy or the power of casting a spell the glamorous Garbo . . . her best yet.

Sunday Pictorial: A perfectly gorgeous film.

Sunday Express: A magnificent picture.

News-Chronicle: Triumph of acting . . . more serenely enthroned as the queen of the screen than ever.

Daily Telegraph: A Greta Garbo triumph . . . memorable acting.

Evening News: One of those pictures you can see and see again. I have seen it twice and shall go again.

Sunday Chronicle: The ruling queen of the screen. Her performance is one of the strongest she has ever given.

News of the World: Garbo the enchantress. The greatest woman star the moving picture industry has ever known. The greatest of her triumphs.

The People: Greta's greatest triumph. I went into the Empire Theatre on the first morning of this picture. Although it was in the middle of the day, the vast auditorium was full. Will be the most successful of all Garbo's pictures.

Sunday Referee: Her finest display. Beside all the other film stars, Garbo is a film sun.

Fahrnie Bankroll Is All Padlocked

Here's a gal with a purpose. Merry Fahrnie, daughter of Chicago's patent medicine king, who came to Los Angeles for a rest, has decided to stay in Hollywood until she gets into pictures. She is taking a house, and tells promoters she isn't in line to pay for her own pictures, even though she has a big enough bankroll.

As a matter of fact, the suit was filed over a year ago. But because of the recent Government publicity on excessive payments to executives in all lines, it is certain to assume real importance in newspapers next week.

Mrs. Cohen's complaint, through the long ritual of a legal document, among other things lists as grievances the alleged "issuance of false statements regarding profits," "that the executives have withdrawn excessive sums from the company under the guise of bonuses, expenses, etc.," and that in the fiscal year ended June, 1931, the company over-stated its income by $750,000.

The complaint goes on to claim that the three executives, Harry Cohn, Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt, without the sanction of the stockholders, voted themselves 25 per cent of the profits; that no dividends on the common have been paid since 1931; and that In 1929 the executives voted themselves five year contracts at $1500 a week, but nevertheless later boosted Harry's figure to $2800 a week.

A peculiar feature of the suit is the inclusion of Joe Brandt as a defendant, the latter having been an officer during the period about which complaint is being made, but since having split with the Cohn brothers.

The stockholder's attorneys are prominent in this city, giving something of weight to the possibilities of the suit. But the attitude of the Columbia attorneys is that the suit only has nuisance value, and they do not care to dignify the charges with an answer before trial.

PHOTOPLAY

126 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Norma Shearer (MGM)

Not bad—the April issue of Photoplay.

Sara Hamilton lets her sense of humor run riot in her two stories, "Secrets of the Fitting Room" and "Sing, Hollywood, Sing!" Kirtley Baskette is the only other two-story writer here, offering "Is It Garbo or Hepburn?" and "They, Too, Were Stars." Jane Hampton is very amusing in her "Sweet Alice Brady."

William F. French tells about the trials and tribulations of "Wunderbar" in "Only Al Wanted to Play"; C. B. Gray writes "Green-Eyed Jealousy"; Sylvia issues her usual warning—this time to Patricia Ellis; Winifred Aydelotte has "Hollywood, the World's Sculptor"; and Ruth Rankin has a good yarn, "What's This Muni Mystery?"

"Happy Landing!" is by Jim Tully and is about the Bill Boyds; Virginia Maxwell tells about "Leslie Howard's Lucky Coin"; and Jeanne Hayes writes a swell, grand story on Mary Carlisle, "Little Girl, Don't Cry."

SHADOPLAY

74 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Clara Bow (Fox)

It is unfortunate that Shadoplay must so consistently be the "spill-over" magazine for Photoplay, for it comes out the little end of the horn with annoying regularity. The March issue is no exception.

In fact, Virginia Maxwell's fictionization of "The Journal of a Crime" is the only thing in the mag that is particularly interesting, with the exception of Susan Hempstead's amusing story of "Healy and His Hooligans."

"Apollo in Furs," by O. B. Server is about Francis Lederer; "Barnstorming Days," by Crowell Mack, tells of experiences players had on the road; Vera Mason writes about "Jack Gilbert's Latest Heartbreak"; William Pendleton says nothing very pleasantly in "Kay's Okay with Kenneth"; Rita Ryan has "The 'Best Dressed Woman' Jinx," and Miriam Morris has a yarn on youthful players in "Little Men, What Now?"

Art all the way through the magazine tops the reading matter.

SCREENLAND

98 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Lilian Harvey (Fox)

The April issue of Screenland is breezy, amusing reading from cover to cover, with so few dull spots that they don't matter.

Leonard Hall contributes the brightest spots in his two stories, "Star's Return" and "Hail, Hayes!" They are well-written accounts of the adventures of Miriam Hopkins and Helen Hayes on the New York stage.

Ida Zeitlin has "What Happened to Hepburn on Broadway?" and she also writes "Maurice Denies It"—meaning practically all the rumors that have been tagging around after him.

James M. Fidler is another two-story contributor—"Janet and Charlie Tell the Truth About Their Screen Reunion" and "Why Jean Harlow Almost Quit the Screen."

S. R. Mook is very funny in his yarn on Richard Ralston Arlen Jr., "Baby LeRoy's Rival"; Bing Crosby starts "My Real Life Story," told to Mr. Mook; Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., writes rather ramblingly in "Warning to Hollywood Stars"; Ben Maddox quotes Leslie Howard in "Is Movie Love Too Real?" Beth Brown has an interesting story on Herbert Marshall in "Marshall vs. 'Bart'," and Dickson Morley tells about Dick Powell in "Scared of Movie Women."

MOVIE CLASSIC

82 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY....Constance Bennett

Most of the stories in the March Movie Classic hit a nice, average, readable level, with none standing out very far.

Dorothy Donnell outlines the loverless career of the German star in "No Romantic Roles for Dorothea Wieck?" Loretta Young talks to Jack Grant about Spencer Tracy and other things in "Get Your Heart Broken Early"; Gladys Hall has "Doug Jr. Speaks Up for His Dad—and Himself"; Boris Nicolai quotes Rouben Mamoulian's father as saying that his son was going to marry Garbo in "Will Garbo Marry Her Director?" Mark Dowling goes over the 1933 awards in "Hollywood's New Roll of Honor"; Sonia Lee writes "Madge Evans Tells Her Big Secret," and the secret is Tom Gallery; and Winifred Aydelotte gives the younger players an intelligence test in "These Li'l Girls Know the Answers."

Dorothy Roberts' story on "What Rudy Says About Women Now" is not so interesting; Faith Service writes a nice yarn, "Flash! How Otto Kruger Got to the Top!" Dorothy Calhoun tells how "Hollywood Starts a Big Clean-up," concentrating mostly on art and ads; and Robert Fender has a very amusing story, "What's a Stooge? Ted Healy Tells You." Ruth Biery writes the third chapter in "The Private Life of Mae West."

Everything O.K. but nothing O.S. (out-standing).

MOVIE MIRROR

96 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Mae West (Paramount)

There are sixteen stories in the March Movie Mirror and they all, individually, are worth the price of the magazine.

One of the best is Douglas Fairbank's Jr.'s "The Unknown Leslie Howard," and for sheer earnest sincerity, read Gladys Hall's "Spencer Tracy's Love Confession." Faith Baldwin is fair and clever in "Has Virtue a Chance in Hollywood?" Helen Louise Walker has a nice yarn, "Hollywood Takes Care of Its Own"; Dora Albert tells about the romances of Ricardo Cortez and Adolphe Menjou in "They're Not Afraid of Love"; Susan Talbot is amusing in her outline of the stars' busy days, "How To Be Three People in One Day"; Charles Grayson has "Its Tough To Be On Top" (Sylvia Sidney); Alice Fuller tells about "The Salvation of Cary Grant," and Adele Whiteley writes "How Four Stars Got Their Man" (Irene Dunne, Norma Shearer, Claudette Colbert and Helen Hayes); and George Madden wonders about Gloria Swanson in "Can Gloria Come Back?"

Dorothy Emerson writes a swell fictionization of "Trigger"; Harry Lang concludes his life story of Mae West; Michael Johnson contributes one of the best Max Baer interviews yet; Caroline Somers Hoyt tells about "Hepburn's Hollywood Creations," and Harold Stevens has "Jimmy Cagney's Health Road To Success," and Dorothy Manners lets "Jean Harlow Talk about Those Divorce Rumors!" and spike them.

Not bad reading this month.

PICTURE PLAY

66 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Lona Andre (Paramount)

Picture Play for March is enlivened by humorous, clever writers whose stories are entirely entertaining.

Samuel Richard Mook writes about some unguarded moments in the lives of certain stars in "Secret Selves Unmasked"; Malcolm H. Oettinger has a good time telling about Elissa Landi in "Sleeping Beauty"; Dudley Early has a swell story on Paul Kelly in "Who's Afraid of Kelly?" Florence Ross is very amusing in "The New Love Code," and Maude Latham has a grand interview on Jean Muir in "A Blond Natural."

Frances Fink tells all about George Raft's wife in "Fans, Mrs. Raft"; Kay Francis gives both sides of the story to Dorothy Wooldridge in "What Hollywood Has Given Me and What It Has Taken from Me"; Myrtle Gebhart has a sympathetic, fair story on Joan Crawford, "Growth Is Her Goal"; Laura Benham looks around the Hollywood Hills and writes "Tragic Mansions," and Helen Pade has gotten up a questionnaire by which the fans can compare themselves to their favorites —"What Star Are You Like?"

The March Picture Play is one of its best issues to date.

SILVER SCREEN

74 pages and cover

COVER DISPLAY.....Myrna Loy (MGM)

Elizabeth Wilson, Patricia Keats and Charles Grayson exercise their sense of humor to great advantage in the March Silver Screen.

They write respectively, "A Visit to Norma Shearer on the set of 'Rip Tide' "; "I'm in Love" (Myrna Loy) and "Clicked Twice," all about Douglass Montgomery.

These three stories are good and funny.

Adela Rogers St. Johns comments frankly on several stars in "Some Grow—Some Swell"; Muriel Babcock points out the influence Hollywood has upon customs and costumes of the world at large in "All the World Follows the Stars"; S. R. Mook flits humorously from studio to studio in his department, "Stars at Work"; Ruth Biery is serious—and with reason, too—in "The Assassins of Hollywood"; Lenore Samuels has "Design for Starring" (Miriam Hopkins), and Harriet Parsons tells about Miss Wieck in "There Is Only One Dorothea."

Ted Healy and His Stooges Split Up

Ted Healy and his stooges definitely came to the parting of the ways yesterday. The fight over salary has been on and off for several weeks among the gang, and the stooges, Howard, Fine and Howard, decided to go on their own.

Healy's deal with MGM, until he received a new contract, was also for the stooges, but the new one only calls for him.

HOT WORDS SCORCH AIR AS EXTRA GROUP MEETS

Friedman-Garcia Exchange Opinions

A verbal row that reached the "Here's my nose, hit it if you dare" stage, but which ended in nothing more exciting than a lot of words and blatant noise, enlivened the meeting of the NRA Code Committee for Extras last night at the committee quarters in the Guaranty Building.

The squabble was between Phil Friedman, casting director on the Fox lot, and Allan Garcia, president of the Hollywood Supporting and Extra Players' organization.

The meeting had gone along as smoothly as the code meetings usually do, and apparently was finally getting somewhere. It was adjourned and members started to leave. Suddenly Friedman jumped up and shouted that he had something to say about one of the members of the committee.

"Forget it," exclaimed Chairman Mrs. Mabel Kinney.

"A member of this committee told a friend of mine he was going to poke me in the nose the next time he saw me," shouted Friedman. "You're the man who said it," he shouted as he pointed his finger at Garcia. "Here's my nose! Now poke it if you dare. You can't scare me," he fairly screamed.

The open door to the room was slammed shut and nothing but a noisy rumble issued for a few minutes. Then Friedman, looking very white, came out with a friend, exclaiming, "He can't intimidate me."

A few minutes later Garcia came out, also looking white. Neither Friedman nor Garcia would talk. Neither would any of the committee members.

Mrs. Kinney declared that it was perfectly ridiculous for grown men to "act so much like children when they gather to take up matters of real importance."

She was so disturbed by it all that she could give no definite announcement of what action took place, except to say that the matter of transportation and hazardous risks for extras was finally settled, but that the details would have to be obtained later. She also announced that she leaves today for Sacramento for a week. While away, Mrs. Una Hopkins will act as chairman of the committee.

And the dove of peace tucked his head beneath his wing and shivered as the blue eagle on the NRA sign seemed to be about to scream.

Award Note

Due to an error in make-up, the original story, "Six Hours To Live," was listed as "an adaptation" in the list of pictures eligible in the Reporter Awards of Merit Competition. It was written by Gordon Morris and Morton Barteaux, and was produced by Fox. Therefore, it should be listed in the originals.

She's Typed

Alice White won't be able to get sore if anyone calls her blonde poison now. She goes into RKO's picture, "Blonde Poison" as the lead.

Screen Writer Puts Dillinger Into Yarn

Taking advantage of the notoriety that has been and is being heaped upon John Dillinger, the bandit, Bartlett Cormack, of the Paramount writing staff, has done a story on Dillinger's life and adventures.

It is understood that the story makes the bandit both the hero and the villain. Cormack has titled his story, "Goes Marching On."

Dr. Pietro Cimini, conductor of the operas at the Hollywood Bowl for the past four years, was signed yesterday by Columbia to organize and rehearse the operatic choruses and direct the orchestra for the opera sequences in "Don't Bet on Love," the Grace Moore vehicle. Para. Has New Plan On Writer Credits

In an effort to avoid conflict among staff writers as to who deserves credit lines on scripts and how those credit lines should read, Paramount has issued an order removing writer names from screen plays as they come through. Proper credits on scripts have in the past caused much friction among the scriveners which the company hopes to eradicate.

Writers now will have to wait until previews to know how their screen credit will shape up. Considerable dissatisfaction among the staff members has been heard over the new scheme. One important writer said: "I won't know how I stand until the preview and then it's too late to start fighting for my rights."

NOTICE

Inasmuch as what newspapermen call "the Dillinger Story" is reaching newspaper proportions that will undoubtedly suggest moving-picturization to picture makers, major (as the slang term goes) as well as independent, it is appropriate (to save the rest of the industry its valuable time, as well as its money) that PARAMOUNT gives notice that it has a story (an original by Bartlett Cormack) derived entirely from "the Dillinger Story"—a comment and a reflection on this day and age—in which Dillinger, rank individualist that he is, is both hero and heavy, and which script, being practically finished (in timeliness time) will go into production immediately. Its title is "Goes Marching On." Moreover, the story treatment and the title have been registered—and discussed—where it matters legally.

IATSE DECLARES WAR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

• GETTING back to the question of supervisors.

How much supervision do you think was offered or was given George Cukor for his "Little Women?" How much of the writing of that adaptation do you think the supervisor dictated?

With Cukor on "Little Women," and on all his recent pictures, it has been the same with the writer or the adaptor. Both of them worked together in fashioning a story for the screen and no supervisor or producer had anything to do with their work other than to say "that's fine, go ahead." None would dare say otherwise, for they would not question the intelligence, good judgment and production ability of the director.

And there are plenty of Cukors and Capras; the woods are full of them. Why not give them their production chance, why not permit them the use of their abilities, why stifle them with stupid supervision?

Certainly there is a supervisor here or there who knows his work, who is capable of dictating ways and means of making pictures that will be good pictures; but they are very few, and the many others, through their lack of ability, are accounting for most of the bad pictures.

Good writers, good directors are licked by the inane judgments of both story and direction of groups of men who have no place in this business at all. They throw up their hands in disgust and reason: "If the studio thinks so little of its product as to permit such insanities, why not give it what it wants?" They do—and it's generally bad.

For a man to be a good supervisor, he should be a good writer, an excellent director and an intelligent executive. How many of our supervisors possess those qualifications?

We are pleading for a freedom of production expression for the men and women in this industry WHO KNOW. We are condemning the practice of putting relatives in executive seats, dictating the efforts of those men and women, because the relatives DO NOT KNOW and will never know. We are asking for BETTER PICTURES and suggesting a way that they may be had. What do you think?

New Exhib Body?

New York.—An exchange of speechmaking invitations between Harry Brandt, of the New York indie exhibs, and Martin Smith, of Ohio's indie group, is thought by many here to presage a possible move towards a new national exhibitor organization.

Earl Carroll-Para. Sued for $270,000

George Rosener yesterday filed suit for $120,000 against Earl Carroll, producer of the stage version of "Murder at the Vanities," and against Paramount, which is making a picture of the play, for $150,000, alleging infringement of copyright.

Rosener claims he wrote a play called "Grease Paint" in 1929, later revised it as "Murder to Music," and copyrighted it in 1931. Carroll and others, the complaint alleges, "appropriated" portions of the theme, plot and characters of this play and embodied them in "Murder at the Vanities." Rosener also asks an accounting and an injunction against further showings.

Radio Plans 8 in England

London.—Radio Pictures is planning to make about eight quota pictures for the British market in the coming season. They will be produced at the Hagen Studios, where it is understood Universal will also eventually close for its next year quota productions.

Elliott Rushing To Capital To Lay Pic Situation In Lap Of Roosevelt And Congress

With the departure last night for Washington of International President William C. Elliott of the IATSE, it was learned that the IATSE is preparing for war and plans to carry the fight to Congress and right to the desk of President Roosevelt.

Burned by the merry-go-round ride he was given in Hollywood, Elliott, instead of leaving for New York, departed for Washington where he will go before the Labor Committee of the House of Representatives and lay bare a complete report on local labor Code

'Sailor Beware' Cast May Walk on Show

New York.—There is something of a mystery about the proposal of a salary cut for the Broadway cast of "Sailor Beware." All the members of the cast have handed in their resignations, and the producers announce plans to bring the Chicago cast back to the Rialto.

But in the background is the fact that Paramount, owner of the screen rights, would be tickled to death to see the play close now, because under their deal, the longer the play runs the higher the price to be paid.

Helen Hayes Due Here For 'Vanessa' Lead May 1

New York.—"Mary of Scotland," the Theatre Guild play, will close around May 1 and Helen Hayes will return to Hollywood immediately. She will go into "Vanessa" at MGM, which will be ready when she returns. Diana Wynyard has already been cast.

N. Y. Indies Fight Majors and Erpi

New York.—More headaches for the majors. The New York independent exhibitor group decided yesterday that so long as they had got this far in the season without weakening in their agreements not to book percentage pictures or give preferential dates, they might as well continue with the policy.

Another important angle of the meeting was a warning to exhibs against signing the new Erpi agreements being offered on the heels of the suit against that company alleging exorbitant charges. The indies claim the new agreement is virtually a release to Erpi from all past claims.

Flood of Dillinger Pictures in Offing

In addition to the story on the bandit, Dillinger, written by Bartlett Cormack for Paramount and announced in yesterday's Reporter, several other yarns built around the same personality are in the making.

Charles Furthman wrote one some time ago, in which he predicted the jail break, and this is being considered by Warners, Fox and Radio. The Hays office has not yet approved the subject for pictures.

MGM ON BUYING SPREE FOR PLAYS AND NOVELS

New York.—A couple of weeks ago it looked as though Radio was Broadway's best customer for screen rights to plays and novels, but developments yesterday indicate that the Coast MGM conferences with Nicholas Schenck have reached the point where that organization is ready to go to market for next year's material.

And when the MGM bankroll is loosened, things happen. That organi-

New York REVIEWS

"DAVID HARUM"
Fox prod.; director, James Cruze; writer, Walter Woods.
Radio City Music Hall

News: There is very little action in the picture, but the story has a nice, homely quality that keeps the audience interesed.
Times: Another of those welcome, refreshing pictures which, judging by the constant outbursts of laughter, was enjoyed greatly.
Herald-Tribune: The picture is entirely Will Rogers.
Mirror: Filled with humor and charming tenderness, it has such vivid American color that it is a Rogers picture of importance.
American: It is essentially heart-throb drama, but it is distinguished by moments of high hilarity, and, too, there are incidents of gentle gaiety and simple effectiveness.
Sun: Built all too obviously to glorify one personality, it does just that. The picture might have been much funnier, certainly more dramatic, if its purpose had not been so important.
World-Telegram: Just an innocent ancient that might better have remained hidden in some attic.
Journal: It's all very homespun and bucolic.
Post: We can hardly imagine any material less inspiring to work with than the skimpy story of David Harum.

Radio Going Slowly On Foreign Market

New York.—Unsettled European financial and political conditions will cause Radio to proceed with caution in foreign expansion, according to Phil Reisman, just returned from Europe.

Reisman declares that Radio will not go into intensive distribution until conditions settle, but meanwhile expressed his satisfaction with the British organization, which has had great success with "Little Women" and "King Kong."

Incidentally, Reisman confirmed reports printed in The Reporter that quota restrictions are proving a boomerang to foreign exhibitors through resulting in a cheaper class of product just made to fill quota requirements.

zation closed yesterday for the rights to Max Gordon's production, "The Shining Hour," as a possible Norma Shearer vehicle. The price was $47,000—no mean nickels.

"Yellow Jack," the play about Dr. Walter Reed's martyrdom in Cuba searching for the yellow fever germ, opened last night to mixed critical opinions—but it doesn't mean much anyway since the understanding is that MGM has the inside track on the picture rights.

And to close the day, MGM paid $15,000 for a Nazi novel by Franz Werfel, titled "Forty Days of Musa Dagh." It has been published in German but wont' be out in this country until Fall, when Viking will sponsor it. Yessir, MGM money is in the market.

OPEN FORUM

March 6, 1934.

Dear Bill:

I am one of the "malcontents" regarding the Screen Writers' Guild; at least, I am one of those who have sat with the "malcontents." I am writing this note because it has been published that all scribblers not at present enthusiastic about the Screen Writers' Guild are critics of the present regime.

I am not.

I feel it is coming from me to say so because I was on the Executive Board for several months. I saw a great deal of earnest effort to find issues for which a writers' organization should and could go seriously to war. In my opinion, we found none. Also in my opinion, it makes not the slightest difference who occupies the official spots. A writer's real problems are individual and there's nothing for an organization to do.

At the time of the fifty per cent cut, I was persuaded a spectre was rising—the sinister monstrosity—a producers' agreement of some kind against everything in the world but themselves. If any such thing ever did threaten, the President has made it impossible.

The writer's business is to make himself valuable. If he does, he's badly needed.

As far as I am personally concerned, I have never been more fairly and courteously treated than I have since I came to the movies five years ago.

My convictions being what they are, I intend to take no part in coming elections. So I'll be obliged to you if you let me state my case in your paper.

Sincerely,
JOHN MEEHAN.

BRITISH PRODUCERS THROUGH WITH 'WASHED-UP' STARS

Baker, Visitor Here, Gives Latest Slant

British motion picture producers have turned over a new production leaf, and from now on only the biggest American stars, with names that mean something at the box-office, will be able to land contracts that will carry them to the English studios.

This information comes from no less an authority than Reginald Baker, managing director of Associated Talking Pictures, Ltd., and Associated British Distributors, who is now in Hollywood for a brief stay.

Commenting upon the part that British producers are playing in the amusement world, Mr. Baker declared that the time has passed when American players, writers and directors who are either "washed up" or find themselves on the picture skids, may get juicy picture contracts in England.

"We are more than grateful for the help of the American picture people," said Mr. Baker, "but we have awakened to the fact that in the past we have frequently hired people who had practically finished their careers in America and have taken them to England where they were of no real worth to us. That time has ended. From now on we will only turn to America for people who are at the top of the motion picture ladder; people who will mean something, and who will be of material assistance to our pictures.

"Over in England we feel that we are now really getting somewhere. So unless we can get the best, we will use our own people. Of course when we can get someone like Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., that is different. We have been developing some fine picture people ourselves, and we feel they should be given the chance to go along with us."

Mr. Baker expressed himself as more than proud of the fact that England has produced such a picture as "Henry the Eighth" and declared that the reception and praise of that picture by the American people is considered by the British as another indication of the fairmindedness of the American people.

"I also understand that Mr. Laughton has been getting a very big vote in the Academy and Reporter awards competitions," he added. "That surely is sporting of your American picture people. It is a splendid spirit."

Stooge Makes Good

Another stooge makes good. Benny Baker, one-time foil for Lou Holtz, comes into his own on a ticket signed yesterday by Columbia which gives him the comedy assignment in "Hell Cat," which Al Rogell directs under Sid Rogell's supervision. Walter Kane of the Weber office spotted the deal.

New York.—Mrs. Calvin Coolidge has accepted the honorary vice-presidency of the Motion Picture Research Council. The announcement was made yesterday by Mrs. August Belmont, president of the group.

U's 'Sutter's Gold' May See Stage Rival

New York.—An interesting situation looms as a result of an announcement from Melvyn Levy that his play, "Sutter's Gold," was set for Broadway production next Fall.

Universal has owned the rights to Cendrar's novel, "Sutter's Gold," since 1927, and for the past six months has had George O'Neill at work on a script, planning the picture for the Fall's big special. Opinion here is that Universal will have protection on the title, though the story is naturally open to all, being of a historical nature.

Levy has just sold another play to Anthony Brown, producer of "Tobacco Road."

'This Little Piggie' Brings Home the Bacon

The song, "This Little Piggie Went to Market," from Charles R. Rogers' "Eight Girls in a Boat," has just replaced "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes" as the number one tune over the air, according to word received yesterday by Bobby Crawford, of DeSylva, Brown and Henderson. Sam Coslow and Harold Lewis wrote the number.

Asst. Directors Boosted

The Academy yesterday announced that the assistant directors in that organization have been reclassified and boosted from the rating of "associate" members to full "active" membership. This move will give the assistant directors the right to vote along with actors, producers, writers, directors and technicians.

Schubert on 'Heide'

Sol Lesser has signed Bernard Schubert to script "Heidi," a classic by Johanna Spyri, when he finishes work on "Peck's Bad Boy." Latter picture will be delayed a month because Jackie Cooper will not be available from MGM. Hoffman-Schlager set the Schubert deal.

Chevalier in Suit Over 'Widow' Cut

M. C. Levee yesterday commissioned Ronald Button, attorney, to file suit against Maurice Chevalier for commissions on the star's contract with MGM for "Merry Widow."

Manager stated he had not closed the deal for the player, but had been authorized by him to obtain offers on deals, one of which had been for "Merry Widow," Chevalier turning it down only to close it himself at a later date. Chevalier is said to be getting $150,000 for the picture.

"In the event my claim is legally substantiated in the suit," said Levee, "proceeds will be turned over to the Motion Picture Relief Fund as a joint contribution from both Chevalier and myself after deducting costs."

Merkel-Pendleton in 'Manhattan Melodrama'

MGM yesterday assigned Una Merkel and Nat Pendleton to featured spots in "Manhattan Melodrama," which goes into work Monday with W. S. Van Dyke piloting.

Lucille Watson at MGM

MGM yesterday signed Lucille Watson, character actress, on a long term deal. Player is now appearing in "No More Ladies," a play by A. E. Thomas, running on Broadway.

Arliss English Pic For Next Spring

If, and when, George Arliss accepts a deal to do a picture in England, it cannot be done until the Spring of 1935, as per his agreement with Twentieth Century. The old ticket expiring on the completion of his present picture designates that he can do a single picture in England but not until after six months from the release date of "The Head of the Family" and inasmuch as that picture will not be offered for release before next December, his English production cannot go into work before a year from May 1.

It is understood that Arliss has been offered $75,000 for a series of ten broadcasts in New York and he countered with a proposition of $100,000 and for this purpose engaged Rufus LeMaire to get that additional 25 grand, and negotiate a British deal for a picture.

RKO in Build-Up For Fred Astaire

RKO is planning a big build-up for Fred Astaire, the musical comedy star and dancer who was the sensation of "Flying Down to Rio."

IATSE Declares War

violations and complaints, as well as all the other jurisdictional disputes that have had local labor men running round in circles ever since the strike of last summer.

It was learned he will present the fight between the IBEW and the Carpenter's Union for jurisdiction as opposed to the IATSE before the committee. He will also detail the complaints of Code violations laid before the Studio Labor Committee and on which it has refused to act.

As a second step in the campaign, it was also learned that the unions plan to give the Code authorities one more week in which to take some action on their complaints. Then, if nothing has been done, they will send one or more representatives to Washington to seek an audience direct with President Roosevelt and tell him their whole story.

Those close to the situation declared yesterday that a big labor battle between battling unions and producers is slated to take place in Washington. With Al Berres, chairman of the Studio Labor Committee, already en route to Washington, and Elliott starting on his way, it was learned las night that Pat Casey, producers' labor contact man, also plans to go there this week.

In preparation for the fight, it was learned that the IATSE group has already sounded out certain Congressmen, and that it already has sufficient backing lined up there to assure a real battle if it reaches that point.

The representatives who will go to see the President, it is said, will carry with them copies of every complaint that labor has filed with the Studio Labor Committee, and which has not been acted upon. Plan is to use these in a publicity campaign if they are refused an audience with the President.

Each day they plan to release to the press one violation until they get into the White House.

"We have great faith in President Roosevelt," said one union representative yesterday," and we feel that we will get some action if he is informed of what is going on. We feel that he does not know the situation, so we shall go direct to him."

When Elliott came to Los Angeles a week ago he came expecting to attend the meeting between unions and producers for discussion of the renewing of the Basic Agreement. After a few days here he found the conference had been shifted to New York for March 15. But it is believed that date will be postponed because some of those who will have to attend will still be in Hollywood.

While those opposed to the IATSE group are predicting that the IATSE is washed up as far as getting in on the Basic Agreement is concerned, officials of that group yesterday declared they are just starting to fight.

"There has been enough of subterfuge and applesauce passed around," said one of them. "We will get these troubles settled soon or know why."

So, they plan to carry the fight where they feel they will get definite and final action—to Washington, with the hope that President Roosevelt will be the arbiter.

Cameramen's union, and possibly the electricians' local, will not only file complaint with the Studio Labor Committee, but will file copies with the Regional Labor Board, NRA Compliance Board and with Judge Ben Lindsey, but a copy will be sent to Deputy Administrator Rosenblatt.

COURT SOCKS AUTHORS

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IN making the rounds yesterday we stumbled across some astounding information regarding Universal. Astounding because there has been an undercurrent of chatter during the past few months that this company was not in the best of condition, that it had to stop production for one reason and the other and it did stop for a while, giving plausibility to the talk.

But from what we heard yesterday, from a more than authoritative source, "U" is in better shape now than it has ever been since sound came in. It has been collecting an average of $425,000 a week for the past 16 weeks, it has paid off almost $2,000,000 in debts; it does not owe a quarter to the bank and has but eight pictures on the year's program to finish.

And that may be news to you. It was to us.

Uncle Carl's company has had more ups and downs in so far as the rumor market goes, than all the other companies put together. The foundation for that talk has always been as a result of the elder Laemmle fighting his own financial battles, holding on to his control of the stock and withstanding all shots turned in his direction in the hope that they could not shoot him away from control.

There is no question but what there have been days when things looked pretty black to everyone but the Laemmles, Senior and Junior, when prospective buyers felt they had them where they wanted them and could get the control they were after. But they were fooled as was everyone who listened to the talk.

Universal today owes less money than any company in the business and that takes in production organizations of all sizes and types that have been making pictures for any period of time. And given any kind of a shove with a hit picture or two, along with the steady progress program it has been churning out, you will be confronted with another major fighting off all competitors for top rating in quality product.

So use your sympathies for some other organization, Universal does not need them, although it has been accepting them with a rather guilty smile of thanks.

Cooper gave Berman 2½ per cent of his 15 and it is the remaining collections that have not been paid to date and those that will accrue that he company is now trying to buy from Berman.

It is understood that Berman has rejected the offer.

New York Body Rules Sale Of 'Dramatic Rights' Also Conveyed Talking Pic Title

New York.—A decision of great importance to authors and playwrights, and one which has many picture companies worrying about how many thousands of dollars they have thrown away since the advent of the talkies, was handed down yesterday by the New York Court of Appeals.

The high court upheld a decision by a lower court that the sale by a playwright or author of the "dramatic rights" to a book or play, even if the sale were made before the advent of George Raft and Paramount reached the deadlock stage yesterday on the problem of placing George in the next Mae West picture, and when the session was over George had won his point.

HERE'S ONE END OF THE BUSINESS TO MAKE MONEY

New York.—The money in the picture business must be spent in the laboratory and the raw stock end. Pathe Exchange just announced a net profit of $386,629 for 1933, compared with a net loss of $109,834 the previous year. The profits are largely accounted for through receipts of dividends on the forty nine per cent of Du Pont stock owned by Pathe.

The dividends from Du Pont amounted to $637,000, which gave an indication of what the Pathe statement would have been without the raw stock gravy.

THE LOW DOWN

It looks like Hollywood is going to lose Connie Talmadge for keeps. We hear that Connie and T. Netcher are planning to move to Chicago very soon, where most of T.'s family reside, and at the moment are planning to stay there permanently. The reason, we hear, is because Hollywood is so full of association with the memory of Peg Talmadge for whom Connie's devotion was only too well known.

At the private auction of the belongings of a local film couple recently a certain writer bought up their vast collection of foreign and American victrola records for two hundred dollars. The collection was worth over $1,000. No sooner had the writer purchased the discs than he proceeded to sell them, piece by piece, to his friends for thirty-five cents each. In no time at all he had his investment back, so all his music now is clear profit.

Do you suppose George Kaufman and Moss Hart are really writing that play down in Palm Springs all this time? Well, anyway—we just thought of the wire that Kaufman sent a certain hostess who was giving a party for him, viz:—

"Sorry Can't Attend Party in My Honor—It's the Baby's Night Out and I Have to Stay Home with the Nurse."

Just heard about how Leslie Howard begged to be allowed to remain in England over the Xmas holidays in order to spend them with his children there, when he was being paged for pictures over here. But no—he had to "leave immediately—they needed him so badly!" So he dashed over. So what happened? So he just sat around here for six weeks at several thousand dollars per week—doing nothing—before he actually went to work!

New York REVIEWS

"WONDER BAR"

Warner prod.; director, Lloyd Bacon; writers, Karl Farkas, Geza Herceg, Earl Baldwin; music and lyrics, Harry Warren, Al Dubin.

Times: "Wonder Bar" depends more upon melody and elaborate staging than it does on its story. Those who are partial to this type of entertainment will probably relish it, especially during those interludes where Mr. Jolson lifts his voice to vehement singing.

Herald-Tribune: The story is not of much more dramatic value than is usually the case in screen musical comedies, but at least it provides a certain morbid interest not ordinarily to be found in such works. "Wonder Bar" on the whole is pleasant musical entertainment.

Mirror: This excellent entertainment is a worthy successor to "42nd St." and "Gold Diggers," surpassing them in splendor, in imagination, and in its song numbers. The book is unusual, the cast is genuinely all-star. The songs are hits. The production numbers are dazzling and spectacular. "Wonder Bar," from beginning to end, is splendid entertainment. You mustn't miss it.

World-Telegram: Although the production is lavish in the manner of all Warner Brothers' musical extravaganzas, it seems to me to be rather tasteless. "Lukewarm" is the best this movie thermometer can register for "Wonder Bar."

Journal: "Wonder Bar," like those other Warner extravaganzas, features a couple of lavish dance numbers staged by Busby Berkeley.

Post: The plot is crowded wth events, and the majority of them are interesting. Mr. Berkeley succumbs to the Hollywood tradition, letting loose a depressing fantasy. This is very bad indeed. It comes as near as anything to spoiling an otherwise lively, tuneful and interesting picture.

Sun: The cast, of course, is a glittering one, handsome, beautifully costumed, well photographed, and with nothing at all to do. "Wonder Bar" is on a par with the rest of them, built with the same smooth, lavish formula.

American: From any angle it is popular entertainment. Our suggestion is that you step right up to this "Wonder Bar" and enjoy the entertainment cocktail the Warners offer.

News: Al Jolson's "Wonder Bar" is rich in entertaining elements. The fun and the wisecracks do not always come within the bounds of good taste, but for the most part the fooling is of a harmless variety that delights the audience.

THE NINTH GUEST

Columbia prod.; director, Roy Wm. Neill; writers, Owen Davis, Garnett Weston.

Roxy Theatre

World-Telegram: In spite of its grisly massacres, it is a shambling entertainment, slow in its movement, pedestrian in its speech and peopled with superficial and uninteresting characters.

American: A far better picture than it was a play, the latest murder mystery film to reach the Roxy screen affords a very fair amount of entertainment for devotees of the cinematic crime school. The finale of the film is as startling and as terrifying as its sinister introduction.

Mirror: One-half the characters are killed in this tricky mystery melodrama. The cast is an excellent one. The always interesting Genevieve Tobin plays the leading feminine role.

Herald-Tribune: Although the plot developments are not terribly ingenious, the evening in the penthouse is moderately enlivened by suspense. The acting is fair enough. Genevieve Tobin is helpful as usual as the heroine.

Times: Even though the pictorial version of Owen Davis' play "The Ninth Guest" is neatly staged, well photographed and contains an adequate amount of slaughter, it is all far too unconvincing to be even mildly spine-chilling.

News: The situations and the characters are mechanically devised, but the story unwinds on the screen a certain amount of suspense that has been created by the director, Roy Wm. Neill. It keeps the attention of the audience riveted on the screen.

Sun: Direction, treatment and acting are good routine stuff. Filmed with a little imagination, it might have been one of those popular shockers, which keeps audiences shrieking, shivering and generally enjoying themselves.

Post: Mystery thriller addicts ought to have a good time at "The Ninth Guest." There is enough blood and thunder in it to cover up the implausible premise, and it is a pleasure to see such unholy individuals get what is coming to them.

Journal: It's a neatly contrived little melodrama, that manages to sustain one's interest to the point of wanting to know how it was done—even if one guessed who it was that did it.

AGENTS' 18 LAWYERS TOO MUCH FOR LABOR BOARD

Committee of Three To Work Out Rules

Opening the hearing on the proposed rules and regulations controlling an agent's relations with an artist, Commissioners Barker and Lowy, of the Labor Board, yesterday ordered the election of a committee of three attorneys to represent the eighteen lawyers who crowded the hearing room. Action was compelled by the confusion of the unexpected number of legal lights handling agency interests.

Turnout of lawyers, each exhibiting a readiness to argue over rules which the commission is seeking to get in force over agents, made it next to impossible for the board to conduct the hearing systematically. To cope with the situation, Austin Sherman moved for the committee plan, which was immediately acted on by the labor officials. The eighteen attorneys cast ballots for representatives and selected Sherman, Ralph Blum and Martin Gang as the committee. Trio will gather the proposals and arguments of the remaining fifteen lawyers and present them in one batch at the hearing set for March 21.

Each attorney at yesterday's hearing was given a list of the regulations, the Commission planning to listen to arguments on each article as it came up. There were nine ruling articles proposed, a resume of which was recently published. The only change in the list affected the provision which had agency contracts with artists voided in the event the agency went out of business. The revised article reads: "Every contract shall contain a recital and agreement that the agency is and will continue to be a duly licensed agency during the whole period of contract." Effect of the rewritten codicil was said to be identical to the provision it replaced.

"The committee of attorneys," said Ralph Blum, representative committeeman, "will seek to accomplish the purpose of the entire group of lawyers by getting all their views together and presenting them to the Commission in the hope of obtaining the aims and purposes of every interest represented."

It is understood that Gary will insist that a clause be inserted in his new contract which will provide that all future publicity stories about him shall be submitted for his approval before being sent out.

The Paramount publicity department says that the story was read and okayed by either Cooper or his manager.

Court Socks Authors

"talkies," carries with it the right to make a talking picture.

The case revolved around "The Volga Boatman," which Conrad Bercovici sold to Cecil DeMille in 1924, and which was made into a silent film. The ruling now is that a talkie can be made without further payment to the author on the ground that the contract conveyed "dramatic and stock production rights" and this phase includes all the elements essential to the production of a talking picture.

The decision set picture company accountants and attorneys scurrying through their books to determine how many thousands of dollars they had thrown away since 1929. The practice has been to make a separate deal and payment to authors for talking picture rights, when the original contract of sale included the phase "all" rights, or "dramatic" rights. Picture companies have been proceeding on the old United States Supreme Court decision in the Kalem-Klaw and Erlanger case which was to the effect that an author could not convey something "which did not exist" at the time he made the sale. In that case motion picture rights themselves were involved, but attorneys felt there was a parallel with the advent of the talkies.

Indie Producers Stall Guild Pact

Independent producers, at their regular monthly meeting last night, tabled the invitation from John Natteford, of the free lance writers of the Screen Writers' Guild, to work out a basic contract. Natteford's letter, addressed to Sam Wolf, IMPPA attorney, and I. E. Chadwick, asked the indies to sit in on discussions to draw up a standard form of employment contract between producers and their writers.

The decision of the indies was to stall the issue until an undetermined future date. Producers figure it advisable to await the outcome of a number of Guild problems before committing themselves to the writers, it was said. "We don't know yet," one board member said, "what will happen between the Guild and the major producers. Therefore we can't decide on our position until that at least is settled."

'Tail Spin Tommy' Deal Completed at 'U'

John Darrow steps up from the juvenile class to a leading role, getting the bracket spot with Mary Brian in Monogram's "Numbers at Monte Carlo." William Nigh is directing. Ticket was handled by Jack Gardner.

'ROSY' APPROVES MOVE OF NRA EXTRA COMMITTEE

Notification to Arline Judge and Judith Wood yesterday by Twentieth Century that options on their term contracts were being passed up culminated a systematic plan on the part of the Zanuck company to give the contract members of the organization their release.

Twentieth Century for the past six months has had individual talks with term holders in which players were granted their freedom at the expiration of their terms in view of the company's plan for next year's program to produce a limited group of specials. Players got their freedom when it became apparent that it was more to their advantage to free lance than to be under contract to the company and going on loan to other companies while not working on Twentieth Century assignments. Agreements permit the players to earn the profit which the producer would have received if they continued under contract.

Among those also released on this understanding were Sally Blane, Morgan Conway and Russ Brown. Star deals are being held. These include Fredric March, Ronald Colman, George Arliss, Fay Wray, Loretta Young, Constance Bennett and Paul Kelly.

DICKSTEIN CARRIES ALIEN FIGHT TO PUBLIC VIA AIR

Bill Has Strong Chance of Passage

Washington.—Representative Dickstein, who is leading the fight in Congress to curb the importation of foreign actors, last night made a radio plea over a nationwide hookup for support of his alien actor bill.

Dickstein declared that opposition by the motion picture industry to his bill was unpatriotic and was actuated by selfish motives.

Among those close to the situation, it seems the bill has an excellent chance of passing both Houses. If it does, it is a certainty it will be signed by the President. If the bill is passed it will have a tendency to keep movie players' salaries up, for it will stop producers from importing movie talent at a figure lower than Americans will work for.

Vidor Signs Richards

King Vidor yesterday signed Addison Richards for a spot in "Our Daily Bread," which goes into production March 19 at the General Service Studio. Karen Morley, borrowed from MGM, is the only other player set to date. Kingston-Harris agency negotiated for Richards.

Ethelreade Leopold, spotted in Chicago by the Warner office there, has been signed to a long term contract. She will arrive here Saturday and will probably go into the Buzz Berkeley numbers in "Dames" as her first assignment.

Lloyd Pic Held Up

Because Sam Taylor was sick at home with a bad cold, production on Harold Lloyd's "The Cat's Paw" was suspended yesterday. Shooting will resume as soon as Taylor returns.

Barrows at Para.

B. P. Schulberg has set Nick Barrows to direct comedy for "Little Miss Marker," which Al Hall is directing for Paramount.

Philip Reed to 'U'

Phillip Reed has been borrowed by Universal from Warners for a featured role in the Paul Lukas picture "Affairs of a Gentleman."

Ric Cortez Guard Of Oakie Quarters

Jack Oakie, Paramount's pet cut-up, has a new gag. He lugs around one of those cut-outs of Ricardo Cortez, an exploitation idea for "Wonder Bar," setting it up wherever he may be. If the figure is outside Oakie's dressing room Jack is out. When Ric is not on guard, Jack is in.

Term for Humberstone

On the strength of his work on "Merry Wives of Reno," Warners yesterday signed Lucky Humberstone to a long term director's ticket. The contract takes effect immediately although the studio has no immediate assignment for him. The deal was made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

Erpi Official East

Two for 'Biography'

'H. B.' Buys '14th Street'

New York.—H. B. Franklin moves further along in his production plans with the purchase of rights to the title "Fourteenth Street" based on the Simon & Shuster book by Percy Shostac. Title will be used in connection with an original story.

Committee of 12 to Settle Code Hours

Washington.—The fate of the wage and hour provision of the motion picture industry code rests in the hands of a committee of twelve people who represent the consumer goods industries, of which amusements are considered a part.

This committee, headed by George A. Sloan of New York, is slated for a series of conferences with General Johnson. Sloan is also chairman of the Textile Code and head of the Cotton Textile Institute.

Pickford Says Industry Barred to Newcomers

New York.—"What this industry needs is a return to the individualistic pioneer spirit of its earlier days," said Mary Pickford in an address to the Ampas yesterday. She made a hit with the statement that the industry is now in the hands of a few with no opportunity being given newer and younger elements.

Dixon Morgan Set

Universal yesterday signed Dixon Morgan to act as dialogue director on "The Practical Joker," which Stanley Bergerman produces and Edward Laemmle directs when it starts next week.

'Rothschild' Road Show Bow in Boston

New York.—Road engagements for the Twentieth Century Special "The House of Rothschild" outside New York will start in Boston on March 31st at the Majestic Theater. The decision to make a $2 two-a-day show out of the production has picture people hopped up and hoping the good old days are back again.

Al Selig left New York last night to pave the publicity road for the Boston engagement.

'Little Man, What Now?' Goes Into Work Today

Signing Fred Kohler, Bodil Rosing and Paul Fix through the Kingston-Harris agency yesterday, Frank Borzage puts "Little Man, What Now?" before the cameras today at Universal.

He will shoot this second Margaret Sullavan vehicle from an incomplete script. William Anthony McGuire hopes to turn in the completed screen play sometime next week, in time to prevent any delay on the shooting.

Arhur Hopkins Tries To Get Lee Tracy East

Arthur Hopkins wired the Selznick-Joyce office today asking for Lee Tracy to make a picture to be produced and directed by him.

Tracy is interested in the offer and it is understood that negotiations are now under way.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

In yesterday's issue of the "Hollywood Reporter," an advertisement appeared, which stated that I directed the dialogue on the following pictures:

"THE BITTER TEA OF GENERAL YEN"
"LADY FOR A DAY"
"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT"

I wish to state that I DID NOT direct the dialogue on the above mentioned pictures.

I assisted Mr. Capra only by seeing that the cast knew their lines.

GENE LEWIS

OPEN FORUM

March 7, 1934

The Reporter:

I have noted, with satisfaction, your personal interest in the many problems of the motion picture industry. I want to bring to your attention some facts regarding a situation which now exists and which I think you can cause to be remedied.

At the time of the sound men's strike last year, I went to work, along with forty or fifty other men, at MGM. I was employed as a recorder. We were all employed at a salary of $50 per week. It was a good job and jobs of any kind were hard to find. I have a wife and four children to support and I was glad to get the work. Sometimes our hours were long, but when they were we were told to take the next day off Everyone was apparently happy and we could not understand why anyone would walk out of a job like that.

Then came some distant rumors of the NRA. We heard that salaries were to be increased and hours to be cut and more men employed. It was all a rumor, however, as we were told that the sound department would never go on the code. Then out of a clear sky we were informed that we were going on an hourly basis, of 75c per hour and time and a half for overtime. We were subject to call. We asked if this was the new code and were told it was NOT. Now, as you can see, our earnings had been cut. We worked when we were called and there was no allowance for sickness, etc. I know of some cases where sound men did not make more than $10 per week for several weeks. I know of one man whose family had toasted dry bread for Thanksgiving dinner. He had a wife and five children. Those of the boys who had a drag with the right man were making from $18 to $40 a week. Please bear in mind that we were employed at $50 per week.

Now here is the best yet! A week ago Monday we went on the code! Our salaries were increased and the NRA had saved the day! Oh, yeah!

We now get 83½c per hour, but the most we can work is six hours per day. If we work every day we can make $30 per week. I understand that three new men were hired as a result of this arrangement and they were laid off the next day.

What's the answer? Well, all I know is how it concerns me. I have received a $90 a month cut in wages. My cost of living is more than it was a year ago, but I am making $90 per month less. I am told that I CANNOT work more than six hours per day, so I can't get any overtime. When I was getting 75c per hour and was allowed to work eight to fourteen hours I had a chance to break even and give my family a little happiness. The studio says it has complied with the code. I seriously doubt it! I don't believe the code or the "recovery act" was intended to work this way. "Raise prices and lower wages" is not a prosperity slogan.

What can be done about it? I can quit, of course. I am in no position to be out of work and I don't believe there is any great possibility of finding another job. I can't squawk too much or I will be fired and we are all in the same fix. We know we are getting a rotten deal, but we don't know what to do about it, and I doubt if anyone of us has guts enough left to do it even if we were told how.

Sincerely yours,
SIGNATURE WITHHELD.

Reviewing the FAN MAGS

MOTION PICTURE
98 pages and cover
COVER DISPLAY.....Myrna Loy (MGM)

Gladys Hall, with her two swell stories in the March Motion Picture, makes it almost imperative to read the magazine.

"Exclusive! Mary Pickford's Own Story!" is the best-written and most sincere yarn on her separation that has yet appeared. It is kindly and fair and intelligent. Miss Hall's other story is one of her "Secrets of the Stars" series, and this time she tells one on Constance Bennett.

Jack Grant also has two stories, "How Hollywood Likes Its Legal Liquor" and "Give Yourself a Movie Talent Test."

Sonia Lee, with the aid of someone who prefers to remain anonymous, gives "Doug's Side of the Story," a companion yarn to Miss Hall's Pickford story; Constance Champion has "Katharine Hepburn, Mae West—and Sex Appeal"; Winifred Aydelotte tells about Lois Weber in "The Little Red Schoolhouse Becomes a Theatre," and James M. Fidler wonders naively "Are They Making a Goddess Out of Garbo?"

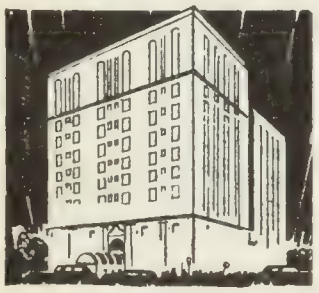
Dorothy Manners has an unusual story on Bing Crosby, "Almost Divorced After Three Weeks of Marriage"; Faith Service recounts some amusing items in "You Don't Know Your Stars Until You Know Their Habits"; Alice White tells Sonia Lee "How to Get—and Hold—Your Boy Friend," and J. M. Ruddy has the first story on Florence Desmond in "She Can Show You How to Imitate Stars."

SCREEN PLAY
74 pages and cover
COVER DISPLAY....Margaret Sullavan (Universal)

There are three very good stories in the March Screen Play, with Sidney Skolsky's "Tintype of Ruby Keeler" heading.

The other stories that are unusually good are "The Human Side of Hollywood's Wildcat—Lupe Velez," by Jack Jamison, and "My Life Has Been Full of Confusion" (Jean Parker), by Dorothy Spensley.

An interesting and much needed story is contributed by Ruth Biery, who writes an answer to Baldwin Wallace, who gave the fan magazines a rousing pan in the December issue of Plain Talk. Miss Biery's story is called "The Movie Magazine Racket."



Grace Simpson makes the most of "When Barthelmess Flew With Death"; Sonia Lee has a new angle in "Ralph Morgan Explains Why Actors Make the Best Husbands"; Eric L. Ergenbright has "Hollywood Takes Inventory"; Donald P. Sheldon quotes several stars in "No Trial Honeymoons! Hollywood Doesn't Like Fifi Dorsay's Daring Idea"; Grace Simpson records "Mae West's Ten Beauty Commandments"; Gladys McVeigh tells about "The Romance Hollywood Couldn't Stop" (Alice White and Cy Bartlett); Clark Warren tells what Sammy Hahn has to say on the subject "Are Hollywood Divorces Legal?" Marcella Burke has the same old story on Margaret Sullavan in "She Lives Life HER Way," but the same cannot be said of Harry N. Blair's Katharine Hepburn story, "It Pays to Be Independent." Richard English struggles with no material in "Rudy's New Love."

PICTURE PLAY

COVER DISPLAY .....Mae West

Picture Play comes out cheerily and brightly for April. Regina Cannon's amusing and clever query, "Who Wants New Faces?" William H. McKegg's story on Dorothea Wieck, "Calmly Conquering"; Dena Reed's yarn about Sterling Holloway, "Funny Face From Georgia," and Samuel Richard Mook's story, which is as bitter as it's title, "Fame's Bitterest Cup," are all well worth the reading.

"Hepburn's Mystery Man" is by Hester Robinson and isn't exactly new stuff; "Tragedy Is His Teacher," by Dickson Morley is about Ricardo Cortez; "Baby Face" is a story on Lew Ayres by Romney Scott; Malcolm H. Oettinger waxes enthusiastic over Miriam Hopkins in "Cream of the Group"; Dena Reed tells about Randolph Scott's new modus vivendi in "Gentleman—on Holidays"; Ben Maddox does very well with no material in "Heather's an Angel," and Drummond Tell interviews Claire Trevor in "Three-Alarm Blonde."

Radio Trying Out Improved Camera

A new type of sound camera has been developed by William Eglinton and Harry Cunningham at Radio's engineering staff. It will get its try-out on "Of Human Bondage," under Henry Gerrard's hand. Company estimates a saving on the one picture of four days work and $10,000 in budget shaving, owing to the advanced features on the instrument.

Camera weighs 115 pounds as against 180 on other machines, is half the customary size and is exterior controlled, eliminating pulling down the blimp for lens changes. It is proofed against light reflections.

Peeking Around Paris

Owen Moore thinks the city looks a bit empty, what with no taxicabs. . . . But to the rest of us—well, it's no fun in Paris these days. . . . Even the balcony on the Crillon feels like the trenches on the Marne in those rough days in '15. . . . Film colony is wise and stays away from trouble. . . . Thus, no casualties among them. . . . But, oh, the headaches for the theatre owners. . . . Big white elephants waiting for customers to get out so they can close up. . . . Even postponed openings. . . . Blase tourists sore 'cause no place to go. . . . That's true. Even subways not safe.

Allan Byre served whale pate, snow chicken and salted tongues of caribou to press after premiere of "Eskimo." . . . Senorita Julia Reyes gets a big hand at Chez Florence at her Paris debut. She's more Spanish than beauty, but that's not her fault. . . . Anna May Wong looks like a million walking down Rue de la Paix shopping—perfume—and you should hear her speak "Hollywood." Says she to a reporter: "I like Hollywood, but as a foreigner one feels better in Europe." She should be forgiven. . . . Curt Melnitz smiling from ear to ear on return from Brussels, where "Catherine" was a wow.

BRITISH PLAN INTENSIVE DRIVE FOR COLONY COIN

Definite Program Set to Grab Market

London.—British motion picture producers are laying plans for one of the biggest drives for business during the coming year that has ever been made in this infant British industry.

Eyes of the British producers are on the British Colonies, where they figure they have been missing a lot of money that has found its way to other countries, namely America. So an unusual attempt will be made to secure a bigger share of this business.

Colonies involved in the program include all the British West Indies, Indian Islands, British Guiana, British Honduras, Nigeria, Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, Kenya, Nyassaland, Rhodesia, Zanzibar and Mauritius.

Much of this territory has not been wired for sound, and present plans are for intensive drive to get installation in as much of this as possible. Some idea of people to be reached is shown from the fact that 20,000,000 people live in Nigeria alone.

British producers plan to spend approximately $20,000,000 in production here this year in talking pictures and feel that this program will give them sufficient pictures to fill all needs of the colonies. Two hundred pictures already planned.

Lou Guimond Pub. Head For British Gaumont

New York.—British Gaumont has made a change in its American publicity department as a result of the resignation of Charles Hynes.

Lou Guimond, veteran who dates back to the old Selznick days, is now in the Gaumont spot.

Garbo Life for Film

Stockholm.—Einar Asplund, Swedish photographer, is at work on a picture built around the life and career of Greta Garbo. It will be released in America under the title, "The Making of Greta Garbo."

French Make Shakespeare

Paris.—Local company plans to produce "The Merchant of Venice" as a screen feature. Work to start shortly.

Nazi Rebuff

Paris.—When signing her contract to play in "Catherine the Great," Elizabeth Bergner okayed the dubbing of the film into any language but German.

"If they want to hear me play," she said, "they will have to be satisfied with English."

London Film Goes To Africa on Pic

London.—London Film Productions are taking a leaf out of American producer ideas. They plan to send a company into Uganda and the Congo to make "Sanders of the River," from the Edgar Wallace story of the same name.

Director Zoltan Korda and G. E. T. Grossmith, production manager, have just returned after an 11,000 mile jaunt through that territory, picking locations and arranging for the company which will go down shortly.

Chinese Fans Losing Interest in Talkies

Shanghai.—Chinese picture fans seem to be losing their interest in talking pictures. The novelty has worn off and the public is showing a definite preference for Chinese silent or sound films.

American pictures enjoy more than 80 per cent of the Chinese trade. There is but little competition from French or German sources. More and better British pictures, however, are appearing and are obtaining a larger share of the business than heretofore. Talking pictures in the English language have to depend almost entirely on receipts in Shanghai and Hongkong for their profits.

17 Weeks for 'Henry'

Brussels.—The British film, "Henry the Eighth," has started its seventeenth week here at the Studio des Beaux-Arts. Still packing them in.

German Trade in Film Falling Off

Berlin.—The foreign trade in motion picture film in Germany has shown a decided decrease, especially with regard to imports. The statistics for 1933 show a heavy decline in imports and exports of raw stock and positive, while the foreign trade in negatives showed an advance.

Total imports of raw stock in 1933 amounted to 5,647,400 meters, compared with 9,243,000 meters in 1932. The outstanding feature in the 1933 import trade was the heavy decline in shipments from the United States and France.

German exports of raw stock in 1933 amounted to 33,170,300 meters, against 39,715,700 meters in 1932.

Total imports of developed negatives in 1933 amounted to 1,378,700 meters, a volume increase of 10 per cent compared with 1932. Exports totaled 935,700 meters, an advance of 12.5 in volume over the preceding year. The improvement in imports resulted from increased receipts from the United States, Spain and Great Britain.

Gracie Fields Rest

London.—Gracie Fields has finished work in the Basil Dean picture, "Life, Love, Laughter," and has left for a vacation at her villa at Capri. She will be back in two months to do another for Dean.

Bergner Europe's Star

Brussels.—Local advertising posters for "Catherine the Great" carry only Elizabeth Bergner as the star, with Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., far outshadowed.

WRITER SPLIT DEFINITE

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•IN a conversation recently with one of the ablest and most intelligent producers in Hollywood, the subject of "better pictures," a subject to which this publication has devoted much space, came up. He not only agreed that pictures should be much better, from a box-office standpoint, but he had very definite ideas on how this end could be attained.

"The spine of a motion picture is action," he said. "Nothing can take its place. There has been too much so-called art in pictures. If an art finish can be put on an action picture, that's great. Sort of shellacked hokum, as it were. But without action, a motion picture is simply an inert body in which the interest is sustained artificially.

"In my opinion it is a great mistake to transfer to the screen the 'mental' plays from the New York stage. Those precious elements in which the critics rejoice are not for the great mass of the public. Producers have gone to these more or less highbrow pictures as a sort of window dressing. They have become too susceptible to criticism.

"The public, I believe, wants more fun, broader entertainment values, not merely ideas spread on the screen. The 'smart picture made for smart people' has had its day, and it is time to cater to the tastes of the great audiences which go to motion picture theatres because they supply the most satisfactory and cheapest entertainment.

"I am not arguing for cheap pictures, even if they have action. I think that what is usually called the 'program picture,' the type that has been made simply to have something to feed to the theatres, must go into the discard also. There is no use making a picture which, by the very characterization given it, announces that it has no great entertainment value. The exhibitors don't want it and the public won't take it.

"More than that, good acting will not save a picture unless the story gives sufficient reason for such acting. The public is not interested in acting as such. I believe the great majority of picture-goers are personality-conscious, not performance-conscious. I have known many instances in which make-up has led an audi-

New York REVIEWS

"THE ORIENT EXPRESS"
Fox prod.; director, Paul Martin; writers, Graham Greene, Carl Hovey, Paul Martin, Oscar Levant.
Mayfair Theatre

Times: This is the first American work of the Continental director, Paul Martin, who achieves, in certain individual scenes, a fine liquid movement and suspense. But the script is an ineffective patchwork.

Herald-Tribune: Due either to bad cutting or an assumption on the part of the producers of clairvoyance it remains a veiled mystery. The story is a tangle of loose ends and rough edges which grows increasingly obscure as the tale unwinds.

Mirror: Though impossible, it is all very lively, and the continental director, Mr. Martin, has given his setting a high color.

American: It's pretty mediocre material, and players who have demonstrated their abilities in other vehicles struggle valiantly to lift the piece by its boot-straps without much success.

World-Telegram: Mediocre entertainment, lazily put together and amateurishly acted and directed.

Journal: The picture emerges as an episodic narrative in which each character is presented in turn. Each says his or her piece and the camera then moves over to the next group. It's mild program fare.

Sun: "Orient Express" starts off smartly. It keeps up that pace for quite a while, winding up its melodramatic springs with cheerful briskness.

News: "Orient Express" attempts to be unconventional in atmosphere. The earlier sequences are pieced together in a crude way, and the latter ones are unbelievable.

"ROAD TO RUIN"
True Life Photoplay; directors, Mrs. Wallace Reid, Melville Shyer; writer, Mrs. Wallace Reid.
Cameo Theatre

Post: It is slightly more sordid, more trite, and surely even duller than the usual run of films of that nature. Mrs. Wallace Reid, widow of the former screen idol, has directed the picture and it is to be hoped that her next efforts will be centered on a more worthy subject.

Sun: "The Road to Ruin" is about as unnecessarily sordid a tale as the movies have ever taken the trouble to film. The acting is about equal to theme and treatment.

Herald-Tribune: It would be a little clearer had the story been more connected and a trifle more convincing had the plot been less highly colored. None of the people seemed to act like the characters they were intended to represent. The interiors are pretty dreary, but some of the outdoor shots are pleasing.

Times: The deficiencies of "Road to Ruin" lie not so much in its amateurish composition as in its dull and unnecessary preoccupation with subject-matter which belongs in a sociological case history.

American: "The Road To Ruin" is scarcely art, but there is some suspicion that it is good commercial property for the side streets. It is difficult to tell just what the film was before censorial shears started snipping, but as it stands it looks like a quickie depending on title and implication for allure.

Two for Armetta

Henry Armetta has been assigned comedy roles in two pictures at Universal. He will double up in "The Black Cat" and "Practical Joker."

Bennett at Mayfair

Spencer Bennett has been signed to direct the next Mayfair production, which goes into work the end of next week.

ence to believe that it was witnessing some great acting. I am convinced that, if the story isn't there, no amount of fine acting will make the picture a hit, no matter what the critics may say."

And there is food for thought in those remarks.

L'Estrange North For Creel Talks

Richard l'Estrange, labor representative on the Studio Labor Committee, left last night for San Francisco to confer with George Creel, State NRA Administrator, on the motion picture labor grievances that have been piling up since the film code went into effect.

"I want to get Mr. Creel away from the Hollywood influence and give him a real report on what ISN'T being done here to enforce the film code," said l'Estrange. "Our Labor Committee has failed to function on all these complaints and I think Mr. Creel should be informed of all the difficulties and squawks."

Chas. Grayson to 'U'

Charles Grayson was all set to make his trip around the world, but postponed it temporarily to go to Universal on a one-picture deal. He will write an original story.

Para. Crowd Gives Dick Arlen Send-off

Richard Arlen got a surprise party at luncheon yesterday at Paramount when the studio's entire executive, writer and director staffs let him know how popular he is with them. Speakers were Emanuel Cohen, who pointed out that Arlen had never given the company any trouble, and Jack Oakie.

Arlen himself turned the affair into a testimonial for Charles Barton, Paramount assistant director, who gave the player his first break. The occasion celebrated also Arlen's eleventh year with Paramount and his departure for Europe. He was presented with four traveling bags, two of which were for his wife, Jobyna Ralston.

Sylvia Sidney Fails to Make 'Black Eye Club'

Writer Split Definite

The slate announced by the "Liberals" has an interesting angle with the inclusion of the name of Ralph Block, at present acting president of the Guild and always identified as a stalwart of the old Administration.

An unofficial explanation given for this inclusion is that the "Liberals" are anxious to show willingness to include all factions and points of view in the group they aim to have guiding the destinies of the Guild.

The slate announced yesterday by the "Liberals" is as follows:

Frances Marion, John Lee Mahin, Zelda Sears, P. J. Wolfson, John Emerson, Bert Kalmar, Ernest Pascal, Arthur Richman, Jack Natteford, Tristram Tupper, Arthur Ripley, Brian Marlow, Waldemar Young, James K. McGuinness and Ralph Block.

Pre-election gossip, based upon the presence of the names of Jack Natteford and Tristram Tupper in the above list, has it that the free lance writers, who total close to a hundred votes out of a voting total of about three hundred and seventy, have the balance of power and will easily swing the election towards the new ticket.

The members of this group are interesting in that they include Emerson, a former president of Equity; Richman, former head of the Dramatists, novelists and a song writer, in addition to the screen writers.

Those on the executive committee sponsoring the new ticket are: Robert Riskin, Harvey Thew, Jules Furthman, Allen Rivkin, Carey Wilson, Howard J. Green, P. J. Wolfson, Howard Emmett Rogers, Richard Schayer, Anita Loos, James K. McGuinness and Jack Cunningham.

25% OF HOLLYWOOD PRODUCT VILE, SAYS BISHOP CANTWELL

'Writers and Execs Must Take Blame'

"Twenty-five per cent of all pictures made in Hollywood in the course of a year are definitely bad and offensive," declares Bishop John J. Cantwell, of Los Angeles, in an article on "Priests and the Motion Picture Industry" in the February issue of the Ecclesiastical Review, a monthly publication for the clergy of the Roman Catholic Church.

This article is one of the strongest arguments yet advanced in the battle of this Church for cleaner pictures, for Bishop Cantwell minces no words. He calls a spade a spade, and he lays the responsibility for these offensive films directly at the doors of the managing executives of the studios and the writers of the stories.

"Some of these pictures," he writes, "suggest that the motion picture industry has set itself to the task of seeing which company can produce the most vicious films. The subject matter of most of these offensive films deals with sex relations of every conceivable kind. When the pictures are not vile in toto, the films are crowded with salacious details, smutty talk, obscene wit, offensive situations. If one were to glean one's knowledge of family life in America from the American screen presentations, one would, unerringly, come to believe that adultery is but a slight adventure in romance that any understanding wife should easily forgive."

Bishop Cantwell outlines the themes of ten pictures, "selected at random from recent releases," as follows:

1—"Based upon seduction, rape and prostitution."

2—"A foreign—South Sea isle—locale and offended by a plot embracing aphrodisiac drugs, rape and revenge."

3—"Also with a foreign locale, based upon native toxicology and nudity."

4—"The story of a nudist colony which, so far, a number of the political censor boards have refused to license for public exhibition."

5—"A vile and revolting story of a mother who became a prostitute to provide luxury and education for her son."

6—"Deals with an alleged cultured social worker who makes it a practice to bear children to men she never sees afterwards."

7—"A new study of the unhappy small-town girl made happy by the gay adventurer from the city—she giving him her body 'on call.'"

8—"Concerned with the lechery of a fanatic monk and his two attempts at rape."

9—"A rowdy farce with Boccaccian dialog."

10—"Adultery justified, or at least conveniently forgotten, in a discussion which sought to show that a man's mistress can be his wife more truly 'in the sight of God' than the woman he married."

He cites, as a further example, an erotic dance in a picture based upon the early days of Christianity, "which gave great offense to patrons in all parts of the world."

Bishop Cantwell, while not placing the responsibility for these offensive pictures directly upon the Jewish influence in the picture industry, makes the point that Jewish executives are the responsible men in ninety per cent of the Hollywood studios and have the final word on all scenarios.

"Certain it is," he says, "if these Jewish executives had any desire to keep the screen free from offensiveness, they could do so."

Continuing on the point of responsibility, he writes:

"Along with the director of the picture, the writer is the person who creates all the filth of the picture and it is the writer who is most responsible, next to the managing executives of the studios."

He speaks of the rush of stage writers to Hollywood when the talkies came in and continues:

"Along with these went the authors of current 'literary' successes, the writers of the pornographic school whose books have had a great sale in recent years. Seventy-five per cent of these authors are pagans. They are men and women who care nothing for decency, good taste or refinement. Most of them are living lives of infidelity or worse, wherein there is to be found not a suggestion of respect for religion or for spiritual values.

"Our writers for the screen spend much of their talents in glorifying the female libertine and the public prostitute. As panderers of this sort our motion picture producers have welcomed them and shifted the blame to the public, with the excuse that the public wants that sort of story and will have no other."

To offset this charge against the public Bishop Cantwell cites the cartoon, "Three Little Pigs"; the musical play, "Be Mine Tonight," and "Cavalcade" as examples of clean pictures which were enormously successful. He also mentions a group of "26 oversexed pictures," only two of which were "outstanding financial successes" and nine were "fair."

Bishop Cantwell reviews briefly the more or less abortive attempts of the Hays office to handle the moral issue in pictures and says that "a new and complete overhauling is now imperative if the motion picture industry is to survive unhampered by additional State censorship bodies or a Federal censorship law." He concludes:

"Certain it is that some action of heroic proportions must be taken if we are to save the youth of America from a pollution and debauchery the like of which America has never known before. In vain do we struggle to rear great educational institutions, if the invidious character of the cinema is permitted to prostitute the character of our adolescent youth.

"So great is the power of the motion picture to impress the youth of the land that one hour spent in the darkness of a cinema palace, intent on the unfolding of the wrong kind of story, can and frequently does nullify years of careful training on the part of the Church, the school, the home. So great is the problem suggested by the wrong kind of talking picture, that drastic efforts must be launched at once if we are to stave off national disaster."

The current issue of The Tidings, official Catholic weekly for the Southern California diocese, contains a significant editorial comment in touching on the news of Omaha's Catholic bishop who forbade his faithful to attend the performance of Sally Rand at the Paramount Theatre there under pain of sin.

The Tidings says: "Perhaps this may be the means necessary to cope with objectionable pictures—the specific mention and banning of specific pictures."

'TOO MUCH PARTY' ALSO PROVES TOO MUCH JUNK

Pic Possibilities Lost With All Else

"TOO MUCH PARTY"

The Metropolitan Players present "Too Much Party," by Hiram Sherman; staged by William B. Friedlander; settings by Amend, at the Masque Theatre. With Warda Howard, Philip Truex, Janet McLeay, Maude Richmond, Reed McClelland, Mady Correll, Claire Grenville, Pierre Watkin, Viola Swayne, George Alison.

New York.—If punning is the lowest form of wit, remember that sometimes the provocation may be so great as not only to condone it but actually to demand it—as in the case of this incredible play about an incredible creature called Lettice Dean. Lettice go further and wish that there might be even a lower form to dispose of such mistakes as "Too Much Party."

Well, anyhow, this mistake concerns itself with the fantastic doings of a midwestern matron who is bound and determined to become a probation officer in her home town. She is the sort of nitwit who just dotes on moral delinquency, and thinks she knows all about it. But it turns out that she doesn't, for she has a son, Kenneth, who goes in for forgery, and a daughter, Judy, who has been addicted to too many parties—and we mean parties. Add an obnoxious female politician who eggs Lettice on, a nice husband who hates said politician, an undefiled freshman, whom Judy takes advantage of, and a perfectly respectable bootlegger daughter for Kenneth—and you can imagine the complications for yourself. No, you can't. Because in order to be able to do that it is necessary also to acquaint you with Agnes. Agnes is a "case," whom Lettice takes out of a "home" and brings right into her own household as a servant. Agnes has had three children by three different fathers, and is definitely a moral imbecile. Hilarious, isn't it? Well, if this doesn't break you down completely, we'll throw in the epileptic fit which Agnes throws at the end of the second act—how you like dese? Incidentally, Viola Swayne, as Agnes, gave a clinically correct performance —which only made the whole thing worse.

We thought we could get away without mentioning Agnes; but, after all, if we are to give you a complete idea of the magnificent picture possibilities of "Too Much Party," Agnes has got to be included.

The cast owes a vote of something or other to William B. Friedlander's direction.

"New Faces," the Dillingham-Elsie Janis revue, opens Thursday at the Fulton, "The Perfumed Lady" goes into the Ambassador on Monday, "Wrong Number" at Provincetown Playhouse Monday, and "The Pure at Heart" at the Longacre on Friday.

The Latin Touch

The Chamber of Commerce is staging a move to have the telephone company change a lot of the phone prefixes arguing, "they are not in keeping with the locality, many of them are too cold, they should have a Spanish idea in their treatment."

Ham Beall suggested that they change the GRanite exchange to GRAUMAN and the Chamber wrote back, "We don't feel that the name Grauman is sufficiently Spanish."

Academy Banquet Won't Be Broadcast

The Academy steering committee met yesterday and turned down requests from the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting Company to put the Annual Awards banquet on a nation-wide hookup on the night of March 16.

Even though it would cost the Academy nothing, the committee felt that such a broadcast would be dull to listeners unless a special air program were prepared. This the committee does not want to do, as it feels the affair is one staged within the industry, and that it should be confined solely to honoring those who will be present to accept awards.

Ticket sale has taken a big bound in the past twenty-four hours, officials announced, and yesterday afternoon a total of 250 tickets had already been sold.

Actors' Equity Sees Revival of Stock

New York.—Actors' Equity officials yesterday predicted that there will be a big increase in the number of stock companies operating throughout the country next year. This past year saw only nineteen stock companies running in the entire United States.

The reason for the increase in the immediate future, they explain, is because the present crop of Broadway shows are better suited for stock companies than those for some time. It was also pointed out that the legitimate theatre code restricting the sale of film rights before stock and the road have seen the play will help stock.

"Louie" Mayer conducting the regular Thursday production meeting in his office. All the producers (with the exception of Thalberg, who was at the Academy meeting), sitting in and Nicholas Schenck looking on.

Although Wanger walked out on the present Marion Davies production, he is still the producer contact for her interests on that lot and will do her next picture. And Walter gloating over the defeat of the Warner Bros. team at polo by the team on which he plays.

David Selznick staging three different previews on "Viva Villa" next week, not one of which will be for the press. He wants to see just what the picture looks like before an audience with the new material plus a cut version of the picture he had shown before. The picture has all the earmarks of a hit.

There is not an individual in Hollywood more interested in the success of the Academy than Irving Thalberg. When it began to curve and sink in the middle about a year ago, he was not in town to fight for the organization, but he is doing everything possible now to put it back on its feet, believing that its functions are the best fitted for the harmony of this industry.

Frank Whitbeck trying to reason with the Fox West Coast crowd to spend $3,000 on the exploitation of "Rip Tide." . . . Paul Snell likes his job. . . . That blonde "sec" in the Thalberg mansion reminds us of an ad for a sweet scented toilet soap. . . . Sam Marx looks as big as Carnera.

Expert Sound Men Form New Society

The new Society of Sound Engineers, which is now being formed by some of the sound men in the picture industry, will be an exclusive organization, according to present indications.

According to those active in the forming of the organization, there are not more than 125 men in the industry who will be qualified for membership, due to the high technical requirements. A total of 107 of these sound engineers and mixers are already in the group, which has Roger Marchetti as counsel.

The group at first thought of attempting some sort of affiliation with the ASC, it is said, but later decided to form their own organization. C. S. Pratt is temporary chairman and J. Aiken is temporary secretary. The plan is to have no affiliation with the unions.

The BOOKWORLD

Gertrude Stein Receives Reviewer's Notes This Wk

No book page today would be complete without mention of Gertrude Stein's opera, "Four Saints in Three Acts," which is published by Random House, and which is puzzling the New Yorkers who, besides being able to read it, can also see it performed on the stage. Miss Stein, of course, is the lady who writes in the following manner and vein: "The cat walking cat through the cat walking slinking through the kitchen through the cat slinking kitchen door" and gets away with it. At least, she gets away with it to the extent of setting people to talking about her.

The opera is, according to various people, "a gorgeous piece of kidding" . . . "an amazing experiment" . . . and "So what?"

The most intelligible part of the book is the preface by Carl van Vechten and even that fails to interpret what obviously Miss Stein doesn't want interpreted—or knows can't be interpreted.

Incidentally, Miss Stein reviewed Robert Coate's "Yesterday's Burdens" in the March Scribner's. And here's what she says about it: "And so Robert Coates has written a book which is a modern book and which is his book. And I say very definitely he is the first young American who has done so. The very first. May there be many more. And what he has done is exciting not because it is modern, but just because it is exciting, and it is so exciting because it is modern."

And so we submit the following reviews which are reviews because they are following:

"The Gunga Sahib"

Author .....Talbot Mundy
Publisher.....Appleton-Century Co.

More adventures of the Babu Chullunder Ghose. This time he helps a Maharajah's daughter to secure the throne for herself.

He is aided by a grave-digger from Philadelphia, who contributes bits of wisdom, during tiger hunts and elephant tamings, garnered from five-cent books of philosophy.

"We Ride the Gale!"

Author .....Emilie Loring
Publisher.....The Penn Pub. Co.

Concerning the Farrs brothers—Guy, the playboy, who was endlessly getting into scrapes, and Michael, the reliable one, who was endlessly getting Guy out of them.

He even went to the extent of installing Sonia Carson and little three-year-old Richard, who was Guy's illegitimate son by Sonia's dead sister, in his house.

A political campaign, a treasure hunt, a jewel robbery and a kidnaping scare are major complications.

"On the Shore"

Author.....Albert Halper
Publisher.....The Viking Press

Fifteen biographical sketches, possessing more sincerity than humor, comprise this book by Albert Halper who, last year, attracted a good deal of attention for his "Union Square."

He writes colorfully, always using the slums of Chicago for his backgrounds, and his sketches, though sometimes repetitive and a little too earnest, are for the most part vividly interesting.

"Red Square"

Author.....Samuel Andrew Wood
Publisher.....E. P. Dutton & Co.

Violence, mystery, murders, escapes—the excitement is continuous in this book. And it is a red-blooded, gusty, played-to-the-hilt excitement that revolves around the activities of the Soviet Secret Police.

There is a young English engineer; an English girl who is a Communist; a Chinese girl who is a screen star and a revolutionary leader, and Prohackai, the murderee.

The story is swiftly told and, as we said before, violent.

"Hide-Away Island"

Author .....Barry Fox
Publisher ..... Greenberg

Here is a light, charming tale of a lady who divorced a brute of a husband and found refuge in an old shack on an island near the South Shore of Long Island.

Fortunately, it was near a Coast Guard Station, and the guards, according to the story, are remarkably fine chaps.

They fixed the shack up for her, found an obstetrician when Beth's baby arrived, and even succeeded in bringing a new romance to her life.

"End of an Ancient Mariner"

Authors: G. D. H. and Margaret Cole
Publishers .....The Crime Club

Philip Blakeway kills old Captain John Day in full view of the reader. Well—almost in full view. And then the fun starts while the reader watches Inspector Henry Wilson try to fit the puzzling clues together.

Good story, good conversation.

"Summer's Play"

Author.....G. B. Stern
Publisher.....Alfred A. Knopf

Miss Stern slyly subtitles her book, "An Exaggeration," and then proceeds to weave together a sort of fantasy and a definite reality.

The result is a highly original and diverting novel, the like of which has never been seen before.

It tells of the Leighs who lived the year around at Clifford's Bay, and who hated the noisy summer visitors with a hatred all out of proportion. The Leigh children were kept away from the visitors with such fierce vigilance that they finally came to regard them as an alien and strange race. Dr. Alexander Leigh nicknames the visitors "The Augs," and secretly encourages the children to carry on a scientific investigation of the Augs.

This book is strange, vivid and utterly charming.

"Weymouth Sands"

Author.....John Cowper Powys
Publisher.....Simon & Schuster

Writing again of Dorsetshire and Dorsetshire folk, Mr. Powys displays the same profound pity for his characters, the same gentle understanding of their faults, foibles and virtues, that he displays in all of his books. His analyses are keen and his characters move around in the plot as if they had a right to be there, as indeed they have.

He writes of Adam Skald, whose nickname was "The Jobber"; of Cattistock, a rich miser; of Perdita Lane, a girl from Guernsey, and of Sylvanus Cobbold, a mystic, who is finally arrested and put away in an insane asylum on the charge of immoral relations with young girls. The fact that these relations were not physical, but mental, is a typical Powys touch.

This is a book of tenderness and compassion and high intelligence.

"Children of Ruth"

Author.....Marvin Sutton
Publisher ..... Greenberg

Miraculously, Marvin Sutton does not allow his novel to fall into class war propaganda. And he had plenty of opportunity, for the book is fundamentally a comment on the gradual change of outlook among the English farmers.

Mr. Sutton tells his story simply and without exaggeration, making his people, whether they be rich landowners or poverty-stricken tenants, completely human and understandable.

He tells of Gaffer Garland and his plowman, Tom Noble, who struggle endlessly to make the farm yield enough to supply them with the money for the never ceasing demands of the new order. And there is the old vicar; the country doctor, and finally Ted, the farm boy, who revolts against absentee landlordism.

This book is entirely and poignantly readable.

"This Much Is Mine!"

Author.....Nola Henderson
Publisher.....Smith & Haas

Although this novel has plenty of life and action and color, it is interesting chiefly as a character sketch of Jo Terry, a girl who is born and lives her life on a secluded Oklahoma farm.

She is a stubborn, sullen, fierce child, who quarrels with her mother, plays with horned toads and rides like a whirlwind over the surrounding country. And she grows up to be stubborn and fierce, determined to supplant her mother as ruler of the farm and to enlarge it. However, when she is eighteen, she is crippled.

Miss Henderson writes fearlessly and sparingly, and the book is in the better-than-average class.

"One-Way Ticket"

Author .....Ethel Turner
Publisher.....Smith & Haas

Ethel Turner writes of life in San Quentin, and she knows whereof she writes, for her father was a prison official, and she lived at San Quentin for nineteen years.

She tells of the lives of the officials' families, living always in dread of attempted escapes on the part of the desperate convicts; of the high electric tension on the days when a man is to be hanged; of the servants who are convicts and of the general, uneasy monotony within the prison walls.

This is Ethel Turner's first novel, but it is not in the least amateurish.

"Covering Two Years"

Author .....I. V. Morris
Publisher.....Reynal & Hitchcock

Here is a first novel important enough to review without using the old saw, "It gives promise of better things to come."

The book is a study of Judith Mahon, 33, who has sunk into an apathy, a self-absorption, and an esoteric shyness that take her completely out of the world. Something happened to her once, and she fled to her aunt and uncle in Boston, where she lives in almost complete silence, with a deadened mind and a crumpled heart.

And it is the story of two years of her life, when Haliday succeeds in bringing her back to the world, relighting the fire that made her at one time a charming and vital woman. But when Judith tells him what drove her into her emotional solitude, the old, painful shroud falls upon her again and the two years come to a silent end.

GOSSIP OF AUTHORS

"Such Is My Beloved"
Author .....Morley Callaghan
Publisher ..... Scribner's

Morley Callaghan has done a clever thing in taking a very usual plot situation and developing out of it a novel of taste and power.

The situation is this: Father Dowling, a young parish priest, is moved to try to save two girls from their life on the streets. He meets them and helps them along with clothes and money.

He persuades a business man to help him . . . and the wife immediately calls in the bishop to have Father Dowling and the two girls run out of town.

Nothing new, but Mr. Callaghan, recounting the effect of the whole experience upon the young priest, does an unusually effective piece of work.

"Cinnamon Seed"
Author .....Hamilton Basso
Publisher ..... Scribner's

It is said that everything that Harry Brand does in this book has its foundation in fact, and that the "King Frog" (Brand's nickname) is unmistakably patterned after Huey Long.

Be that as it may, "Cinnamon Seed" is a tale of the modern South, pulsing and alive, and worthy of high recommendations.

The story is too intricate, and involves too many characters, to find justice in a line or two of synopsis, but the thing as a whole is a dramatic contrast of the past and present South, and well worth reading.

"Fools Rush In"
Author .....Anne Green
Publisher.....E. P. Dutton & Co.

Eleanor Rockwell, daughter of a scatter-brained mother who made a runaway marriage, and a father who finally became mentally deranged, gets in and out of adventures with a natural-born agility.

The two main ones were with a young French art student, and, later with an eccentric old lady whose strangeness led to Eleanor's finding herself an honored guest at a villa whose owner was absent and unknown to her.

Very light, unimportant and amusing.

"The Mystery of the Cape Cod Tavern"
Author.....Phoebe Atwood Taylor
Publisher.....W. W. Morton & Co.

Here's something new in the genus detective. Asey May has no artistic leanings, he is absolutely unsophisticated, he was born and bred on Cape Cod, he has no English accent or butler or affectations. He is merely the hired man, and, in odd moments, a sleuth.

He it is who solves the mystery surrounding the murder of Eve Precne, the proprietor of the tavern. Miss Elspeth Adams, a globe-trotting old gossip who loves murders, helps him a bit.

Bermuda is playing host to two distinguished writers. One is Ida A. R. Wylie, who is writing a book about modern Germany, "To the Vanquished," and the other is Rufus King, who is working on a novel and a play.

A book to look forward to is Mrs. Arnold Rothstein's confession, called "Now I'll Tell," which will be published early in April.

Sheldon Dick's literary agency will change hands—temporarily. Dick is going to retire to the country on March 1 to write a novel, and his assistant, Henriette Herz, will conduct the business.

Richard Aldington is heaving a large sigh over the completion of the first draft of his new novel which he expects to run over 100,000 words.

Doubleday objected to "Triduum" as the name for Kate O'Brien's new novel, so she changed it to "Anteroom."

Claude Kendall has just published a novel called "More Money," which is by Charles Grant, who is really William C. Lengel, associate editor of Liberty.

Christopher Morley calls George Cronyn's "The Fool of Venus" one of the "most singular, colorful and fascinating of the novels of our time." This is the Book-of-the-Month Club's premium book for 1934, and Covici-Friede will print it on March 5.

It is said that Dr. Axel Munthe, who is becoming more blind each day, has finished a new book. All that his publishers know is that he has been working on a book for several years which he called, tentatively, "Death and the Doctor."

James Corbett, who lives in Bristol, England, is reported to have written three novels in three weeks—all of them accepted for immediate publication.

An ambitious undertaking is planned by Alter Brody, who has decided to gather together an anthology of Yiddish literature in English, beginning with Mendelee Mocher Sforim's work and continuing to the present day.

The next Max Miller book will be "The Second House from the Corner," inspired by his own house in La Jolla.

There's an interesting book coming out shortly, published by Long and Smith. It is "Editor's Choice: Short Stories for Today," and it is compiled by Alfred Dashiell, managing editor of Scribner's Magazine. Stories by Chekhov, O. Henry, Thomas Wolfe, William Faulkner, Ernest Hemingway, Robert Nathan, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, Ambrose Bierce and Langston Hughes will be included.

If anyone has any original letters of Charles Lamb, E. V. Lucas would like to see them. Mr. Lucas can be reached through Harper and Brothers, New York.

Ethel Boileau, the English novelist, is happy. Her book, "A Gay Family," which was published last fall and which showed no activity, has suddenly become in so much demand that Duttons have gone to press with it three times in three weeks.

Hendrik Willem Van Loon isn't wasting his time on his round-the-world tour. He has written two new books, "Paris, and How to Like It in Spite of Everything," and "Salzburg and the Part of Austria You Will See While Getting There," both books taking prizes for the longest titles.

James E. Abbe has just signed a contract with Robert M. McBride and Company for a book on his adventures as a press photographer and as a member of the Soviet Press Bureau in Russia. Mr. Abbe, who was the first foreigner to be entertained by Stalin in the Kremlin, has just finished photographing President Roosevelt in the White House.

"Gentleman of Vienna," which will be brought out by Reynal and Hitchcock, was written by Count Hans Wilczek and is an account of his own life in the gay, old Vienna that is now gone forever.

Anne Meredith (pseudonym) went to a murder trial at the Old Bailey once, and she left it with the firm conviction that "the weakness of the average detective novel is its insistence on the plot as the thing of first importance, while the really important points should be the characters of the murderer and murderee." And so she has written "Portrait of a Murderer," in which she allows the reader to be present at the murder, know all the facts, see the false clues planted, and follow the course of police efforts to solve the crime.

Arthur Pound has three books on three publishers' spring lists. "Once a Wilderness" is a story of his native Michigan; "The Turning Wheel" is a history of General Motors, and "Golden Earth" is a study of Manhattan real estate.

Dr. J. Manuel Mayer, of Brooklyn, is another busy man. He has just finished a novel, "Step-Children of the World"; he has also finished a three act play, "Fling at Life," and is now working on another novel, "Office Hours."

For the first time in many months, another book has edged "Anthony Adverse" out of first place as national best seller. Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art" nosed it out. Gene Fowler's book, "Timber Line," on the other hand, has moved away up and has already outsold his earlier success, "The Great Mouthpiece."

John V. A. Weaver is hurrying along with a dramatization of his novel, "Her Knight Comes Riding," in order to join his wife, Peggy Wood, in Hollywood.

before production of practically every worth while appearing play that is on next Fall's list.

The Guild has named a committee to iron out the situation. The committee consists of Marc Connolly, Owen Davis, Morrie Ryskind, Howard Lindsay and Edward Childs Carpenter. They will investigate and recommend a definite policy for the Dramatists Guild.

"The Mystery of Dead Man's Heath"
Author .....J. Jefferson Farjeon
Publisher .....Dodd, Mead & Co.

If a bat hadn't caused Lionel North to fall off his motorcycle, he never would have become involved in the murder or Sir Rufus Lunt, an old scoundrel who met a fitting end at the head of a good-sized hammer.

Patricia Dale is suspected, but she is the heroine and beautiful . . . so don't worry.

"The Adventures of Davy Crockett"
Illustrator....John W. Thomason Jr.
Publisher ..... Scribner's

The autobiography of David Crockett, full of wild west adventures and Indians and massacres, is now available in a popular edition, and illustrated by John W. Thomason.

It is an exciting, genuine Americana, and it contains, besides Crockett's own story, "Col. Crockett's Texas Exploits" and an account of the Alamo disaster.

"First Over Everest"
Authors: Air Commodore Fellowes, Lord Clydesdale, Colonel Blacker and Colonel Etherton
Publisher ..... McBride

It took a year of planning in England, a month en route to the flying base—and only six hours to fly over the tallest mountain in the world.

All these English fliers added their bit to the writing of the book, with the result that it is a little choppy, but fascinating.

The photographs are superb and terrifying. Nobody who once begins the book will be able to lay it down.

"Murder to Music"
Author .....Glen Burne
Publisher .....Dodd, Mead

Mr. Burne writes his first detective story . . . and it's a swell one.

It is laid to the tune of a symphony orchestra in a concert hall, and a music critic solves the crime while waiting to catch a boat and win his bride!

"Fireweed"
Author .....Mildred Walker
Publisher .....Harcourt, Brace

Mrs. Walker, 28, with two children, enrolled at the University of Michigan last year and won the $2,500 prize for novels from the Avery and Jule Hopwood fund. She also won a second $2,500 prize for the best essay.

Her book, "Fireweed," which won the novel prize, is a fine, honest recountal of the life of a pretty young girl who wants to go to the big city and get some color and excitement in her life. Instead, she marries a lumber worker, and is forced to dedicate the rest of her days to babies, dishes, washing, bread-making and small talk about bargains and whooping cough.

CONSOL. AND ERPI CLASH

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

Bishop John J. Cantwell,
Los Angeles, California.

My dear Bishop:

Because of the interest it held for the motion picture industry, particularly those at the seat of production here in Hollywood, we caused a digest of your article, "Priests and the Motion Picture Business," as published in the Ecclesiastical Review of February, to be run in the columns of this paper in the issue of March 10, and, along with the majority here at the seat of production, we take exception to most of the remarks aimed at this industry.

I am a Catholic, my dear Bishop, a member of the Blessed Sacrament parish in Hollywood, and, too, I am a member of the motion picture industry, as publisher of this paper. I have always had pride in my Church and am also proud of my small affiliation in motion pictures. I feel that you have shown a gross misunderstanding of the subject you treat with.

My dear Bishop, the producers in this business, those "pagan" writers to whom you refer, and each and every individual connected with this industry, succeeds only in so far as he succeeds in giving the public what it wants. We are in the business of selling entertainment to millions. If our efforts do not produce entertainment, if our goods do not measure up to what the public wants, then we are out of the business—we have no companies, we have no jobs.

Even if our pictures are as bad as you say, (and they are NOT) if the men and women and their children did not want those pictures, we would try to make what they DO want. Because of your remarks, my dear Bishop, you seem to convey the acknowledgment that the Church has failed in its mission and, because of that failure, you are blaming us. That's not right.

The picture business is successful because its producers, its writers and all those assisting them make every effort to keep abreast of the times. There was a period when the sweet, homespun story had the popular favor; pictures of that type were made. The times then shifted to the flapper age and we made flapper pictures. When the bootlegger and the gangster were the big interest of the day, our in-

MGM Nips Cain Yarn from Col.

The James M. Cain best seller, "The Postman Always Rings Twice," was bought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Saturday after a few hectic hours of trading on the part of that outfit and Columbia and general runarounds by William Morris Jr., representing the author, and the author himself.

Lewis Milestone, in an attempted washup of his deal with Columbia, consented to agree on a story with the studio, place it into immediate production, draw pay for that production and call the Columbia deal an "experience."

Milestone suggested the "Postman" story because it did not require star

The deal was set by the William Morris office and Miss West has consented to the substitution. The shooting schedule will be arranged by Director Leo McCarey so that the picture work will not interfere with Pryor's performances in "Men in White" at El Capitan Theatre.

THE LOW DOWN

The Donald Ogden Stewarts threw an elegant party Saturday night—especially Don, who almost forgot to tell his wife (just arrived) that they were entertaining that evening. In fact—they're always entertaining. Guests were invited to inspect the fountain in front of the house—but that's as far as it got. Mrs. S., however, went for a look and practically swooned for joy. It seems that Don had moved into the new mansion while she was away and neglected to tell her about the house OR the fountain! While the fountain merely dripped, the champagne flowed like a raging river, so what kind of a time do you think was had by all? Music, both professional and unexpected, was provided, too—these writers of laff riots certainly don't "spare the horses," we always say!

Among those who spent the night (or was it the week-end?) were Virginia Gilbert, Warren Leslie, the Gary Coopers, George Cukor, the H. Mankiewiczes, Kay Francis, Maurice Chevalier, Kendall Glaenzer, Lewis Milestone, Liz DuPont, Whitney de Rham, the Jimmy Bordreos, Lydia Macy, Grace Moore, Countess di Frasso, Harvey Ladew, Mrs. Leslie Howard, the Walter Wangers and many more. The high-spot of the evening was provided by the host, who asked everybody enthusiastically, "Have you EVER had a better time in your life?" (!)

Frances Marion, who works hard enough to keep ten women busy, has gone in for music in a big way "on the side." She takes a singing lesson every day and piano lessons three times a week. She calls the ivory-tapping her "waiting-accomplishment" because the only time she gets to practice is while waiting for guests to arrive at her house for dinner. F'instance, if Mary Pickford is invited for seven o'clock, Frances knows she'll get in at least an hour's practice. If it is the David Selznicks (known in Hollywood as "the late David Selznicks") Miss M is good for two hours or more of hard work while waiting—and so on.

The Warner Baxters are building a new house, the construction of which is practically an electrician's picnic The new Baxter mansion will have everything in the way of electrical devices for the home that modern science has contrived. An entire room in the basement is set aside for plugs and switches and even the silver will be polished by electricity. If a fuse blows out in the Baxter menage, a considerable part of the Baxter fortune will probably blow out with it.

New York REVIEWS

"PALOOKA"
Edward Small prod.; director, Benjamin Stoloff; writers, Jack Jevne, Gertrude Purcell, Arthur Kober
Rivoli Theatre

Times: The film gives Mr. Durante an opportunity to express his mortification in various ways, some new and some old.

Herald-Tribune: The plot formula is routine and the method of narration is not much better.

Mirror: The story is no conventional scenario of the fight-game. Jimmy never has been funnier. And he never has had more able clowns cooperating in his daffy antics. Several gags and lines, aimed right at the smart boys of Broadway, give the story a resounding ring of conviction. Men particularly will relish "Palooka" for it is roistering, robust fun, undiluted with mush. Don't miss it.

American: A laughter-studded fight farce, embroidered with gags and giggles, and strengthened by a line-up of names, gives good film fun at the Rivoli, where it should remain for several weeks by box-office request. The story gives our Mr. Durante something to do besides "hot-cha," and in a part holding comedy situations, his clowning is doubly effective.

World-Telegram: Wherever Jimmie Durante is ,fun is never far away. And since in "Palooka," Jimmie is on the screen practically all the time, the film is far and away the funniest and breeziest that has come this way in many a blue moon. This "Palooka" seems to me to be Jimmie Durante at his hilarious best.

Journal: "Palooka" is hilariously goofy, a Jimmie Durante field-day. The picture is packed with laughs and has a couple of songs, a couple of fights and some love interest thrown in for good measure.

Post: Though it might be unfair to the other actors, the story and the dialogue to say that Jimmie Durante in "Palooka" is the whole show, it would have been a major catastrophe if by some studio oversight the picture at the Rivoli had been made without him. Here is a vehicle that suits the inscrutable flavor of the comedian at every point. It is rich, riotous and gorgeously low.

Sun: "Palooka" is pure Durante, Durante at its loudest, funniest and most coherent. "Palooka" is pretty much a man's picture. It is not a picture for chuckling. Its response is guffaws, loud bursts of masculine laughter. The audience is nearly as noisy as the picture.

News: "Palooka" is a rowdy, lusty comedy and Jimmie Durante is responsible for most of the belt-line laughs with which the audience at the Rivoli responds to it. It is his picture, for without him it would not amount to much. The fight scenes are amusing and exciting exhibitions which will tickle the risibles and interest especially the male observers in the audience. This is more of a man's film fare than a lady's dish.

Para. Takes Marion Story Off the Shelf

Paramount yesterday pulled the George Marion Jr. story, "Here's Your Quarter-back," from the shelf, handing it to Louis Lighton for supervision. The picture was planned as a musical and is said to be the first of its type. It was previously scheduled for Richard Arlen and Jack Oakie, with the possibility it may again go through on this set-up.

Scola-Markey Set

Kathryn Scola and Gene Markey were set Saturday by Warners to write the screen play for the Kay Francis picture, "Lost Lady." James Seymour will supervise.

names, it could be made cheaply and he felt it had great possibilities.

Getting down to cases, Columbia insisted that Milestone would have to agree to any eliminations in story that the Hays office might demand. Rather than make such an agreement, "Millie" suggested that Mr. Hays' office be called in. But after hearing the Hays demands he said he could not do the story.

In the meantime, the author and his agent were waiting for the three o'clock deadline they gave Columbia on its option, and when the clock struck the hour, they scrammed to MGM, received their payment ($25,000) and the yarn will be done by David Selznick as an MGM attraction.

WARNERS HIT WITH MUSICAL, FLOP WITH DRAMATIC FILM

'Rhythm in the Air' Sure-Fire Success

(Warners-First National)

Direction .....Ray Enright
Original.....Paul Finder Moss and Jerry Wald
Screen Play.....Warren Duff and Harry Sauber
Music and Lyrics.....Harry Warren and Al Dubin
Photography .....Sid Hickox
Cast: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Ginger Rogers, Allen Jenkins, Four Mills Brothers, Ted Fio Rito and band, Grant Mitchell, Joseph Cawthorn, Johnny Arthur, Joan Wheeler, Henry O'Neill, "Three Radio Rogues"; Ken Hollingwood, Eddie Bartell, Henry Taylor.

"Rhythm in the Air" has HIT written all over it. And the capitalization is not a typographical error. The general excellence of the piece is due to every department functioning on all eight. With the contributions of all concerned noteworthy, it is impossible to single out any individual for undue credit. Credit, then, the entire cast, direction, dialogue—which proves fun can be fun without being dirty—tuneful music, photography—but this could go on and on. It was a perfectly synchronized machine that turned out "Rhythm in the Air."

The oddest part about it is that the picture boasts nothing particularly new in the way of a plot. It tells the story of a singer who makes good with the aid of a fast-talking manager and the sacrifice of the girl who loves him. When marriage threatens to interfere with his career, he asks her to wait, there is a misunderstanding, his career goes smash, then the happy fade-out with girl, career and everything regained. It can't be the plot, so it must be the way it was put together.

The opening shot is a smart establishment of locale. The "Three Radio Rogues" do a series of impersonations of outstanding ether personalities, their voices coming from the loudspeakers of radios of all types. From the start, a fast comedy tempo is set and maintained until the serious side of the love interest intrudes to slow up proceedings. The satire on radio broadcasting is biting without being bitter. It is perhaps the only believable burlesque upon its subject that the screen has given us.

Concerned as the action is with radio, the song numbers are introduced naturally. There are no big production dance routines, nor are any called for. The Four Mills Brothers are in for three numbers, all show stoppers. With the other music, Warren and Dubin have done it again. Their "I'll String Along With You" has more than hit possibilities. It is sure-fire.

The role of the fast-talking manager was tailor-made for Pat O'Brien, and how he carries it off. Nice characterization in not having him as big a shot as he thinks he is. Dick Powell is the singer O'Brien picks up in a beer garden and he shapes up well as a comic in the early sequences. His part keeps him on the screen almost continually.

Why Ginger Rogers was not given more to do is something of a mystery. The girl has everything and shows it in comparatively brief flashes. She is one of the few personalities who appear to advantage while singing, yet is allotted only one song—possibly because Powell has so many.

Seldom are three supporting comedy roles so evenly balanced. Allen Jenkins as the grouchy bed-time story teller, Grant Mitchell as the radio station chief, and Joseph Cawthorn, with the chance to do his German dialect again, as the soap program sponsor, all are superb. And there is still room for an outstanding moment with Johnny Arthur doing an outraged secret husband of a movie star. Which should give you a good idea of the fun that is literally packed into "Rhythm in the Air." Remember, too, that it is all clean fun, with only two instances of slightly suggestive dialogue, both unimportant and quite easily eliminated.

Ray Enright's direction is expert, especially in holding to tempo. So good is the direction that the inevitable boudoir shot of a leggy group of girls listening to the radio crooner seems like somebody's else idea.

There are so many exploitation angles in a radio comedy that recounting them here would be a waste of space.

Phoney Previews Thrive in Heat

The heat caused a hectic scramble by theatre men to bolster up business with a stack of previews over the week-end, Saturday night witnessing a record number, the majority of them from the off-the-shelf class. Local sector saw twelve such previews.

Sid Skolsky Story For Marion Davies

Cosmopolitan productions Saturday closed negotiations with Sidney Skolsky, New York Daily News columnist, for his original story, "Movie Queen," and will use it a a Marion Davies vehicle.

Story is a musical and the studio is negotiating for the loan of a crooner for the male lead. Donald Ogden Stewart will script when he finishes his work on "The Barretts of Wimpole Street." Jack Moss handled the deal for Skolsky.

Radio Wants Child Player for Dix Film

With a featured spot in "Treasure Island," the Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper co-starring vehicle, practically set for Cora Sue Collins, Radio is after the child actress for the most important role in her screen career in "Family Man," the next Richard Dix starring vehicle.

'Upperworld' Dull With Stale Story

(Warners)

Direction .....Roy Del Ruth
Story .....Ben Hecht
Screen Play.....Ben Markson
Photography .....Tony Gaudio
Cast: Warren William, Mary Astor, Ginger Rogers, Theodore Newton, Henry O'Neill, Robert Barrat, Andy Devine, Dickie Moore, Robert Grieg, William Gargan, Edward Arnold.

"Upperworld" is about as exciting as warmed-over souffle, but somehow or other Warren William seems to emerge triumphantly in spite of all the dull stories they throw him into. There isn't much to be said for this opus except to chronicle the fact that Warren William seems to have taken on qualities that are slaying feminine audiences right and left.

Having mentioned that fact, there isn't much left to chronicle about "Upperworld." It is a dull story, tepidly told. The formula is familiar, the man married to a woman whose social ambitions cause her to neglect him and their youngster, thus throwing him into the arms of the other woman.

Have you heard that one before? Yes, so have we.

In this case, as has happened before, "the other woman," Ginger Rogers, after starting to play William for a sucker, eventually falls in love with him. Of course. And also, another "of course," the way of the transgressor results in a murder, a trial scene with some poor efforts at suspense, and an eventual reconciliation between William and Mary Astor as his wife.

There is a banal scene where Miss Astor tells William that she has been wrong and they must start all over again, bringing lovable Dickie Moore home as the piece de resistance, a typical wifely gesture to hold her man.

Roy Del Ruth did his best, but couldn't overcome the frayed familiarity of the material and the obvious method of its intelligence. Cute and talented Ginger Rogers was excellent, but it was evident that even the director was a bit dubious about her relationship to the two men in her life. Mary Astor looked charming, while Andy Devine, Dickie Moore and the balance of an excellent cast tried their best.

'6 Months' Option' Opens

"Six Months' Option," a comedy drama by Ansella Hunter, will have its initial Pacific Coast staging at the Spotlight Theatre, 1011 N. Cole avenue, tonight. Herman Spitzel will be host. Arthur Lovejoy, Richard Castle, Bernard Suss, Margaret Brayton, Elsaye Mackaye, Kathryn Sheldon and Iris Brent comprise the cast.

Osterman with West

Jack Osterman has been signed by Paramount for the role of the prize-fighter's manager in the Mae West picture, "It Ain't No Sin," which will be directed by Leo McCarey.

RKO Buys 'Fountain' For Harding Film

"The Fountain," a novel which, some time ago, was shunted back and forth between Radio and MGM, has finally been purchased by the former company as a starring vehicle for Ann Harding.

When David Selznick was at Radio, both he and MGM had options on the story. Finally the latter bought it, with the intention of having Selznick produce it when he went over there. Now the plans have changed and Radio has taken it back for Miss Harding.

'Forgotten Girl' Is Shelved for 2 Months

Production plans going askew, MGM shelved the Wilson Collison story, "Forgotten Girl," as a Robert Montgomery yarn and is planning to return to it in two months.

Sam Wood, who was assigned to direct, moves over to the Bernie Hyman unit to pilot Jean Harlow in "Eadie Was a Lady."

Kelton-Lightner Team

Lou Brock is planning on making a comedy team of Pert Kelton and Winnie Lightner for his forthcoming production, "The Great American Harem," which will be directed by William Seiter for Radio. Miss Kelton has been set for the picture and Miss Lightner is expected to close this week.

Neil Hamilton was signed Saturday for a one-time radio appearance over the National broadcasting coast-to-coast network. The broadcast will be from the Palmer House in Chicago and the hotel is sponsoring the program. Date will be March 22.

DeSylva-Fox Cold

At odds over a new contract, Buddy DeSylva's answer to Fox overtures on another deal is said to have been "not interested." Producer left Saturday for New York with plans to produce a play.

SEES FORTUNE IN OLD PICTURES IN FAR EAST

Robert Brandt, who recently returned from a two and a half years stay in the Orient, has been huddling the past few days with one major company on a unique plan which he worked out while abroad, and which he figures will bring in a lot of extra money for the producers.

Brandt's idea is simply this: Take pictures that have had their run, not only in America, but throughout the world, and do a special narrative sound track for the various dialects of the many Far East countries. In India, alone, he points out there are about five dialects that are generally understood. Thus, by adding his type of sound to such a picture as, say, "The Thief of Bagdad," his survey indicates that a large sum can be gleaned from India on this picture alone.

William Rich is associated with Brandt in the promotion of his idea. They have checked India, Siam, Japan, China and Dutch East Indies, and figure they can do the necessary sound track over there with native talkers for a thousand dollars a feature picture, with no duty to pay, either.

"From my own personal checkup," says Brandt, "I am certain that at least $500,000 a year can be added to the income of a major company by using the old pictures alone."

Consol. and Erpi Clash

mendous Consolidated resources behind the production revival in the East; second, as a step in the competitive war between Erpi and RCA for the independent producing field.

The state rights organization being formed under Consolidated sponsorship will be headed by Adolph Pollak and plans twelve productions. With a $100,000 pool as the basis, one year franchises are being sold to territorial buyers, each paying according to the percentage allotment of his territory.

Phil Meyers, of the General Pictures Exchange, has bought the New York franchise, assessed at twenty per cent. On the delivery of the first two pictures he pays in cash $4,000, the balance of the $20,000 being spread over forty weekly payments.

The distributor will furnish prints without cost to the franchise holder, who will retain forty per cent of the theatre receipts for his end, turning over sixty per cent to the distributor Consolidated will finance the first two pictures, figuring that receipts from the sixty per cent cut will take care of the balance. Foreign rights will also be retained by the distributor. The exchanges will receive the pictures one a month.

It is expected that after the new group is solidified and in operation a few months arrangements will be made to handle other product through the same channel.

The new organization will challenge the supremacy of Erpi in financing independent production, and is the first move by RCA which equipped the Biograph plant, in that direction. Erpi, through live handling of the Eastern Service Studios and a new deal at the General Service Studios in Hollywood, has held a practical monopoly on the recording of independent producers.

Oh, Happy Day

Myles Connolly, Radio producer, yesterday discovered that he had once been a novelist. He received a check for $17 royalties on "Mr. Blue," which he wrote ten years ago.

Poster Association To Make Own Paper

New York.—With the major distributors bearing down on enforcing their copyrights to prevent reselling of posters by independent dealers, the National Poster Service Association has countered with plans to make its own complete line of posters for pictures.

The Association will turn out one and three sheets, as well as 11x14 and 22x28 paper, and sell to independent poster dealers.

Garber's Orchestra Signed at Catalina

Jan Garber, brother of David Garber, Charles R. Rogers' art designer, and his orchestra have been signed to play in the Casino at Catalina Island during July and August. They will come here from the Trianon ballroom in Chicago, where they have been for the past four months.

NBC will handle Garber's Sunday broadcast and a local daily air program.

Schulberg Signs New One

B. P. Schulberg has signed Jean Chatburn, former chorus girl, to a personal term contract. The Paramount producer has three other players tagged under a similar arrangement. Miss Chatburn has been assigned a bit in "Little Miss Marker."

Praskins for London

Although negotiations are yet to be concluded, indications are that Leonard Praskins will go to London shortly to write the script of "Sons o' Guns" for British and Dominions, which release through United Artists in the American territories.

Lubin Back from East

Arthur Lubin returns to town today from New York, where he has handled stage productions for the Shuberts since early last Fall. He went to Palm Springs Saturday from the train, getting off at San Bernardino.

French Pathe Buys RCA

Paris.—Pathe Cinema of France has contracted for five of the latest type of RCA portable recording units for the local studio. The firm has also equipped more than 300 theatres with RCA Photophone.

Extras Are Hoist With Own Petard

Extra players who formerly were in considerable demand because they were able, when called upon, to step front and center and speak a few lines, are now beginning to grouse over the discovery that the extras' section of the film code has given their pocketbooks quite a dent.

That clause which says that extras who are called upon to speak lines must be paid $25 per day is the fly in the ointment. It seems that producers, not wishing to pay so much for such a tiny bit, are now signing "bit" players for a figure below the $25 per day mark, and the talking extras are finding themselves waiting for calls while the other chaps are getting the work.

The trouble is that such procedure is not a violation of the code, so some of the extras are now wondering if they didn't ask for too much when making code demands.

New York Exhibs Take Over Casino for Vaude

New York.—Haring and Blumenthal and Jack Shapiro, veteran exhibitors in the New York and New Jersey territories, will open the Casino Theatre, a Broadway theatrical landmark, on Easter Sunday with the "Casino Varieties," a sort of glorified vaudeville.

It will operate on a two-a-day basis week days, with three shows Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Program changes every four weeks.

'Suicide Club' May Have Karloff-Lugosi

Universal has removed the Robert Louis Stevenson story, "Suicide Club," from the shelf and has once more placed it on the production schedule. This time it is to bracket Karloff and Bela Lugosi if an acceptable script can be worked out of it.

dustry flooded the country with pictures of that type.

We did not make the flapper, or the bootlegger or the gangster. They may have been created because of the failures of the Catholic and other Churches, but they were the chief interest of the times and we fashioned pictures around them and the public bought them. Just as soon as public interest started to die, our producers switched to other subjects.

All the preachings, all the teachings, anything that you or we may do, will not keep the public from talking sex, thinking sex; and as long as they are talking about it, thinking about it, authors will write stories around it, publishers will print them, plays will be produced, and pictures will be made. Can't you understand, my dear Bishop, that the men responsible for making those pictures do not make them for their own entertainment or because they like them? They are made because they are the type of films that will sell for the time being!

We could (and will if you want) present you with figures on pictures of the type that you may like, or we may like, or the producers may like best to make, figures that will stagger you with their tremendous losses. The public would not go to see them. They were not of the times, they were not topical in any sense; they did not answer the questions the public wanted answered and, because of that, those producers sustained great losses. We will also show you figures that will be equally staggering, but in another direction, pictures that made millions, pictures to which neither you nor we, nor the producer who made them would give ten minutes time.

So, my dear Bishop, if your story is right (and it is NOT right) you can't blame this business, you can't slander its producers, you can't defile its authors. They are doing what the public wants them to do and, if they don't do it, they will be out of the business.

That condition you speak of (if it is a condition) can't be corrected by stories in the Ecclesiastical Review or any other review. You may try it from your pulpit. We have seen it tried from the pulpits of other churches not of the Catholic faith, and the few members of the congregation who happened to be present could not wait to get to the nearest picture theatre to see what it was all about.

Suppose we agree, for the moment, with everything you have said; what is there to do about it? Shall the producers stop making pictures altogether, taking whatever profits they have made and hoping that it will keep them for the rest of their days, or shall they make the pictures that you would have them make, taking all those losses until there is no more to lose and then bow out with the epitaph over their graves, "He tried to sell the public what it did not want." Or maybe the Church, the Catholic Church, can change that public taste; maybe it can tell the people not to buy the pictures we are making; maybe, through your influence, we can get the people to buy the pictures you want to be made, the pictures we would like to see, the pictures the producers would like best to make.

Maybe you can, and if you can, you will be doing this industry and this and other nations a great service. There is no doubt about the influence of the screen, there is no doubt that it sways public opinion and public taste to a degree, but our producers who have tried to sway that opinion and affect that taste, are no longer in this business. They were ruled out by lack of finances brought on through terrific losses sustained in their attempts to educate the public.

Many of the conditions you speak of, dear Bishop, are correct, but the remedy is not in the direction you choose to dynamite. The producers, as a whole, are not wrong; they are only making what the public demands they make. Failing in that, there would be no picture business and, if there is no picture business, we feel certain the affairs of the Church and the nation would be in a much more deplorable condition. Don't you think so?

Lanny Ross East

Lanny Ross left last night by train for three weeks in New York. He will do his next three broadcasts there and return to Paramount for his role in "Her Master's Voice."

'U' May Release Girls' Travel Film

Universal evinced interest over the week-end in the film which Leila Roosevelt and Edna Olmstead shot during their unique trip around the globe. Carl Laemmle Sr. asked Miss Roosevelt to show him the footage before continuing with her plans to ship it East for cutting and presentation.

Both girls made the swing around the world in a motor truck, making a 12,000 foot pictorial record of their adventures. They were the guests of Universal at luncheon Saturday. Miss Roosevelt is the daughter of Andre Roosevelt and is married to Armand Denis.

Actress Makes Screen Debut in 'Cleopatra'

Confident they would sell Eleanor Phelps to C. B. DeMille for his Paramount picture, "Cleopatra," the William Morris office brought the stage player out from New York two weeks ago on speculation.

The ticket was closed yesterday and the player makes her screen debut in the picture.

Dunne Out of MGM

Handing in his script on "Student Tour" to Monta Bell, Phillip Dunne has checked out of MGM, winding up a two-picture deal. The Jack Gardner office is handling him.

'YELLOW JACK' GOOD HISTORY BUT POOR ENTERTAINMENT

Yellow Fever Epic HasNothing for Pics

"YELLOW JACK"

Presented by Guthrie McClintic at the Martin Beck Theatre; written by Sidney Howard in collaboration with Paul De Kruif; directed by Guthrie McClintic; production designed by Jo Mielziner. Cast: Geoffrey Kerr, Colin Hunter, Francis Compton, Bernard Jukes, Lloyd Gough, Kim, Robert Shayne, Wylie Adams, Chas. Gerard, Jack Carr, James Stewart, Edward Acuff, Samuel Levene, Myron McCormick, Katherine Wilson, Clyde Walters, Frank Stringfellow, John Miltern, Barton MacLane, Eduardo Viannelli, Robert Keith, Richie Ling.

New York.—A dignified audience sat for two and a half hours while the history of the fight against yellow fever was enacted in a series of animated lantern slides at the Martin Beck. Without intermission it grew tiresome, windy and muddled and the audience which had first given it rapt attention grew uneasy and disinterested. The production has no motion picture possibilities whatever, in its present form, and little chance of surviving as theatrical entertainment. For it just isn't.

Guthrie McClintic hasn't set out to fool anyone, and should get credit for that. "Yellow Jack" is labeled "a history" and not a drama, and it has been given a splendid production. Mielziner's one set is impressive and beautifully lit, McClintic's direction is fastidious, and Sidney Howard's dialogue is sincere, but the mosquito hunt just doesn't hold sustained interest from 8:30 till 11.

One alleged critic argued that it needed an intermission. "Yeh, about a month," argued another. But a production like "Yellow Jack" cannot be treated flippantly. It must be set down as a notable recording of the long experiments in the fight against a dreaded enemy and the discovery that the carrier is the villainous mosquito. The performances were all excellent, with James Stewart and Samuel Levene brightening this dark play most, in minor roles.

Ad Men Kick

New York.—There is undercover complaint from local ad men chafing under Hays office censorship that Warners get away with murder. They point particularly to a Harold Teen ad this week which pictures Hal LeRoy asking if he can hold his girl's dog, and her reply: "Yes, but don't point him at anyone, he's loaded."

Birinski Returns

Leo Birinski returned from New York Saturday after being there for ten days. He went to see plays which MGM has already purchased.

Powerful Civil Body Aids Censor Fight

New York.—The Civil Liberties Union joined the fight against picture censorship in New York State with a vigorous appeal to the Assembly to support a bill now in the legislature abolishing censorship.

The Union points out that censorship now exists in only six states and has been so discredited it has not been extended anywhere else since 1922.

Stoloff Will Direct 'Catalina' for Small

Ben Stoloff, who directed Edward Small's "Palooka," has been signed by the producer for another picture. He will pilot "Catalina."

Sid Silvers will handle gags and take a featured spot in the filmusical, book for which is being done by Mike Simmons.

Teasdale for 'Du Barry'

Upon the completion of her work in "Dr. Monica," Veree Teasdale will move into the cast of "Du Barry" for a featured assignment, Warners deciding Saturday.

Cagney in New York

New York.—Jimmy Cagney has arrived here on a four-week vacation from the Warner studio.

SAYS THE CAMERAMAN

Break for Marley

Pev Marley, who focused to fame with C. B. DeMille, and who during the past year has been associated with Twentieth Century, gets the big break, which every cameraman craves, when "House of Rothschild" opens at Grauman's Chinese as the attraction succeeding the current run of la Garbo.

Warrenton Back to "U"

Gilbert Warrenton, free lance cameraman, who is still taking the bows on Charles Rogers' "Eight Girls in a Boat," draws a ticket for feature production photography at Universal starting today. Warrenton was for several years a permanent member of the Universal camera staff.

Krasner Renews

Milton Krasner, who is one of the youngest first cameramen in the business, resumes with Charles Rogers next week, when he takes the camera for the Rogers' production, "In Conference."

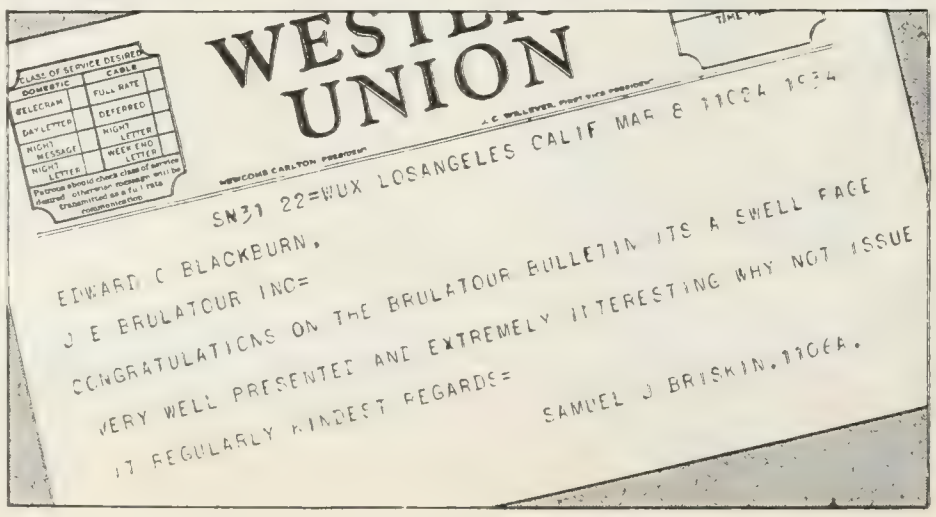
Youngster has made quite a name for himself with his outstanding work on Rogers' productions, including "Strictly Personal," "I Love That Man," "Golden Harvest," "Sitting Pretty," "She Made Her Bed."

Milner With De Mille

When C. B. DeMille calls action on the Claudette Colbert super-feature, "Cleopatra," at Paramount, Vic Milner will be for the first time (strange as it may seem) associated with Mr. De Mille as his photographer. Time and again De Mille has aimed at Milner, but on the ready date Lubitsch or some other director has connected.

Marsh Boosted

Purpose of the Brulatour Bulletin is frankly to tell the producers facts about cameramen. Hence this page.



Unusual break for lenser comes in M. G. M.'s full page display ads carried last week in local trade journals, ballyhooing "The Mystery of Mr. X," and using big bold black type to say that "Every . . . art director, technical expert and cameraman owes it to himself to see it!"

Ollie Marsh shot this one.

Rosher Completes

"The Firebrand" (Twentieth Century), directed by Greg La Cava, turned his fade-out last week with Charles Rosher at the camera, Constance Bennett, star.

—AND THE PRODUCER

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION:

WHAT'S YOUR ATTITUDE REGARDING MAKE-UP?

JERRY ASH (Universal): "I like to see character people without make-up; they look more natural. Juveniles, leading men and women, should use make-up intelligently because in movies it contributes the same smooth, pleasing effect that retouching does in stills."

VICTOR MILNER (Paramount): "Make-up can be as much of a detriment when used promiscuously as it is an aid when used properly. We have many actors who need little, if any, make-up, but the majority cannot be photographed without it."

THEODOR SPARKUHL (Paramount): "I find since the introduction of the highly sensitized negatives, the need for make-up has diminished. I consider eyebrow and lip make-up most essential because of their vital importance to facial expression. With many women smooth face powder is sufficient."

HENRY SHARP (Paramount): "In photographing individuals many times only slight touches of make-up are necessary, but in photographing large casts of men and women I find it necessary for everyone to use a make-up because of the dissimilarity in the photographic value of complexions. This is especially true with some of our sun-tanned ingenues."

TONY GAUDIO (Warners): "In majority of cases I don't care much about make-up for men. However, I have never photographed a woman whose picture appearance was not improved by the intelligent use of make-up."

HAROLD MENSTROM (RKO): "As you know, I photographed Wally Beery in 'The Big House,' also Victor McLaglen in 'The Lost Patrol.' Men in this type of story certainly should not use make-up with the exception of a little grease to strengthen the characterization and simulate sweat."

WRITERS' ROW FLARES UP

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WE bumped into a surprising situation yesterday. We had an actor, a good actor who has been freelancing for quite some time and making more money than he ever has made before, tell us, "This freelance thing is not what it is cracked up to be. When I was under contract, I only had one studio to worry about, now my worries are directed to every plant in the business and I am spending most of my sleeping hours reading scripts, trying to judge whether the part is worth my accepting, and if I do accept, what's going to be in the picture after the preview."

That's an unusual angle and a true one.

A contract player gets a lot of protection from his home lot even though he may have to do a lot of fighting after he gets up into the big chips. But he has to do that fighting anyhow and our informant told us, "I would much rather have whatever protection a contract would give me, being content that they are at least working on my development, exploiting my name in advertisements, seeing that exhibitors help in the build and continuing it after I had become a box-office asset.

"As it is," continued the artist, "I take only the parts and at the price I want, but I know I am not getting any of the breaks in the company advertising, that they are not going out of their way to exploit me, that the protection I always got at a contracting studio is washed out altogether."

This fellow told us that during his last five pictures made in four different studios, not ONE plant requested him to sit for publicity stills either before or after the picture. "And you know we have to have plenty of publicity, even though we may be great artists," he said.

All of which is food for thought, particularly for those ready to jump to the freelance market after their present contracts expire. Maybe it is better to fight all your battles from one dugout rather than move the shooting-ground every month or two.

Uncertain Minds

New York.—Columbia cannot make up its mind whether "No Greater Glory" is a two-a-day show or should be turned loose to grind picture houses in a hurry. So the company is trying two-week test engagements in Akron, Hartford and Washington before bringing the pic to New York.

Longer Schedules Okayed at Warners

The fifteen, sixteen or eighteen-day shooting schedule has been ditched at the Warner plant, and Harry Warner's threat that he would not look at a Warner picture "if it cost over $250,000" has been pushed aside also.

Warners are not throwing away any production money, but they are set on getting better pictures and realize the best means of attaining this is more time for preparation and shooting.

MPTOA Prexy Coming

New York.—Ed Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, leaves for Los Angeles April 1 to be on the ground for preparatory work for the big exhibitor convention April 10-11-12.

Frank Joyce Returns

New York.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank Joyce arrive here today on the Majestic. Incidentally the date of arrival coincides with the birthday of Mrs. Joyce, a thoughtful idea on the part of Frank.

Gen. James G. Harbord, chairman of the board of directors of RCA, arrived in Hollywood to look over the studio and confer with B. B. Kahane.

Waldemar Young Withdraws From Liberal Slate—Threats And Treachery Are Charged

The fire which has been smouldering in the Screen Writers' Guild for several days burst into flame yesterday, fed by charges of playing politics, double-crossing, treachery, etc., although no one would stand for being quoted on such accusations. The developments were:

Waldemar Young's withdrawal of his name from the slate of fifteen presented last week by the "liberal element" of the Guild.

Steam Up Fight on N. Y. Censorship

New York.—An attack on censorship on all fronts is planned at the Wednesday meeting of the National Council on Freedom from Censorship.

The meeting will spur action on the organization's bill to abolish State censorship in New York, start action against the Wales Padlock Law, which makes it possible to padlock a theatre if the License Commissioner considers an attraction immoral; and will also ask for the repeal of the law by which the postmaster of a city sits in censoring books. The council would substitute jury trials in both cases.

One opens at the Ohio Theatre, Cleveland, March 31; another at the Majestic, Boston, same date; at the Oneida, Utica, April 3; and Grauman's Chinese on the same date.

THE LOW DOWN

The current success of "Dodsworth" in New York reminds us that Jo Meilziner (Ken MacKenna's brother) has outdone himself on the stage settings for this show. Meilziner was faced with the cute little job of executing fifteen changes of scenes for this production—all quick ones. The play at the moment is requiring the use of two revolving stages at the theatre where it is playing. One "quick change" is so quick that Fay Bainter and Walter Huston have to change costumes together in the same spot on one of the stages on a strip about five feet in diameter. Some fun!

This sounds like a press agent's dream, but our informant swears it is true. Evelyn Venable is a vegetarian and, even though the title of King Vidor's picture "Our Daily Bread" is "vegetarian" enough, Miss V. turned down a role in it because it called for her to kill a chicken in one scene and eat a rabbit stew in another. Migosh—sounds like a food show!

The latest rumors from London anent the possibility of the Pickford-Fairbanks reconciliation really sound authentic and we hope they are. We happened to know that those close to Mary have always hoped, regardless of the separation, that she would take no steps towards the finality of a divorce. We know, too, that if Mary divorces Doug at this time, she will put him in a spot that we are reliably informed he no longer desires to be in. We refer to what would be the chivalrous necessity of marrying Lady Ashley. Someone who should know tells us this supposed romance is ice-cold. Along with a lot of others, we feel that if Mary will just wisely stand off the gossip for awhile longer, it will mean happiness for both her and Doug in the end.

Gene Fowler Cites Bible In Replying to Bishop

On the first anniversary of the "Slight Quake," your newspaper reprinted certain views of the Right Reverend John J. Cantwell, regarding vile motion pictures. The Catholic Bishop of the Los Angeles Diocese is quoted as branding twenty-five per cent of the cinematic product as violent, obscene and provocative of paganism or heathenism. Indeed, he arrives at an opinion that seventy-five per cent of the offending Hollywood scriveners are pagans. However, he liked "Three Little Pigs" and two other works.

There can and should be something done about this matter. I propose a compromise between screen and church. But first, let us cue-in from His Grace's benediction of the three small shoats.

"Three Little Pigs" is from Mother Goose, and as every pagan writer will admit (on his deathbed), all our movie plots are taken from one or two sources: Mother Goose or the Bible. Not alone the movies, but many novels and plays owe their success to this very saga of the three tiny swine. For example, "The Three Musketeers," "Three Faces East," and "Three's A Crowd."

While "Three Little Pigs" is largely a presentation of the gangster problem, with a modicum of sabotage thrown in and a bit of cruelty to animals not permitted in ordinary reels by the humane society moguls, it is reasonably free of the usual Mother Goose themes of violence, robbery and mayhem. Mother Goose is second only to the Bible in the number and scope of crime stories, including murder and heinous chicanery.

The slaying of Cock Robin was as dastardly a piece of Little Caesar bumping as any child or adult could imagine. The kiddies were weaned on larcenous rhymes, for example, that one depicting the getaway of Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son, and his subsequent pummeling at the hands of the Vigilantes. Simple Simon, while not a criminal in fact, was of such mongoloid development that he reappears once in while as a Eugene O'Neill character with a mask. Old King Cole's household had about it a certain Faulkener pathology keyed up to hollow laughter by dint of much fiddling and more guzzling. (See "Tugboat Annie," "Anna Christie" and "Henry the Eighth") Jack and Jill have been suspected of various juvenile delinquincies by such savants as Havelock Ellis and Jung.

After a good and obedient child's criminal instincts had been whetted on the Mother Goose wheel, and his libido nicely feather-faddled, he was ready for the greater and the heftier tussle—the biblical phantasmagoria. Here he could run amok.

He was slightly puzzled by the symbolism evoked by Adam and Eve and dreamed of winking fig leaves drifting on the west wind; but from there on it was all to the good. The child's preceptors mumbled in their beards and tried to translate plain, rollicking lecheries and skull-crackings, into something written by Gertrude Stein. The child, however, knew that when Noah was on the grass, alas! he was plenty rummed up and full of incestuous antics. It was right there (and so was Noah et filia) for King James said so.

True, the King's learned translators had people plighting their oaths on each other's "loins," whereas the Hebraic called it something else, and this nicety escaped juvenile notice. But there was plenty left to make up for this delicate mantling of a touching, robust whimsy. The Ark story (later known as Mutiny on the Bounty) was a gentle biological glimpse, a warning to boys and girls to take care.

The battles, riots, abandonment of children, infanticide, the hospitality of scarlet women, the trickery of Esau in chiseling Jacob out of a birthright in exchange for a bowl of Grape Nuts —all these prankish matters were bruited from pulpit and school rostra in the shape of intellectual lollipops. The Song of Solomon topped Joyce's 'Ulysses' so far that for many years the latter was not allowed in our country—the inference being there was not room enough for both.

So, in considering how vile our cinema is (to the extent of twenty-five per cent) and that our plots evolve from the Uriah's Wife motif (See "Design for Living"), would it not be fair for church and screen to effect a compromise? Let the films delete such plots as are in corroboration of biblical set-ups. On the other hand, ask the churches to cut down on the Bible, eliminating all murders, rapes, arson and larceny-from-the-person. And ask the nurseries to burn those Mother Goose tales—all except "Three Little Pigs."

CREEL DEMANDS SHOWDOWN ON LABOR BOARD STALLING

Judge Lindsey Hears Complaints Today

As a result of the barrage of complaints to Washington from various labor groups complaining that the Studio Labor Committee was not functioning, George Creel, State NRA Administrator, came to town yesterday and has started the first move to whip the studios into line in the matter of living up to code provisions.

According to Mr. Creel, his first definite action will take place today when he will hold a hearing in the Labor Compliance Board offices at which he will hear the complaints against the Studio Labor Committee.

"There have been many, many complaints made to me and to Washington that the Studio Labor Committee and other committees out here were not functioning," said Creel yesterday afternoon. "So tomorrow I will hold a hearing on these complaints. We want to see if these committees have not been functioning and why."

It was also learned yesterday that Creel has straightened out the matter of the duties of Judge Ben Lindsey, who was appointed Labor Compliance Officer some weeks ago. From now on Judge Lindsey is to hear all labor complaints, whether they have been filed with other code committees or not, as long as they have been neglected.

This decision virtually takes the studio labor complaints out of the hands of the Studio Labor Committee which was appointed last January 11, and which has not functioned yet on the more than a score of complaints of code violations that have been filed with it by studio labor groups.

Richard L'Estrange, labor member of the Studio Labor Committee, has been appointed to represent all the complaints in the cases that are now on the shelf of the committee. Yesterday he sent word to various groups to prepare duplicate complaints and bring them to him. He will present them to Creel and Judge Lindsey and carry on from there.

Among those who have complaints filed with the Labor Committee, which is now to pass them along to Judge Lindsey, are: Local 659 IATSE; Local 37 IATSE, 5 complaints; Studio Police, 2; Federated Motion Picture Crafts, 3; Costumers; Plasterers, 2; Laborers; Upholsterers; Machinists; Makeup Artists; Assistant Directors; Grips; Assistant Cutters; Set Dressers; Sound Men and Truck Drivers.

Many of these cases, the complainants declare have been on file with the Studio Labor Committee for more than a month.

"As a member of the Studio Labor Committee," said L'Estrange, "I tried to do something. But the committee only held one meeting since we were appointed. At that it could not agree when to meet again, so it hasn't met.

"Every studio in Hollywood has been violating the Code, and now I'm glad to say that Mr. Creel is going to give us action.

"I will represent all complainants, and the hearings on their complaints will start immediately before Judge Lindsey who will pass on them all."

Starting three features yesterday, Paramount reached peak production for the past four months with nine subjects in work.

Rogers started the first of his last four productions for the studio, "Private Scandal." Ralph Murphy handles the megaphone.

Six features continue in work. They are: "We're Not Dressing" Norman Taurog directing; "Murder at the Vanities," Mitchell Leisen megging; "Double Door," Charles Vidor; "The Witching Hour," Henry Hathaway; "Thirty Day Princess," Marion Gering; and "Little Miss Marker," Alexander Hall.

Davies Wants To Get Crosby Again

Cosmopolitan Productions is pounding on Paramount's doors again for the loan of Bing Crosby for the co-starring spot opposite Marion Davies in the Sidney Skolsky yarn, "Movie Queen," which will follow "Operator 13," now in production at MGM.

WALDEMAR YOUNG PULLS HIS NAME OFF LIBERAL TICKET

Academy Loyalty Given As Reason

Sponsors which presented the "liberal" slate, and a plain statement that he had been threatened by a representative of the present administration.

A communication signed by Ralph Block, Frances Marion and Ernest Pascal, expressing their faith in the present Guild administration and refusing to stand as nominees on the "liberal" slate, on which they had been named.

Mr. Young's letter, which lays his withdrawal partly to the fact that he is still a member of the Academy, follows:

The Committee of Sponsors,
"Liberal Ticket," Screen Writers' Guild,
Hollywood, Calif.

Gentlemen:

I must ask you to withdraw my name from your list of fifteen candidates for the Screen Writers' Guild board. I am, needless to say, wholly in sympathy with your efforts to achieve, if possible, a sane and responsible administration of Guild affairs.

I think you have selected an excellent ticket for that purpose. I joined the Guild to give you my support; and, believing that only in united action is success possible, I will, unless further compromises are made with the opposition, cast my vote for your ticket. But I cannot allow my name to be used.

After a long talk with one other of your candidates, I find myself completely at variance with him (and, I have every reason to believe, a majority of your ticket) on a matter of policy. He thinks I should resign from the Academy. I have no intention of resigning from the Academy. I know what the Academy has done, if he does not; I have sat on the board for more than six years and I intend to know.

The records of the Conciliation Committee, for one thing, are available to the curious; they will show that the Academy has collected thousands of dollars for writers that the writers would not otherwise have got.

Among those who now cry "Wolf!" the loudest, I know several who have reason to be grateful to the Academy and its complete fairness in all disputes involving writer and producer.

The Academy's Writer-Producer Code of Practice is the first document of its kind that the writers have ever been able to negotiate. Meager as it is, it does correct the evil of contingent compensation for free-lance writers. And it is only a beginning. Preliminary steps have already been taken to extend and amplify the Code's provisions until it will become eventually a comprehensive instrument protecting writers from all abuses.

A friend of the ticket—and I have the highest respect for him—cries, with fire in his eye: "The Academy must be destroyed!" I don't think so. He says it is "a company union." I say it is a constant check on the producers. The character of the men sitting in its councils as representatives of the four employe branches is my guarantee of that.

I deeply appreciate the inclusion of my name on your ticket. But I must insist that it be withdrawn, at once.

Your sincerely,
WALDEMAR YOUNG.

Bitter Sweet

New York.—Frank Morgan was yesterday elected vice-president of Angostura-Wupperman Corporation, American representative for Angostura bitters, of which his mother is president. Frank announces he will not abandon films, but expects to handle the bitters so well as a sideline that eventually all his Hollywood friends will be using bitters with their grapefruit.

Serious Changes Made By Free-Lance Group

Following is the statement of the freelances:

"The Free-lance Group of the Committee of Sponsors deeply regrets Mr. Waldemar Young's decision to withdraw from the list of candidates for the Executive Board of the Screen Writers' Guild at the coming election.

"We note that Mr. Young reached his decision after a conference with a self-styled supporter of this Committee's ticket. Later this politician turned out to be a henchman of the present Guild dictatorship, and is on the ticket which, if elected, will perpetuate methods which have provoked dissension and threatened the effectiveness of the Guild.

"By implication, if not more specifically, Mr. Young received a warning and threat from a representative of the present Board, to the effect that his time and efforts on behalf of the Guild would be nullified if he were elected to the new Board.

"We do not necessarily endorse any of Mr. Young's personal views, and if he feels that he cannot serve the Guild whole-heartedly, we agree that he should withdraw his name. But we are unalterably opposed to the policies of coercion, threat and intimidation and shall express that opposition by submitting a ticket to the Guild membership before the election."

Guild Members Stand Pat on Present Record

The statement of Miss Marion and Messers. Block and Pascal is chiefly noteworthy because it offers another complete slate to the members of the Guild which does not contain the name of John Natteford, the leader of the free-lance group. It reads:

"We believe in the policies of the present board of the Screen Writers' Guild, of which we are members. Our names have been included in an opposition ticket without our authority.

"Obviously we will not stand as nominees of any group professing to be opposed to the very policies we have helped to initiate.

"We believe the best interests of the Guild will be served by the re-election of the following members of the Board: Oliver H. P. Garrett, John Howard Lawson, Dudley Nichols, Gladys Lehman, Wells Root, Courtenay Terrett, Ernest Pascal, Frances Marion, Ralph Block, and the following names in addition: John Emerson, Brian Marlow, Seton I. Miller, Arthur Richman, Harlan Thompson, Tristram Tupper.

Rosy Wants Action On N.Y. Operators

New York.—Sol Rosenblatt's patience with the squabble between New York theatre owners and operators is about exhausted. Yesterday he announced that he would appoint a new board of representative theatre owners and operators, regardless of organization affiliations, and let this board settle the wage and hour scale.

Rosenblatt refuses personally to recede from the position set down in the code, which declares for the scale "that existed on August 23, 1933."

O'Brien-Cagney Teamed

Warners will team Pat O'Brien with James Cagney in an original screen play by Ben Markson, "Hey, Sailor." No director or additional cast has been assigned as yet.

Nat Levine Lists 20 Features Next Year

New York.—Long king of the serial producers in the indie ranks, Nat Levine announces feature production on a big scale for next year. In addition to his four serials, twenty features will be produced.

The features will be divided into three groups—exploitation specials, modern western dramas and action melodramas.

Three of the serials are announced: "Lost Jungle," "Burn 'Em Up Barnes" and "Law of the Wild."

Morris Due Tomorrow

Chester Morris gets in tomorrow from New York to start work in "The Practical Joker," which Edward Laemmle directs for Universal. Morris was East six weeks, working in "Frankie and Johnnie" opposite Lilyan Tashman.

Dumbrille at MGM

MGM has set Douglas Dumbrille for a featured role in "Treasure Island." Warners, meanwhile, have registered a bid for his services.

Lovett with Fox

Josephine Lovett has been signed by Fox on a one-picture deal to write the screen adaptation on "She Was a Lady," a recently purchased novel.

DU PONT MAY BUY COL.

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•AT the time this publication announced its Awards of Merit balloting, it was our impression that this function, which had been taken care of by the Academy since its inception, was going to be passed up by that body, due to one thing or another.

It was our desire to keep the fires burning under this annual honor for the men and women selected by their fellow-workers as the "best" in their line. And that, and only that, was the reason we stuck our nose in, but once it was in, we could not pull it out.

We had no desire then, nor do we have now any intention of crabbing this Academy function, but once we started, we had to go through with it. Accordingly, the results of the Reporter balloting will be announced in this paper tomorrow. The privilege of voting closes tonight at 6 p.m. and the count will be made in this office.

Certainly there will be surprises and disappointments. There are bound to be, but we assure you that our count will be THE results of the ballots that were sent in and these ballots will be held in this office for a period of a month, subject to the inspection of ANYONE in this industry who may wish to test their authenticity and the correct tabulation.

The voting was thrown open to the entire production industry, with all voters privileged to vote for the best picture of the year and for the best achievement in his or her class during 1933.

We appreciate the expressions of approval we have received both from prominent creators and from workers in the ranks for this method of determining outstanding achievement and allowing ALL within the industry to say their say and mark their ballot. Without in any way detracting from the importance of the Academy awards, it is certain that an all-embracing democratic contest such as this, also has its definite place and value.

As a token of recognition to the winners, we have caused to be made The Hollywood Reporter Award of Merit medals. One will be presented to the winner in each class, and the presentation will be made Friday.

Theatre Prices Rising

Tilting the admission scale at the Paramount Theatre ten cents starting Thursday, Marco becomes the first operator to revise ticket prices upwards since a year ago when cuts went into effect. Indications are that Warners and Loews State will follow suit next week.

Basic Labor Pact Renewed for 2 Yrs.

The Basic Agreement between the major picture producers and the unions was renewed yesterday, with the significant omission of the IATSE unions in the pacts.

Pat Casey, chairman of the producers' labor committee, signed the agreements for a two-year term with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, United Brotherhood of Carpenters, American Federation of Musicians, International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Sound men and electrical workers come under the IBEW banner, while cameramen are covered by a separate agreement with the ASC, leaving the IATSE out in the cold. International President Elliott of the IATSE is now on his way to Washington.

Barrymore Returns; MGM Comics Leaving

N. Y. Rumors Deal That May Transfer Control To The Du Pont-Pathe Interests

New York.—The latest along the "street" in connection with the desire of the DuPont-Pathe crowd to break into production and distribution centers around the yarn that they have made a strong bid for the control of Columbia Pictures with better than a 50 per cent edge that the bid will be accepted.

Much credence is given to this new angle due to the fact that the present ownership, the control of which is vested in Harry and Jack Cohn, is rumored in for a very serious stockholder

Saal-Kelly To Do Consol's 12 Films

New York.—The new plans of Consolidated Laboratories in its operation of Biograph studio will reach the point of signing a deal this week with the outfit which will produce twelve pictures slated for a new state rights franchise group.

Jones-McNutt Signed On New Para. Contract

Before Grover Jones left Hollywood Monday night on a six week's vacation in Europe, Paramount signed him and William Slavens McNutt for another year, although their present contract has not yet expired.

The team just completed the script of "52 Weeks for Florette." The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Hepburn-Cukor As 'Joan of Arc' Team

Radio made another bid for big grosses yesterday when it signed George Cukor to direct Katherine Hepburn in "Joan of Arc," thus re-uniting the team that made such a hit with "Little Women." This will be the first time anyone has attempted this subject since Paramount made it with Geraldine Farrar.

Thornton Wilder, author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," has been signed by Radio to sit in on the treatment of the story. He arrives this week, having been set by Edington-Vincent.

Nat Finston Offers Resignation Again

Nat Finston, who has been with Paramount for the past nine years, has again tendered his resignation as musical director to Emanuel Cohen, production chief, and is awaiting the studio's decision.

Finston tendered his resignation five months ago because he was dissatisfied with conditions, but the studio would not accept it at that time.

RAMBLING REPORTER

Give Johnny Weismuller a hand—for his courage and nerve in actually riding a rhinoceros through a scene for "Tarzan" the other day—after the company had practically given up hope of getting the shot any other way. What's more, animal and circus men around the place say they've never heard of the stunt being attempted before. P.S.—Johnny got away without a scratch, but not without a lot of hand-shakes from the crew. Oh, well, this has probably made the news features by now. . . . Virginia Gilbert had a big pow-wow with her lawyers yesterday. . . . Phil Regan, Warners' singing cop-actor, who's been going places with Marie Marks, says he's still true to his gal in Brooklyn.

Harry Cohn has a new desk that is bigger than all outdoors—equipped with radio, victrola, cooking apparatus, swinging doors and charm. . . . The Freddy Marches down at La Quinta for two weeks' siesta; so are Pat Paterson and bridegroom Charles Boyer—while the George Fitzmaurices, the George Archainbauds, Henry King, Ketti Gallian week-ended there. . . . Tullio Carminati back in town at the Beverly Wilshire. . . . Liz Dupont also esconced there. . . . Rouben Mamoulian home again, too. . . . Eleanor Hunt has changed her mind about divorcing Dr. Frank Nolan—and they're cooing again.

As predicted in these pages, the veree pretty Louis Henry, fresh from two finishing schools, has been signed to a long contract by MGM. . . . Eddie Lowe, over a flu attack, is personal appearancing in Chicago—while Lil Tashman still toils in New York. . . . Everybody tickled to see Eddie Sutherland up and around again—Eddie, with Monte Brice and Marie Hammans, dining at the Vendome on his "first night out." . . . Kay Francis' fan mail has jumped over two hundred letters a week since "The House on Fifty-sixth Street." . . . The Lionel Barrymores back in Hollywood. . . . What famous star is learning, too late, that you can't boss everybody? Her present husband just won't take it!

New York REVIEWS

"HEAT LIGHTNING"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, Mervyn LeRoy; writers, Leon Abrams, George Abbott, Brown Holmes, Warren Duff.

Rialto Theatre

News: The picture is padded and allowed to sag badly in spots. The acting of the cast is adequate, but the story which they perform is decidedly second-rate.

Times: Drab melodrama with occasional flashes of forced comedy. Does not offer Miss MacMahon the opportunity she deserves.

Herald-Tribune: Just another routine effort, neither better nor worse than the average film. The adaptation lacked spice, and the dialog the sharp edge of the original.

Sun: There is drama in "Heat Lightning" and a suspense shrewdly built up by the competent Mr. LeRoy. Warners, I think, will find better material than this for Miss MacMahon.

American: At best, it's run-of-cargo program fare.

Mirror: A compact, forceful and fairly entertaining play, "Heat Lightning," nevertheless, is not quite suited to Aline MacMahon. Her performance is true, sensitive and stirring.

Post: "Heat Lightning" leaves you with an impression that nothing of importance has happened, an impression that might be induced by the fact that a sketchy and superficial play has been sketchily transcribed to the screen.

Journal: The picture emerges as a pleasant little melodrama, nicely played by a competent cast.

World-Telegram: In theory, this ought to spell engrossing, exciting entertainment. In practice, it spells an ambling, haphazard, slow-grinding film that is hardly suitable to the more rigid demands of Broadway standards.

Big Names Rally To Dickstein's Aid

Washington.—A statement was given out at Representative Dickstein's office yesterday that hundreds of letters had been received supporting his bill to bar alien actors. Among some of the people said to have favored the measure are Irvin S. Cobb, Fred Stone, William Gaxton, Clark and McCullough, Frank Crumit, Fritzi Scheff, Pat Rooney David Warfield and the Friars Club as a body.

It is noticeable that the actor support seems to come entirely from the stage, there being no announcements of support from Hollywood.

Waldemar Young on Screen Play of 'R.U.R.'

Paramount has revived interest in the Capek play, "R.U.R.," with Waldemar Young going to work on a screen play for the picture which was last dropped when Rouben Mamoulian left the company.

The robot play is to serve as a vehicle for either George Raft or Herbert Marshall, pending the final decision on the story treatment.

Stage Actress to 'U'

Alexandra Carlisle, New York stage actress, was signed by Universal for a featured role opposite Berton Churchill in "Alias the Deacon," which Edmund Grainger is producing. Edington-Vincent office made the deal.

Cain Seeks Atmosphere

James M. Cain has gone to Arizona to get local color for "The Duchess of Delmonico's," which he is scripting for MGM. He will be back in about a week.

'Old Maestro' Here

Ben Bernie and his orchestra arrived in town yesterday, reporting at Paramount for featured billing in "The Great Magoo."

Rian James Gets His Release from Warners

Rian James obtained his release yesterday from his Warner contract, after efforts to do so for several months. He had seven more months to go before the expiration.

James leaves tomorrow night for New York to make arrangements with his publisher for his latest novel.

Junior Durkin Set

Junior Durkin, who recently returned from New York, where he appeared in "Growing Pains," will have the leading role in the stage play, "Thirty Thousand to Go," which opens March 29 at Lela E. Rogers' Hollytown theatre.

Grievance Board: C. H. Meuhlman, of Warners, national distributor, unaffiliated; Barney Rose, of Universal, national distributor, unaffiliated; Aaron Goldberg, exhibitor unaffiliated; Cliff Work, RKO, exhibitor affiliated; A. C. Scales, member of the Chamber of Commerce, impartial member.

Hollywood Reporter:

Will you please correct a misstatement published by you last Saturday in which you say that I am a candidate for office in the Screen Writers' Guild on a so-called Liberal ticket? My name was used without my knowledge or consent. I believe that the interests of the Guild can best be served by re-electing, with one or two exceptions, the present executive board.

Bob Vignola to Direct Darmour's 'Scarlet Letter'

Larry Darmour, planning to go to the $100,000 mark on his independent production of "The Scarlet Letter," has closed for Robert Vignola, who recently staged a directorial comeback with a Monogram picture, to direct the Nathaniel Hawthorne classic.

Leonard Fields and David Silverstein are doing the script.

Lowell Sherman Goes To the Desert for Cure

Lowell Sherman is in the desert trying to clear up his throat so that he may play the lead and direct "The Human Side" for Universal. Eddie Buzzell has been slated to direct the Christine Ames play, but the studio has held up the start, due to casting difficulties.

FOX 'EVER SINCE EVE' POOR BREAK FOR GEORGE O'BRIEN

Star Is Miscast in Mediocre Story

"EVER SINCE EVE"
Fox

Director .....George Marshall
Screen Play.....Henry Johnson and Stuart Anthony
Photography .....Arthur Miller
Cast: George O'Brien, Mary Brian, Herbert Mundin, Betty Blythe, Roger Imhof and Russell Simpson.

George O'Brien strays away from the horse operas—and not with startling actress—in "Ever Since Eve."

It isn't entirely his fault however. The story itself is so old and hoary that, no matter how it is dressed up, the audience is always about ten jumps ahead of the dialogue and action.

Herbert Mundin, Roger Imhoff and Russell Simpson do a lot toward throwing out comedy life-lines when the picture shows signs of sinking, but not even their combined efforts could save it.

It's the story of a millionaire miner (George O'Brien) who marries a society girl (Mary Brian) and discovers on their honeymoon that she had married him just for his money. And then, of course, when she really does fall in love with him, he won't believe it and goes away to China in a huff.

But comes the baby—and everything is fixed up hunky-dory.

O'Brien is ill at ease in the role, and Mary Brian is sweet, but fails to give much strength to her part. Betty Blythe is never quite certain what kind of a character the mother should be.

George Marshall's direction is weak in spots, amusing in others. Henry Johnson and Stuart Anthony wrote the story, and Arthur Miller photographed it well.

The film needs consistent cutting. O'Brien's delirium scene is quite bad. The picture will not do at all for metropolitan centers, but might get by in the outskirts, to a mild extent.

Hersholt on 7-Year New MGM Contract

Off salary for three days, Jean Hersholt got a new MGM long term contract for seven years, his old termer having run its course.

'House of Rothschild' Tops New York's New Pictures

New York.—"House of Rothschild" opening today at the Astor, with a two dollar top and brisk agency business, over-shadows the other picture debuts of the week.

'False Dreams' in Unique Plag. Suit

New York.—"False Dreams, Farewell" is a nightmare as far as buying its picture rights is concerned. Radio has just let an option drop because of an argument of playwrights over the vehicle.

Samuel Warshawsky served notice that the play was an infringement on his own work, "The Fastest Thing Afloat," when the pic negotiations were the hottest. That stopped everything for awhile. Then Hugh Stange, author of "False Dreams," brought suit against Warshawsky to restrain the latter from contending the play was stolen. He asks $56,250 damages of which $6,250 is said to be Stange's share of the pic rights.

And meanwhile the pic company has faded from the picture.

Other officers elected were: J. LeRoy Johnston and Carlisle L. Jones, vice-presidents; Wilson Heller, secretary; John P. Miles, treasurer, and Bert Dorris, sergeant-at-arms. Harry Brand, Dick Hunt, Thornton Sargeant, Maxwell Shane and Ed Thomas were elected to the Board of Directors.

Schayer Comments On Writer Tangle

The statement by Ralph Block, Ernest Pascal and Frances Marion that they "withdrew" from the Liberal ticket brought a reply from the Liberals that "there was nothing to withdraw from." Richard Schayer expressed the Liberal view as follows:

"We have merely suggested a list of names, and asked the members of the Guild to vote for them. We have as much right to ask the members to vote for Block, Pascal and Marion as we have to ask their support for any other members, unless these members wish to announce that they are withdrawing entirely from the election and do not wish any of the members, Liberal or otherwise, to vote for them."

Small Industry Board Will Meet Tomorrow

Washington. — Clarence Darrow announced yesterday that the first public hearing of the Small Industry Appeal Board will be held tomorrow.

Russ Brown in 'Humbug'

First trick for Russ Brown since the expiration of his term ticket with Twentieth Century will be a featured spot in "Humbug" which Max Marcin is directing for Universal. Bill Woolfenden of the Small-Landau office set the contract.

Stavisky Yarn in Work

New York.—Moe Wax and Ronald Bank are preparing a scenario based on the Stavisky scandal in France, which brought about the overthrow of the Ministry and the recent riots.

DuPont May Buy Col.

cisco Boards follows: Clearance: G. C. suit for an accounting of the profits of the company since its shares have been offered for sale on the stock exchange. The wise boys figure that bidders from DuPont-Pathe have picked a soft time for any offer that may hold the least attraction.

Additional credence is offered through the knowledge that both Harry and Jack are constantly at odds over the management of the company and its production and that the injection of Nate Spingold into the company by the brothers in an effort to act as a go-between, has proven a flop, that being an impossible task for even that past master in salving the injured feelings. The desire of Harry to use London as a Columbia production center and the results of his first effort ("The Lady Is Willing") did little to help the situation.

Columbia is rated the greatest money-maker in pictures for the amount invested and although there has been talk of deals that would tend to transfer control ever since Joe Brandt sold his interest, and the family feud started between Harry and Jack, nothing has come of it and that may be the case with this present talk .

New York REVIEWS

"SPITFIRE"

RKO-Radio prod.; director, John Cromwell; writers, Lulu Vollmer, Jane Murfin.
Music Hall

News: The film moves very slowly at first, but it gains in speed and interest as the story develops. Hepburn's characterization is interesting, although it isn't always convincing.

Times: As the dominating figure of "Spitfire," the current cinematic offering at the Radio City Music Hall, Katharine Hepburn gives another talented screen portrayal. Without Miss Hepburn's vital and persuasive acting, the story would be a depressing and colorless affair.

Herald-Tribune: Miss Hepburn is as striking a screen actress as those of us who have always admired her have insisted. "Spitfire" is in reality a character study, rather than a drama of action, and Miss Hepburn is on the screen almost constantly. It is entirely her picture and, although it is far from worthy of her, it is excellent evidence against her detractors.

Sun: Technically "Spitfire" is below average. The photography, even with such an excellent photographic subject as Miss Hepburn, is flat and lifeless. There's too much of the studio about those mountain-cabin sets, even most of the outdoor scenes. The script, although it deals with a mob out for lynching, is singularly lacking in suspense. "Spitfire," I'm afraid, is just one of those pictures that didn't jell.

American: The entertainment of the drama centers entirely in Miss Hepburn's characterization. And this is a thing of pristine beauty, lyric tenderness, fired with the flame of genius. Miss Hepburn is pretty definitely foremost among American dramatic artists in the cinema. In "Spitfire" she holds the screen alone in an amazing histrionic tour de force.

Mirror: While having none of the prettiness, dressiness and superficial glamor of the previous Hepburn films, "Spitfire" has a substantial dramatic quality, a real fire, vigor and punch which permits Miss Hepburn to establish herself as an actress. You will be thrilled and deeply stirred by "Spitfire." Don't miss it.

Post: Miss Hepburn's attempt to convey the outward and inner conflict of the girl is hampered somewhat by the failure of the picture as a whole to capture the quality and mood of the setting, but it is hampered still more by her own inability to cope with the subtleties of the role. With all its potentialities, "Spitfire" is a dull and undistinguished production.

Journal: The role a contradiction of moods, and Miss Hepburn brings to them all an exuberant sincerity.

World-Telegram: It is Miss Hepburn and Miss Hepburn alone, with her ever dependable playing, who manages to make this "Spitfire" possibly satisfying entertainment.

CENSORSHIP DENOUNCED BY U. C. L. A. PROFESSOR

Says Stars' Private Lives Own Business

"Censorship is always negative and is generally placed in the hands of people totally incapable of saying anything except 'don't do that.' "

"The private lives of motion picture stars are none of the public's business, and they should be measured by their productions rather than by their personal affairs."

These two statements caused something of a sensation yesterday when they were made by Dr. Frederic P. Woellner, Associate Professor of Education at the University of California in Los Angeles, before 500 Daughters of the American Revolution at the Ambassador Hotel.

Dr. Woellner spoke at the motion picture luncheon, which was the first social event of the state conference of the D.A.R. His remarks were especially well received by the picture personalities present, who included Ann Harding, Robert Montgomery, Kathryn Williams, Katherine deMille, Raul Roulien, Mrs. T. G. Winter and Miss Ryllis Hemington.

Following his statement that censorship is always negative, Dr. Woellner said:

"In theory, censorship has its virtues, but the best of theories go awry when placed in the hands of fools.

"Not censorship, but enlightened public opinion, is the solution. This new art of the motion picture is a combination of all the arts; a medium of tremendous influence. Why not place courses in our schools? Teach our children the drama, its literary values, the technic of the motion picture. This will bring enlightened public opinion that is the best censorship."

As for the lives of stars, Dr. Woellner declared: "The important thing to consider is what effect the star has on the public. I would rather have a man who is bad in private life, but who has a tremendous effect for public good, than a man who is privately good, but who has a tremendous public effect for the bad."

Creel May Ask For Labor Board Shifts

Following the two-day investigation of why the various code committeees have not acted upon 107 complaints of alleged code violations by the studios, George Creel, State NRA Administrator, left town last night.

Through the publicity bureau of the local Labor Compliance Office, where the hearings were held, he announced that he had no statement to make relative to his findings in the investigation. However, it was reported, unofficially, that he will render a complete written report to Sol A. Rosenblatt. And while it could not be verified, there were rumblings about town that his report will recommend several changes in faces of the committees.

Meanwhile, Judge Ben Lindsey, special Labor Compliance officer, is expected to start today to hear the 107 complaints of alleged film code violations that labor asserts have been made by the studios.

Free Lance Writers To Name Own Slate

Thrown together by problems affecting them only, the free lance writers of the Screen Writers' Guild have formed a solid body, splitting away from the remaining factions on the coming election of officers, Apr. 5.

It was authoritatively reported yesterday that this group is in a huddle to chalk up its own slate and will seek a coalition with the liberal faction if an agreement on candidates is reached. Group controls an estimated twenty per cent of the Guild's vote and is headed by John Natteford, the representative on the present board.

Controversy as to the use of the Guild mailing list was settled yesterday when Ralph Block threw the list open to all factions electioneering.

LAUGHTON, HEPBURN, CAPRA CAPTURE REPORTER AWARDS

Sturges and Riskin Win for the Writers

dialogue by Lajos Biro and Arthur Wimperis; scenario by Arthur Wimperis; cameraman, George Perinal; editorial supervision, Hal Young.

Capra Director Winner

Frank Capra received the votes of his fellow directors in such volume as to prove an easy winner of the award for the year's most outstanding work of direction—the palm being given him for "Lady For a Day." In this classification, "Little Women" popped up again, with George Cukor ranking second for his work on that picture, while Gregory LaCava is in third place because of "Gabriel Over the White House."

Hepburn-Laughton Honored

The international touch given the Reporter Awards by the inclusion of "Henry VIII" in the honored first three pictures, is clinched when we come to the votes of actors for the outstanding performance by one of their fellows. Charles Laughton wins hands down for his characterization of the King.

Coming second and third, and both well represented in the voting, are Spencer Tracy and Paul Muni.

Katharine Hepburn and May Robson staged a close race for the award among the actresses, the lead changing almost daily since the start of the voting, with Miss Hepburn finally emerging the winner. Third place was taken with a goodly representation of votes by Mae West.

Sturges-Riskin Tops

The writers, registering the heaviest vote as a class in the contest, with a fine exhibition of professional broadmindedness, gave an outstanding lead to Preston Sturges, for the Original Story Award because of "The Power and the Glory," Lasky-Fox production. In second and third places were Robert Lord, for "One Way Passage," and Edwin Justus Mayer and Rowland V. Lee for "I Am Suzanne."

"Lady For a Day," having already earned its director an award for his work, also comes to the front to put Robert Riskin in the top spot for the best adaptation of the year. Only one vote apart, the second and third places in this classification were taken respectively by Sarah Y. Mason and Victor Heerman for the adaptation of "Little Women," and Ben Hecht for "Design For Living."

Charles Lang, Paramount ace, forged to the front and emerged winner in a spirited race among the cinematographers, taking the award for his work on "Farewell To Arms." Lee Garmes, for his work on "Zoo in Budapest" dropped into the second niche, with Victor Milner close behind because of "Song of Songs."

The MGM production, "When Ladies Meet," brought the laurels of victory to Cedric Gibbons in the votes of his fellow Art Directors, and in this class a tie resulted for second place, "Little Women" and "Cradle Song" coming under the wire neck and neck. Art direction on "Little Women" was by Van Nest Polglase and on "Cradle Song" by Hans Dreier and W. B. Ihnen.

Beautiful gold plaques, emblematic of victory in the First Hollywood Reporter Awards of Merit Contest, will be presented to the winners tomorrow.

That's Putting the Writer in His Place

At the opening of the Warner Brothers' production of "Wonder Bar" last night at Warners' Hollywood Theatre, Dick Powell, master of ceremonies, introduced from the stage practically every person who had anything to do with making the picture EXCEPT EARL BALDWIN, who did nothing except adapt the story and write the screen play and who was in the audience.

Gene Raymond Set For 'Sadie McKee'

MGM and Gene Raymond finally got together on a deal for Raymond to play the role of the crooner in the Joan Crawford picture, "Sadie McKee," which Clarence Brown is directing.

Raymond turned down the role several times, but finally agreed to do it after the studio promised changes in the script. The deal was made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

'U' Wants Peggy Wood For 'The Human Side'

Universal is talking to Peggy Wood to take the top spot with Lowell Sherman in "The Human Side."

Miss Wood has another picture to do for Fox, Sol Wurtzel bracketing her with John Boles in "My Lady's Dress."

Maizlish Promoted

Harry Maizlish, who has handled exploitation for Warner theatres locally, has been promoted to supervise exploitation for all the Warner West Coast exchanges. He will leave soon to take charge of selling "Wonder Bar" in the Pacific Northwest.

Fox Shows Profit

$1,410,793, comparing with a loss of $595,100 for the similar period the year previous.

Gross intake for the 39 weeks was $24,288,824, an increase of $4,058,-924.

Operations of Wesco and other subsidiaries are not included in this report, Fox advances to Wesco having been written down to $1. The report states that reserves have been set aside for any adjustments of values which may be required as a result of pending bankruptcy actions against subsidiaries of Wesco.

The investments and advances by Fox to affiliates amount to $16,623,-543.

Chase Bk. Unloading Starts New Rumors

New York.—Rumored plans of the Chase Bank to unload its Fox stock holdings by an exchange for General Theatre Equipment Corporation stock as soon as the latter's reorganization is complete have film men here wondering if this is the first step in clearing the way for a Fox-Radio merger, or merely due to the desire of Chase to wash its hands completely of picture producing and distribution.

General Theatres is a straight merchandising business, more in keeping with bank sponsorship.

Mona Lisa Theft Will Be Made by Warners

Darryl Zanuck's idea of two years ago, "Self Portrait," which is based on the filching of the Mona Lisa, is off the shelf at Warners and slated to star Ricardo Cortez and Bette Davis.

MGM Holds Segall

Program will be released locally over NBC at four and over the British Broadcasting System in England at midnight, their time.

THE REASON . . .

M. C. LEVEE

with the ART DIRECTORS

Willie Pogany has shrouded his special set effects work for Warner Brothers' "Dames" with a decided air of mystery. No one is allowed even to take a peek at what he is doing until he has the effects ready for the final okay of Busby Berkeley. Something very unusual, like the California weather, is expected.

Stanley Fleischer has been given the job of designing the sets for "Alias the Deacon" over at Universal. He set such a pace for himself in "I'll Tell the World" that many on the lot are watching with interest to see just what he will have to offer in this one.

Van Nest Polglase will be taking bows around the Radio lot today when he, and his fellows discover that "Little Women" won The Hollywood Reporter Award for being the outstanding production of 1933. He gets credit for the art direction on it.

Over at MGM, Cedric Gibbons will also be tipping the hat, for he gets the Reporter award for the best example of art direction for 1933. It was in "When Ladies Meet" that it appeared.

Hans Dreier and W. B. Ihnen at the Paramount lot, and Van Nest Polglase, ran a neck and neck tie for second place in this Award, with the Paramount "Cradle Song" and the Radio "Little Women."

The members of the Art Directors section of the Academy are planning to hold another one of those stag dinners very soon. The idea is to have one about every six weeks. The Academy Awards Competition and banquet have slowed up the plans a trifle, but as soon as it is over, they figure on doing it.

Robert Usher, an art director at Paramount for more than a year, arrived in town last Saturday from the South Seas where he has been staying on the island of Moorea for the past six months. Usher has been building himself a house down there and had planned an indefinite stay, but was called back by cable by the studio. His last work at Paramount was designing sets for "She Done Him Wrong" and "King of the Jungle."

Jack Okey is still getting fan mail intended for Jack Oakie, the actor, despite long attempts to set the world straight. He says he has never received any checks yet, however.

A representative of a group of Australian newspapers paid Al Herman and Van Nest Polgalse of Radio a real compliment the other day. She wanted to see just what the studio's idea of the Australian background for "Stingaree" would be. When she looked at a couple of sets she exclaimed that someone who had lived in Australia must have done them. Neither Herman nor Polglase know about this remark. So we pass it along to them.

Mountain Helps Seiler to Make Par

Lew Seiler is a candidate for the prize for the freakiest golf shot of the week. He drove into heavy rough on the eighth hole at Palm Springs and, in trying to get out, overshot the green. The ball hit the side of the mountain and bounced back to within inches of the cup. Lew says he always plays it that way.

EXHIBS AFTER RCA NOW

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•OUR hat is off and our hand outstretched to whoever did the newspaper campaign on "Palooka" that was used in New York and in the local papers. We assume it was Hal Horne and believe that Al Lichtman showed excellent judgment in giving his okay to such a collection of "ads."

This series on "Palooka" is effective because it is DIFFERENT. It has advertising intelligence, it has a theme that is bound to attract and cause comment and that, ladies and gentlemen, sells tickets.

The advertising of our pictures has gotten into a worse rut than the making of the pictures and with the combination of the two, there has been hell in this business. There has been no effort, save an occasional MGM and Warner splurge, to write "copy" that will attract readers. There has been no creation whatever to the ads or their makeup.

Maybe the "Palooka" campaign will inspire the others to greater effort; maybe the advertising departments, in New York, sensing the tickets that were sold through those newspaper "ads" will go out and have a try at selling. Yes, and still maybe.

We used to think that our advertising experts in this business wrote the copy, not to sell pictures, but to get the nod from their company heads (who for the most part, have no idea about advertising values) and to rib the advertising heads of other companies. But even that activity hit the doldrums to such an extent that the bosses are not nodding, nor are the authors getting a rise out of the competing office.

Good ad copy is almost as important as good pictures. One belongs to the other if both are to succeed and without that success—oh! well, what's the use?

Perhaps nothing hurt ad copy in recent years so much as the apparent feeling that so long as there was a sex pose in the illustration and a double meaning sex line for the head, the job was completed.

At least that's the way the newspaper theatrical pages began to look.

And we don't suppose it occured to anyone that with ALL the ad emphasis thrown the one way, regardless of the qualities of the picture itself, we were very often DRIVING AWAY from box offices some badly needed coin.

Labor Wins First Appeal on Wages

Washington.—The first labor dispute in the picture industry to reach Washington on appeal has resulted in a victory for labor.

In the fight of operators in St. Louis against eighteen houses, agreement was yesterday reached to reimburse the operators for the difference between the wages paid since September 1 and the wage scale as in force on August 23.

The agreement was reached in Sol Rosenblatt's office, the NRA playing no part other than as impartial observer.

'Invisible Man' Is Sensation in Paris

Following Suit Against Erpi For Excess Sound Charges, Rival Electric Now On Pan

New York.—With over two hundred New York exhibitors suing Erpi and asking refunds on alleged excessive charges for sound equipment servicing and replacement parts, it now seems that the rival company, General Electric, and its offspring, RCA Photophone, may be in for similar actions. Exhibitors using RCA are reported organizing for a single legal action which will parallel that of their fellow exhibs using Western Electric.

Exhibitors throughout the country are understood to be in close touch with the New York suits, the pros-

N. Y. Paramount Fights Capitol with Personals

Warners Plan to Make 'Babbitt' as Talkie

THE LOW DOWN

There's a fellow in town who is either going to get rich very quick or get kicked out! He arrived, via Sweden, carrying several reels of film for which the one and only Garbo posed before she was the one and only. The pictures were made by a big department store in Sweden for exploitation purposes there, and Greta's clothes and make-up of the period are nothing that either MGM or the star herself would want the dear old public to get a look at. Of course, the gather-upper of these pictures knows this and wants to sell them to the stujo, which may have to buy them for their nuisance-value. But, on the other hand, MGM and Garbo, with a bunch of lawyers, hope to thwart the enterprising young man by keeping these films out of the country on the ground that they were made for exploitation purposes in Sweden only.

A few weeks ago, during all the tareefic weather in the East, Mrs. Donald Ogden Stewart, who was actually snowbound in Westbury, Connecticut, called up Don, who was in Hollywood, to tell him that snowdrifts, THIS high, stood between her and the outside world.

"There's no coal in the house—no food—" she wept.

As her voice trailed off, Don (dear, sweet, sympathetic Don) chuckled, "Sorry, dear—but I have to go and play golf now."

P. S.—This story was NOT inspired by the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

A certain Broadway lass (who recently was released from a big studio) embarrassed her big boss before her walkout. Seems she had been under contract at this particular studio for some time before the head man discovered the fact. When he found out, he was not only pleased that she had been signed, but asked for an introduction. When they shook hands, he said he was very glad to meet her.

"MEET me?" exclaimed the gal, in front of other execs. "Why—we spent a week-end together in New York!" (!)

New York REVIEWS

"BEDSIDE"

Warner Bros. prod.; director, Robert Florey; writers, Manuel Seff, Harvey Thew, Lillie Hayward, James Wharton; photographer, Sid Hickox.

Mayfair Theatre

Times: Actually the story of "Bedside" is not quite as predictable a thing as it sounds, but its deviations from the formula are too wild-eyed to be classed as dramatic virtues. It is all pretty furious stuff, examined coldly.

Herald-Tribune: Unfortunately "Bedside" is a very bad picture. The story is so confusedly and ineffectively told that the film is completely lacking in any trace of dramatic value.

American: The material handicapping the players in the production does not make good motion picture entertainment. It fails to rise above mediocrity.

Mirror: "Bedside" might have been a choice comedy. Instead, the studio decided to be melodramatic and romantic, with a moral, an heroic heroine and a great crime. Even such reliable factors as these do not make "Bedside" convincing. It is a curious story and a pretty weak one.

Sun: Even a cast well stuffed with usually competent character actors couldn't do much for "Bedside." There isn't much to be said for it. It's plot is as preposterous as its picture of a physician's office is routine.

Post: It is a sordid tale, rendered somewhat less than plausible by a cheap and ill-devised plot in which the phoniness of the leading character is reflected in the acting and writing. The picture is full of technical flaws; it is a strained reaching for sensationalism.

Journal: Even to one whose only knowledge of and contact with the medical profession is an unpaid bill or two, the picture is a bit hard to believe. To a doctor it would no doubt seem more than just curious.

World-Telegram: Although the film is sincerely gallant in its efforts to expose this heinous practice, its pace is too ambling, its manner too theatrical, its situations too melodramatic and its characters too artificial to make for convincing or engrossing entertainment.

Rian James Signs 3-Way Ticket at 'U'

Before leaving last night for New York, Rian James signed a producing-writing-directing contract at Universal. His first picture will be the next Lee Tracy starring vehicle. The deal was made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

Clare Kummer to Para.

Marco and Skouras Split; Former Sues

The long association of Marco and the Skourases went on the rocks yesterday in a battle over theatre operation which was carried into court when Jules Goldstone, acting for the Capart Theatres, operated by Marco and Milton Arthur, obtained an injunction against Fox West Coast, restraining Skouras from using the Anaheim Theatre Corporation to the alleged disadvantage of Marco's theatre interests.

Superior Court Judge Collier granted the temporary restraining order, setting next Wednesday for the hearing.

Battle between Marco and Skouras broke out when the former claimed that Anaheim Theatres, of which he and Arthur own 49.9 per cent, was being used in opposition to his interests in Capart Theatres. Fox West Coast controls Anaheim with a 50.1 interest, Charles Buckley and Al Leeds being named in the complaint with Skouras. Anaheim operates a string of theatres in Orange county and Marco declares it unfair to have one company, partly owned by him, operating to the detriment of his wholly owned Capart.

Marco's injunction asks the court to prevent the Fox West Coast operators from going through with a proposal to transfer property in the Anaheim subsidiary to another newly formed corporation.

'MELODY IN SPRING' HITS; FOX 'HONEYMOON' POOR

Bouquets for Cast, Director and Yarn

"MELODY IN SPRING"
(Paramount)

Direction .....Norman McLeod
Story .....Frank Leon Smith
Adaptation .....Benn W. Levy
Art Directors.....Hans Dreier and Bernard Herzbrun
Photography .....Henry Sharp
Music by.....Lewis E. Gensler
Lyrics by.....Harlan Thompson
Cast: Lanny Ross, Charlie Ruggles, Mary Boland, Ann Sothern, George Meeker, Herman Bing, Norma Mitchell, Helen Lynd, and Joan, Jane and June Gale.

"Melody in Spring" is a light, engaging bit of fluff, flecked with glorious music and stiffened with brand new, infallible comedy.

The picture is as lyrical as its title and as refreshing as a cool breeze. There are no ponderous moments, no dramatic whys and wherefores, and nothing much for the audience to do except laugh and enjoy it.

The setting is charming—a small Swiss village at the foot of the Alps, famous for its musical cow-bells and its traditional milking song. There go Mr. and Mrs. Blodgett (Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland) and their daughter, Ann Sothern, the entire family pursued by Lanny Ross, who wants to win their cheeild and sing over the Blodgett hour on the radio.

Mr. Blodgett is the world's largest manufacturer of dog biscuits. Besides this, he is an inveterate collector of bed knobs, old signs, pieces of anything historical, and knick-knacks in general. He will even go to the extent of petty thievery to obtain a forbidden object. To him, it is Collecting. To the world, it is stealing, which is why Mr. Blodgett lands in jail so frequently.

It's all very amusing, especially when Lanny Ross gives him a few tips on snitching, and wins the daughter.

Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland bolster up their reputation of being a knock-out comedy team still more by their superb work in this picture. Lanny Ross' voice is beautiful. His acting will undoubtedly improve with time. Ann Sothern will be liked as Jane Blodgett; George Meeker does well with his role as her discarded fiance; Herman Bing is funny as the proprietor of the Swiss inn; Norma Mitchell makes a small part stand out as does Helen Lynd, and Joan, Jane and June Gale, triplets, are seen briefly.

Norman McLeod has given his direction a light, deft touch. Frank Leon Smith wrote the original amusing story, and Benn W. Levy did right by the adaptation. Hans Dreier and Bernard Herzbrun deserve cheers for their art direction, and Henry Sharp, photographer, comes in for his share of praise for the pictorial beauty of the picture. Lewis E. Gensler, who wrote the music, and Harlan Thompson, who wrote the lyrics, contributed plenty to the film.

Especially outstanding is the milking song number. And the audience applauded vigorously at the "Open Road" song.

The Ruggles-Boland setup, and enthusiastic word of mouth advertising, will bring in the cash customers, to say nothing of the Ross voice, which is swell.

Billing and Cohning

Six sheet billing on the current attraction at the Fairfax reads: "Jack Holt and Fay Wray in 'Once To Every Woman'." Holt's face appears in the picture in one scene and then it's only his likeness on an eight by ten publicity still. It's a Columbia picture.

Lindsey Will Hear Kicks in Groups

Because of the fact that so many of the complaints of alleged film code violations are of similar nature, Judge Ben Lindsey, NRA Labor Compliance Officer, took time out yesterday to classify the 107 cases he has on hand. He plans now to hear them in groups, and the probability is that he will not be ready to get under way until Monday morning.

He is anxious to get these cases disposed of as quickly as possible. That is why he is going to hear them in groups.

Unless the Judge changes his mind, the first cases to be heard will be those of extra players, who have deluged his office with complaints. With these out of the way the complaints of the various union groups will be taken up.

Milestone to Direct Smith Yarn for Col.

Harry Cohn yesterday concluded the deal for the purchase of the Wallace Smith novel, 'The Captain Hates the Sea," paying $15,000.

Lewis Milestone has abandoned all other story ideas temporarily and will direct this as his first picture for Columbia. A deal is on for Smith to write the screen adaptation of his novel.

Enfield in Brady Play

Hugh Enfield was yesterday signed by Alice Brady for her production of "Biography," opening April 2, replacing George Lewis, who was forced to withdraw to take a screen engagement.

New Novel for Warners

New York.—Warner Brothers have purchased "The Story of a Country Boy" as a Paul Muni possibility. The novel, by Dawn Towell, will be published next month by Farrar and Rinehart.

$5 Top on 'Rothschild'

New York.—It will be $5 top, unusual in the East, for the Palm Beach opening of "The House of Rothschild" on March 27. The Miami Beach opening is set for March 24.

Zasu Pitts High Spot of Picture

"THREE ON A HONEYMOON"
(Fox)

Direction .....James Tinling
Novel by.....Ishbel Ross
Screen Play....Raymond Van Sickle and E. T. Lowe, Jr.
Dialog .....George Wright
Photography.....Joseph Valentine and Arthur Arling
Dance Direction.....David Gould
Producer .....John Stone
Cast: Sally Eilers, Charles Starrett, Zasu Pitts, Henrietta Crosman, John Mack Brown, Irene Hervey, Howard Lally, Cornelius Keefe, Winn Shaw.

It seems too bad that such a fine actress as Zasu Pitts should have to carry the load in such a mediocre picture as this one. Zasu definitely saves the day for Fox with her incomparably fascinating personality and, while the audience lolled through a badly put together yarn, it woke up every time Zasu appeared and laughed tumultuously at her slightest gesture and even applauded her in spots.

The story is one in which the father of a young madcap girl, Sally Eilers, sends her on a cruise around the world to take some of her self-will out of her. She chases a handsome ship's officer who behaves like a cad. But, even though he insults her as often as he can, they are eventually brought together. Zasu also gets her man. Mixed up in it all is a dull blackmail plot, followed by a suicide, which could easily have been a murder, judging from the story two sequences previous. All in all, pretty bad.

Henrietta Crosman gives a finished and amusingly consistent characterization of an intelligent woman of the world. Miss Eilers looks conventionally pretty, but fails to be convincing, perhaps due to the story.

Stanley Corbett, Hurt On Set, Gravely Ill

Stanley Corbett was seriously injured in the last scene of Ken Maynard's "Doomed To Die" early Wednesday morning and taken to Universal's emergency hospital.

He contracted double pneumonia there and yesterday was removed to the Cedars of Lebanon hospital where his condition was reported as critical.

Bert Glennon at Fox

Bert Glennon, who recently finished the photography of "The Scarlet Empress," the Marlene Dietrich picture for Paramount, has been signed by Fox to handle the camera on "Grand Canary," which Irving Cummings will direct.

'Mr. Sweeney' Finishing

Edward Ludwig is now winding up the final sequences of Warners' "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," in which Charles Ruggles, Ann Dvorak, Eugene Pallette and Berton Churchill are featured.

YESTERDAY IN New York

By BURNEY

A publicity blurb sent out by Doubleday, Doran (book publishers) on Lois Montross, author of "The Perfect Pair" (which probably belongs in the Writers' Number) comments on the assertion of Lois "that she works easier and more diligently when her pet monkey sits by her typewriter." . . . This astounding piece of business, which does indeed make the lady and her pet a perfect pair, ought to put encouraging ideas into the heads of notable authors suffering from spring fever. . . . For instance, the suggestion—why not go down to the barn and sit down with pencil and pad amongst the pigs and chickens—or how about a visit to the lion house at the zoo!

Representative Dickstein's bill in Congress to bar alien actors, while well-intentioned, is raising the very dickens. . . . In New York, Emile Gauvreau writing an editorial believes that Dickstein's good intentions would be carried to a point of absurdity by empowering the Secretary of Labor to sit as sole judge of the genius and ability of foreign artists, since exceptions to the ban would only be made in cases of distinguished merit and ability. . . . Further, Gauvreau claims if such a law had always been in force, America would never have had the privilege of knowing such artists as Bernhardt, Modjeska, Sir Beerbohm Tree, Mme. Sorel, Evelyn Laye, Sir Henry Irving, George Arliss, Lynn Fontanne, Leslie Howard, Chaplin, Nazimova, Roland Young, Greta Garbo, Eva Le Gallienne and countless others. . . . In the picture industry Sam Goldwyn appears to be the only one to have spoken up in agreement . . . what have the others to say?

Rodolfo Acosta, pen and brush artist who formerly flattered the mugs of Brown Derby-ites in Hollywood, is now devoting his talents to The Merry-Go-Round in New York, one of the more novel and intriguing night spots. . . . Aiding and abetting him in novelty entertainment are Sue Hasting's excellent puppet show burlesques of Greta Garbo, Jimmy Durante, Mae West and Ed Wynn. . . . Interesting, the way in which Broadway picture houses are keeping close check on each other's business. . . . There has always been clocking of a sort between competing theatres, but it is down to such a fine point that at any given hour of the day the N. Y. Paramount Theatre can tell you how many people have gone into the Music Hall and vice versa.

Guthrie McClintic is taking bows for the general excellence of his production, "Yellow Jack," at the Martin Beck, and Joe Mielziner likewise for his technical achievement in projecting the play against one setting—employing light and shadow for the changing scenes—done in the best manner of the Greek Theatre. . . . Doug Jr. is said to be enjoying the distinction of being the only man in London to wear zipper pants.

Academy Banquet Tonight a Sell-out

Publicity directors and other studio representatives spent most of yesterday afternoon at the Academy offices, battling among themselves over the seating arrangements for tonight's Awards Banquet at the Ambassador.

In the past years Academy officials have arranged where the various guests should sit. There have always been plenty of squawks after the affair. This year someone hit on the idea of letting the studios have their own men do the arranging and take the yowls from those who always want to sit right up front.

The big problem yesterday was the fact that there were many more reservations than there will be chairs. Extra chairs have been added, but the telephone calls for more seats made the banquet officials feel sad.

Dorothy Dell Ill

Dorothy Dell, who is playing the lead in "Little Miss Marker" for the B. P. Schulberg unit at Paramount, has been confined to her home with laryngitis. The studio is shooting around her until she returns.

Yarn for Gloria Stuart

Carl Laemmle Jr. has purchased "Long Live The Queen," a French novel by Sada Lardin, and will adapt it as a starring vehicle for Gloria Stuart.

Adela Back to Para.

New York.—Adela Rogers St. John is on her way to California to report to Paramount on a writing ticket.

AGENTS MEET TO SOFTEN LABOR COMMISSION RULES

Representatives of ten leading agencies met with Attorney Ralph Blum yesterday to draw up a plan of defense against the drastic supervision proposed by the Labor Commission. A legal committee, headed by Austin Sherman, will present the findings Wednesday at the Commission's hearing.

The Blum group decided to work towards defense of the entire field, since every individual's business is at stake. The smaller agents are not being called in, although they will automatically benefit by any accomplishments of the group.

The meeting discussed a rough draft of proposed revisions in the Labor Commission's pending rules and regulations controlling agents' relations with their clients.

It is understood that a plan is up for the formation of an association of large offices, representing the bulk of the important artists. This will be outside of the dormant Artists Managers Association. It was pointed out that the Labor Commission emergency is welding the bigger agents into a single solid body demanding such an association.

Offices attending the meeting were William Morris Agency, Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney, M. C. Levee, Rebecca and Silton, Phil Berg, Frank and Dunlap, Selznick and Joyce, Collier and Wallis, Small-Landau, Harry Wurtzel.

Joan Blondell Cast For Role in 'Dames'

Warners yesterday assigned Joan Blondell to one of the leads in "Dames," which has Ruby Keeler and Dick Powell in the top spots.

Busby Berkeley has already started preparing the dance numbers and Archie Mayo will handle the dramatic sequences when he finishes "The Dark Tower" in two weeks.

Bette Davis Gets Lead

Warners yesterday assigned Bette Davis to the lead opposite Ricardo Cortez in "Beware of Imitations," the Carl Erickson story formerly called "Self Portrait." Patricia Ellis was set in a featured role. Robert Florey directs.

Gollomb at Columbia

Joseph Gollomb has completed his deal with Paramount and journeys over to Columbia on a writing contract which went through the William Morris office. Writer collaborated on "Murder at the Vanities," "Private Scandal" and a Bayard Veiller idea at Paramount.

New Agency Charter

Certificate of incorporation was issued yesterday to the Harry DeShon-Mace Naylor Agency, attorneys Conroy and Conroy putting it through.

Rothackers Abroad

New York.—W. R. Rothacker, accompanied by his wife and daughter, sailed for Europe last night.

Maybe Hiding

Warners did a lot of explaining to Earl Baldwin yesterday over forgetting he had something to do with "Wonder Bar" in the premiere introductions. It seems that no one knew that Earl was in the house.

Lasky Wants Evans For 'Grand Canary'

Jesse L. Lasky is negotiating with MGM for the loan of Madge Evans for the lead opposite Warner Baxter in "Grand Canary," which Irivng Cummings will direct.

Heather Angel, who was spotted in the role, has been taken out and will be given another assignment.

Mississippi River Story for Hornblow

Arthur Hornblow's next production following "Pursuit of Happiness" for Paramount, will be a story with a Mississippi River background, titled "Mississippi."

Henry Myers has been signed by the studio to develop an original story.

Code Authority Invited

TODAY'S FILM NEWS TODAY

OPEN FORUM

The Hollywood Reporter:

Have just finished reading "The Sad Saga of a Strike Breaker" which appeared in your "Open Forum"—March 9.

I would like to state publicly that, the newest recruits in the picture business have always been the source of "squawks." In the past, men like myself have spent a lifetime helping the picture business progress to its present magnitude. We took the lean with the fat,—without any crocodile tears, and were finally rewarded with jobs at the best of pay under good conditions. Our "investment" was paying dividends.

Then, sound entered this serene picture and brought in a new group of technicians whom we had to accept as being as necessary to the business as ourselves. They affiliated with our group,—a group who had gone through pioneering hardships, bound together by an OATH of allegiance.

A small group of these new recruits got into difficulty with one of the studios and promptly yelled for HELP—with capital letters! Five thousand men, like myself, with No Kick, had to leave good jobs that took us years to attain, on their account.

Contrary to appearances, we were not actuated by any disloyalty to our employers or the business we helped to create! We were satisfied with our share of the profits of the business and did not WANT to walk out! But,—we were bound by an OATH to stick to fellow craftsmen.

Errors of judgment have been committed by everyone in this business from the front office to the back yard but no veteran,—whether he be producer or prop man, stops to cry! I walked out and lost a good job,—my income now averaging $25 a week as compared to $125. So what?

"Sucker"? Maybe you're right! But,—I can't find myself sobbing over the "squawks" of a fellow who has not really added anything to the business. After all, he merely found himself a job in a business it took a lot of us considerable sweat and missing of meals to build.

The pioneers and veterans in pictures,—producers, extras, prop men, etc.—could engulf him in tears if we wanted to recount "tough" breaks and sing the blues.

So,—give the boy a "hankie" or a time-table and have it "Quiet!" so we can go ahead and and shoot!

Furthermore, you don't have to WITHHOLD the signature of one who is still glad he's in the picture business after 15 years experience as unit-manager, assistant director, prop man and what have you.

Sincerely,
ROBERT (BOB) WEBB.

Signing the contracts yesterday through the Edington and Vincent office, Universal granted Henry Hull the right to continue with "Tobacco Road" in New York for the run of the play instead of bringing him out immediately.

Kelly-Dinehart at 'U'

Universal yesterday signed Paul Kelly and Alan Dinehart for featured roles in "The Humbug," which Max Marcin is directing.

'HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD' DRAWS CHORUS OF RAVES

New York.—The local newspaper critics dusted off the dictionaries and began looking for adjectives when they started writing their reviews of Twentieth Century's "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss.

It has been a long time since the critics have so universally agreed on a picture. They have tabbed it as simply great and advise their readers to go to see it. Some excerpts from reviews follow:

Mordant Hall, Times: George Arliss outshines any performance he has contributed to the screen.

Rose Pelswick, Evening Journal: Timely, brilliant and filmed with magnificent dignity . . . written and directed with intelligence and taste . . . George Arliss gives the finest performance he has yet contributed to the screen."

Kate Cameron, Daily News: Four stars . . . George Arliss has never equalled his playing of the double role in Twentieth Century's most elaborate production.

Regina Crewe, American: The rise of the Rothschilds is pictured with glamorous beauty and stirring drama in this latest and greatest contribution of George Arliss to the cinema. . . . A tower of entertainment.

Daily Mirror: This brave picture is the most impressive film the great Arliss ever made.

Richard Watts, Herald-Tribune: A vigorous and arresting hymn of praise to a valiant family.

Cameramen See ASC-Union Peace

Some cameramen are figuring that there may be more than mere talk to the rumor that there is a plan afoot for a cooperating agreement between the ASC and Local 659, IATSE. They base their guess on the fact that one of the first men to be placed in a camera berth by the new ASC agency is a member of the board of executives of the union.

'Practical Joker' Goes Into Work at Warners

Edward Laemmle puts "Practical Joker," a Stanley Bergerman production, into work today at Universal, with Chester Morris and Marian Nixon in the leads.

Ann Dvorak Set

Ann Dvorak replaced Margaret Lindsay as the feminine lead opposite Richard Barthelmess in "The Old Doll's House," which went into work yesterday at Warners with Alan Crosland directing. Miss Lindsay has not yet recovered sufficiently from her recent operation to return to work.

D'Arcy Up for Old Role

Roy D'Arcy, original heavy in the silent version of "The Merry Widow," is up for the Lubtisch-Chevalier edition at MGM with the possibility he will re-enact his old role.

Nothing much to rave over in the April Hollywood, but some of the stories are quite good.

Read "Is Suocess Ruining Hepburn?" by Ruth Biery; "You Don't Know Bill Gargan," by Clark Warren; "Peg Runs Away," (Margaret Sullavan) by Jerry Lane, and "Laughing Lady" (Colleen Moore) by Maude Chatham.

Other stories are "The Women In My Life," by Bing Crosby; "The Man Who Died," by J. Eugene Chrisman, an interesting account of Edward G. The April Motion Picture holds up this magazine's reputation for having good, new stuff in it that isn't spread through all the other ones.

"You Can't Kill Those Rumors," by Whitney Williams, has a lot of laughs in it; Helen Hays is original in "Movies Have Done More For Me Than The Stage," by Julia Chandler; Clark Gable offers something to think about in "Movie Acting Is The Easiest Job In the World," by Gladys Hall; the same author writes a dramatic story about Sylvia Sidney this month in her "Untold Secrets of the Stars" series; and Eric L. Ergenbright has a distinctly new yarn in "Why Don't YOU Go To The Movies More Often?"

Dorothy Donnell writes "Sex Appeal—and the Clothes You Wear," a swell Spring feature; Sonia Lee has "You Don't Need Beauty toi Be a Star"; Winifred Aydelotte rounds up society in "Hollywood Goes High-Hat"; Sara Haardt, who is Mrs. H. L. Mencken, writes "Hollywood Stars Have Their Hobbies"; Jerry Lane tells "At Last—the Truth About Warner Baxter's Private Life," and Lee Townsend wanders over the various lots making predictions in "Newcomers Today—Stars Tomorrow?"

MOVIE MIRROR

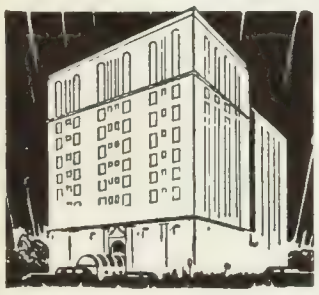
COVER DISPLAY.....Joan Blondell (Warners)



Movie Mirror, the only film magazine edited from Hollywood, warrants the experiment. The April number is swell. Good stories, good writers, good make-up.

"And That's How Talkies Are Born," by Arthur Kober, is slyly amusing; Nina Wilcox Putnam's "Glenda Farrell's Hidden Romance," and Faith Baldwin's "Hollywood's Loneliest People," are both movingly written; Virginia Bruce tells Jerry Asher "Why Our Marriage Failed," and is extremely fair about it; Leslie Howard offers "Doug Jr. As I Know Him"; Gladys Hall takes a pretty thin idea and makes a good story out of it in "Forbidden Loves of Hollywood"; Mary Sharon has a good yarn, "Clark Gable Tells About The Greatest Thing In Life"; Virginia T. Lane writes about "Janet Gaynor's Great Friendship," (Margaret Lindsay) and Sonia Lee has "What Jean Parker Taught Mary Carlisle," in which Miss Carlisle talks quite a bit and earnestly, too.

Marquis Busby's "Wha'd'ya Mean, BIG TOWN!" is amusing. Muriel Babcock tells about Lewis Stone in "Romantic at Fifty"; Jack Jamison interviews Gene Raymond in "A Gentleman of the Old School"; George Madden offers "Bing Crosby and Richard Arlen Tell On Each Other," which is old stuff now; and Dorothy Emerson contributes a fictionization of "Laughing Boy."

15 of 26 Paris Houses Show American Pix

Paris.—American pictures are greatly in the ascendency in Paris, 15 out of the 26 first-run theatres showing films from the United States. Of the others, six are showing French pictures, two have English and two have French-German.

Laura LaPlante and Ian Hunter As Team

London.—"Church Mouse," which, as a play, was presented by Gerald du Maurier some time ago, is to be made as a picture at Warners' Teddington studio, with Laura LaPlante and Ian Hunter in the leads. Monty Banks will direct.

Following this, Ralph Ince will direct and play in a screen version of "No Escape," from a screen play by Scott Darling.

Italian Firm Building New Studio at Milan

It is anticipated that there will be a close affiliation between the new studio and the producers in Germany.

It will tell the history of the French people from 1789 to the present time.

Short-Reel Theatres Successful in Sweden

Stockholm. — The movement towards short-reel theatres, similar to the American newsreel houses, is spreading all over Sweden. Already many theatres are operating with this policy and all seem to be successful.

Stockholm. — Eric Hultman, for years in the Swedish film trade, has been appointed manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office here.

Vincent Korda, of London Films, and L. P. Williams, of B and D, are turning out some lovely art directorial jobs; British producers beginning to realize that sumptuous settings often help the production value of a fillyum. . . . Dutch Strong for American Films

Washington. — American motion picture films made notable progress in the Netherlands during the last year, according to Vice Consul W. M. Chase, at Amsterdam. Although a part of the popularity of American films was due to the restriction on German motion pictures, the releasing of a number of American pictures which greatly appealed to the Dutch public was a potent factor.

There are approximately 310 motion picture theatres in the Netherlands, of which 246 have been wired for sound. Two new theatres were opened in Amsterdam during the past year, one in The Hague and one in Schiedam.

Only American and German feature pictures have been shown in the Netherlands in any large numbers. Two moving pictures were produced by Dutch companies during 1933, neither one of which achieved any particular success.

Boost Tariff in India

Calcutta.—The British House of Commons here has voted to double the duty on imports of foreign pictures. Present duty is $20 a reel. New duty will be $40 per reel. It is believed to be aimed principally at American films.

AN AMERICAN THREE ACT COMEDY OF SOME MAD YEARS IN FIFTY SCENES

BY

GEORGE MIDDLETON

First stage produ week of April

THE DRAMATISTS—

SIR ARTHUR PINERO: "I am fully alive to the earnestness of purpose and extraordinary skill with which you have built up the work."

GEORGE M. COHAN: "I'll bet that play will be talked about years from now. It certainly shoots along in the reading. What a title!"

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN: "I read it with great interest—that sort of thing is my dish, in the first place, and you were just mad enough to make it even more so. It's exciting, and red hot, and the country needs it more than a whole box of five cent cigars."

OWEN DAVIS: "Strong, vital and full of enthusiasm."

JOHN DRINKWATER: "I have read it with great interest and pleasure. I like its attack and fine indignation . . . It ought to make an exciting effect on the stage."

ARTHUR RICHMAN: "The tenseness and compression of the dialogue was magnificent. The extraordinary thing is that he was able to make a play on the level of a profound discussion while packing each scene with such vital and exciting drama."

ST. JOHN ERVINE: "I have just read it with immense interest and even greater consternation . . . it will test the quality of the finest director in America. I would like very much to see it performed."

MARTIN FLAVIN: "An extremely interesting cross section of American manners and morals in a technique quite new to the theatre."

JULES ECKERT GOODMAN: "It is a fine job—a great moving play."

CHANNING POLLOCK: "My congratulations on your new play and especially on your temerity in writing it. Of the validity and cogency of your picture there can be no doubt."

PERCY MACKAYE: "Provocative, radical, sincere—in its dynamic sense of life and theatre—this play represents the virile maturity of George Middleton's art."

A. E. THOMAS: "A dramatic and thrilling statement of events leading up to the present situation in America."

AUSTIN STRONG: "It has life and a passionate spirit in the telling."

S. N. BEHRMAN: "It has great humor and gusto and while it is often very moving, its terrific pace and the vigor of its characterization keep it from being turgid. It is constantly alive.

THE PRESS—

(a few early notices)

PERCY HAMMOND (In New York Tribune): "Mr. Middleton eyes this wayward era critically, turns it across his knee and trounces it more in irony than in anger. . . . It is a blunt and vicious though airy satire . . (an) earnest, exciting and reforming play."

WALL STREET JOURNAL: "The play is interesting as one of the few attempts to deal broadly with this period without propaganda and with a critical satirical intent. . . . It is a conglomeration wherein personalities are lost in the swift pace and excitement of a boiling mass of scenes. It is a spectacle, a parade of emotions, vulgarities, prejudices, weaknesses, stupidities—a vast rough canvas of the madness of America at war, America insane with profits, of America in fear and famine. . . . It is a satirical picture of vigor and variety."

BROOKLYN EAGLE: "The vivid dialogue and the speed of the action make the piece pass with unusual celerity . . . the humor is sardonic, seldom without a desire to sting."

WASHINGTON STAR: "Surely this is something which every mature American will thoroughly enjoy and understand. . . . It is clever and interesting from first to last."

SIDNEY WILLIAMS (Philadelphia Inquirer: "Strangely called a comedy, it is a bitter indictment of both the propaganda of business and the propaganda of patriotism. . . . Its mood is unquestionably popular and the writing vigorous."

BOSTON GLOBE: "There is plenty of swift action as various public questions are presented in striking original form. It is a powerfully dramatic presentation of matters confronting the United States as viewed by different active and determined people."

WORCESTER TELEGRAM: "It is an astonishing play . . . here we see life rushing before us as it has rushed since 1917 . . . it is all as intensely real as life itself."

OAKLAND TRIBUNE: "He has lost nothing of his cunning as a dramatist."

MILWAUKEE JOURNAL: "Studded with epigrams and political aphorisms."

LITERARY DIGEST: "Worth reading."

CAPITAL TIMES (Madison): "From the background of his long and successful experience in the art of play making, he has produced in his new play a valuable piece of work."

It Ruins Their Art

By
NAT J. FERBER

SOME of my best friends are writing for pictures. I knew them when they were mere highbrows. I have fed them strudel, solace and fortitude. When a tall-templed scrivener is about to "sell his soul" to Hollywood he needs solace, the ointment to his goose-flesh.

Get me straight. I am not concerned with the vulgar fry who betray their art at thirty cents a word and use golden toothpicks. The pen wielders whose tears bedewed my coat lapels were in for the "finer things" in exclusive magazines dedicated to lofty ideals.

I am thinking of Frank Handel Swane, nee Schwein, the greater O'Neill (self-styled); also of M. Jefferson Kupdrayer. The latter, in nearly majestic prose, authored an "idealized" novel based on the boudour peculiarities of his parents. To supplement their earnings by the "finer things" this pair came to my desk to "take in" books for review. It is to this that I, a creature of the capitalist press, owe the honor and fortune of having met them.

They were nearly honest reviewers, telling the bitter truth about everything and everyone, but not about each other. The last would be too much to ask for the bourgeoise readers of my page. Frank and M. Jefferson had their own battle ground for their private wars. What they really thought of each other's work could be learned only in THE CRIER. In microscopic jewel type, their names were listed with a hundred others as "associate editor," like combative roaches under a Florida sink. In the glare of a widely-circulated page like mine, in the Hearst papers, they had only praise for their species.

In the CRIER they railed against all predatory interests in which they included everything substantially endowed, including, of course, the movies.

It was, therefore, with embarrassment that M. Jefferson Kupdrayer displayed before Swane and me a bid at five hundred dollars per week from Hollywood. Blushingly he held the message under my nose.

"But," he apologized, "there's the three kids. And Mamie is like a shadow from trying to get by on a few smackers a week."

"Yeah. But how can a man of your alleged vision stultify himself by writing movie truck?" asked Frank Handel Swane, who hadn't yet received his offer.

"Five hundred a week . . . thirteen weeks . . . more than six thousand dollars!" There was a far-away look in Kuprayer's myopic eyes. Then a new light broke through the film normally coating his retina.

"I got it," and his lips parted to reveal that if his Mamie was worn to a shadow, his teeth had receded to bare gums. "I got it. I'll sock away my six thousand and quit. By that time I'll know so much about the dump that I'll be able to write a book showing it up."

"That's an idea," agreed Frank Handel, "And if they make me an offer, I'll write a play about the saps. Only . . ." Bitter realization harassed Comrade Swane. "Only I ain't got an offer yet." Proving that the lack of an offer can wreck the diction of even a greater O'Neill.

"You'll get an offer," magnanimously declared M. Jefferson. "You'll get—if not five hundred like me—they'll offer you two hundred and fifty."

Frank Handel Swane's eyes blazed in anger.

"Why should you get five hundred and I only two hundred and fifty?"

"Why should you kick if you're making less than twenty?" inquired M. Jefferson tartly.

"What did you ever do?" countered Swane.

"I? Nothing . . . only I wrote a pretty good review about a rotten play. That's what I done," proclaimed the master of prose.

"Look at me," I broke in propitiatingly forgetting that this was a private fight between giant intellects.

They looked. They looked their contempt so effectively that I curled up. They left me as a mere slave of the capitalist press deserves to be left . . . alone. But the next day brought Swane to my desk again. He was waving a telegram.

"I got my offer," he announced triumphantly.

"How much?" inquired an anxious M. Jefferson, right on his heels.

"Five . . . five hundred."

M. Jefferson's eyes, normally a dead-fish blue, turned green.

"With an option?" he inquired apprehensively.

"Yep. And with fare for me and the wife."

"I got fare for the wife and three kids." M. Jefferson Kuprayer made the announcement like a golfer three-up on the club professional.

The great American dramatist's face fell. He had no three kids, not even one.

"I got a Pullman all the way across," boasted the people's own playwright.

"You mean an upper?"

"No. A section—lower and an upper!"

"Well . . . and WE got a couple of drawing rooms," announced M. Jefferson with neatly simulated nonchalance.

Frank Handel dashed to the telephone booth. Unlike the princeling that wailed for the moon, he yelped for his drawing room and got it.

Even a book review editor is human, though this is often denied. I found myself yearning for five hundred a week and a drawing room. It was not without diffidence that I asked my pair of erstwhile dependents:

"Do you think that I could go to Hollywood at five hundred a week and . . ."

I was not permitted to make the ultimate demand. M. Jefferson cut me short.

"Sure. When you're better known like. . . ." Mendel was probably going to say, himself, but adroitly concluded, "like Swane, over there."

That put me in my place and the log-rolling technique came automatically into play.

"Sure," agreed Swane. "When you are as well known as Kupdrayer YOU will go to Hollywood . . . maybe not for five hundred a week, but two-fifty."

"Or three hundred," generously added M. Jefferson.

"But . . . but," I tried to defend my position, "haven't I had a by-line in the biggest newspapers in the world for more than twenty years? Haven't I topped the most widely-circulated

X-RAY

By
ARTHUR HORNBLOW, JR.

SHORTLY after the birth of the talkies Somerset Maugham and I were walking along Broadway. Every picture house was packed, with long lines waiting. They were exciting days and Maugham was in a prophetic mood.

"This," said he, "provides the writer of tomorrow with the greatest medium of expression one could hope for. The talking pictures will take a Shakespearean form; limitless scenes, unlimited scope. Playwrights will leap at this chance to do stunning work."

I agreed. There was nothing else to think at the time.

We were both wrong.

The first-rate playwrights of the world have done little leaping and in cases where staggering sums of money have lured some of them momentarily to the films they have done in most cases their least significant work. They blame it on "pictures," on "Hollywood," on censorship, on anything but themselves. The answer to them lies in the fact that superb motion pictures are continually being made and that the screen can match product for product the output of every other aesthetic industry in the world.

For every splendid painting I'll show you a million daubs; for every Radio City I'll point out a score of neighboring architectural nightmares. For a while I earned my living as a dramatic critic in New York; for two years I had to see every play that came in. The experience finally became unendurable.

In other words, any blanket indictment of "pictures" as opposed to the other art forms is so much broccoli.

For what might be learned from it I scribbled a list of random of ten great talking pictures that came readily to my mind. Here they are: "Cavalcade," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Street Scene," "Maedchen in Uniform," "Blue Angel," "Henry VIII," "Roofs of Paris," "Farewell to Arms," "Fugitive from a Chain Gang," "Little Women."

Every one of them is filled with the excitement and wonder of life. Every one of them has carried its thrill, its beauty, its laughter or its power to millions. In themselves they constitute an utter and unanswerable argument in behalf of the film as a worthwhile form to go after. Five of them were based on novels; two are originals; two are based on plays; one may be termed biographical in its source. Neither of the originals is by a playwright. The list, made up without any intention to stress a point, accidentally stresses a strong one. The dramatist is letting us down! Mr. Maugham's prophecy has not come true. (Even he has made no interesting contributions to the form which he hailed.)

Sidney Howard, an outstandingly gifted contributor to the theatre, has achieved an equal competence in writing for the screen. His phobia is twofold; a dread of having his material doctored by directors on the set; and a strong and often expressed distaste for the quack atmosphere of Los Angeles. The first fear was set at rest by a stipulation in his contract (common in the theatre but new to pictures) that no one could alter the script after its completion but the author or the producer. Nothing can take care of his preference for the East but his being allowed to remain there while doing the bulk of his screen work.

Elmer Rice, regarded with some uneasiness by those with whom he set about doing his picture treatment of "Street Scene," proved to be not nearly so distressed at the enterprise as he expected until the subject of censorship arose. When the Hays office indicated strongly that the charity worker in his story should be portrayed more leniently because of the offense that might be given to American charity organizations, Rice boiled and proceeded to write polemics for The Nation.

When George Kaufman, notoriously indifferent to pictures, was induced to write "Roman Scandals" for Cantor he chucked the job midway for no other reason than that it "bored him" and he wanted to devote himself to the greater fun of writing "Let Em Eat Cake" for the stage. In the course of work on the story Frank Tuttle, the director, mildly suggested the inclusion of a chariot chase in the picture (its outstanding sequence.) Kaufman wrote the query "Why?" on the unfinished script and vanished.

Frederick Lonsdale has twice been to Hollywood and has fled from it. But what must be remembered is that he flees as fast from New York and London if the job in hand leaves him restless and uninspired. His deft hand has paused on many a job in this manner to the exasperation of theatrical managers all over the world. He likes to work where and as he likes to work and that's all there is to it; no one works more capably or more brilliantly when in the mood for it.

But enough of these snap-shots. They suffice to indicate the true nature of Hollywood's apparent strife with first rate artists. We may be able to reform ourselves ultimately in such manner as to suit all the writers whose talents we seek. But I fear not. Actually it is my opinion that the producers have gone a great distance in the direction of creating congenial working conditions for the writer; the writer must be prepared to do his share of the reforming.

I'll be told by playwrights now happily on the Hollywood scene that I make no allowance for the limitation of the medium, no allowance for the inhibiting and frustrating influences which operate, no allowance for the absence of free self-expression. I do make those allowances; they all contribute to the difficulty of the task. But I know of no other medium of expression which hasn't its own kind of miseries, and I make merely the point that the greatness of a great picture justifies the effort to create one.

We need our big playwrights in the field of picture making, need them badly. The world and the public need them; the talking motion picture has become that important not only as an instrument of entertainment but as an instrument of socialization. Some are already here and doing notable work, especially in the field of adaptation. But we need more original creation and it will not start coming until the leaders of the writing profession are prepared to acknowledge that the goal to be reached is well worth reaching. Anyone who contends that the medium is worthless must face the uncomfortable realization that he disagrees with the whole wide world.

Paragraphs from a Reporter's Notebook

By
SIDNEY SUTHERLAND

A YEAR ago in this space I wrote a few lines in advocacy of the thesis that in the motion picture industry this is "The Day of the Writer." Asked to contribute once more to the Hollywood Reporter's annual Writers' Number, I thought at first to reinforce my former arguments by again insisting that neither producer nor director nor star can make a decent picture without a decent story—and that writers alone know how to write stories.

I was going to offer a few authentic observations as to what had happened of late to certain stories in Hollywood after certain stars and directors had finished rewriting and, of course, mutilating them.

But I decided not to embark again upon so hopeless a venture. Hopeless is the right word, given the producing and supervisory judgment against which writer intelligence and talent must ever beat itself with the mocking futility of a hollow drum.

So, to help Billy Wilkerson amass sufficient editorial content to observe the U. S. Postal regulations as to the percentage of advertising matter in the Second Class Mail classification, it struck me that a paragraph or two of interesting coincidences I have observed in my reportorial career might serve to speed an idle moment or two for Bill's subscribers.

You wouldn't think, would you, that there was any connection between Bing Crosby and Fred Merkle? Yet down the years there is a slender thread linking these two men, separated by more than a quarter of a century in the hours of their renown, the wealthy crooner of February, 1934, and the culprit in baseball's most famous blunder in September, 1908.

One midnight in the summer of 1916 I strolled into a tawdry Minneapolis honky-tonk night-club run by one Dan Moriarty. A song plugger was standing near the cheap piano singing something to the effect that he "wished again that he was back in Michigan, back on the farm." It wasn't the tune and it wasn't the words, both banal and hackneyed, that attracted my attention to the tall, skinny, sandy-haired singer: It was his weird intonation. I had never heard anybody sing like that—and I've heard some strange singers in some strange places in my time!

When he finished, the patrons at the tables—hoodlums doing the best they could, and berouged girls doing the hoodlums — responded with a shower of coins. The pianist picked them up from the little raised platform and shared them with the song plugger, probably less than $5.

One night in October, 1908, after the World's Series which Merkle's historic failure to touch second base tossed into the lap of the Chicago Cubs, I was seated in Faust's, a popular Columbus Circle night club, drinking with Merkle, who was trying to drown the memory of his blunder in a flagon. A tall, skinny, sandy-haired chap entered, saw us, and sat our table. The newcomer was Rube Marquard, the "$11,000 Southpaw Beauty," pitching for the Giants. He strove to assuage Merkle's grief.

Merkle replied that it was all very well for Rube to make light of the egregious lapse, because he, Marquard, had nothing to worry about and, besides, was in love with a beautiful girl, with whom he was shortly to appear in a vaudeville sketch. Finding Merkle inconsolable, Rube and I, with gallant sacrifice, accompanied our friend until dawn in his determination to strangle his remorse in the aforesaid beverages.

The other night, seated near my radio out here in Hollywood, all these disjointed memories came trooping back as I listened to Bing Crosby on the air. And, suddenly, the slender thread tying together all these characters, separated by the passing years and the leagues of terrain, became clear and curiously interesting.

The song plugger in Minneapolis was Benny Fields, and he was the first crooner in America—for which he received $2.50. And his wife is the beauteous Blossom Seeley, who was vaudeville partner and first wife of Rube Marquard! Today we have a crooner receiving hundreds of thousands of dollars, and quite deservedly so, for doing precisely the same thing that Benny was doing at the time Bing was playing hookey from grammar school. And, going farther back, I first saw the lovely actress who was to be that pioneer crooner's wife, at a time when the present popular crooner was in diapers.

In 1908 I was private secretary for Baxter Morton, head of the Nicholas Power Co., at 115 Nassau Street, New York City. We were one of the first makers of projection machines in the then infant movie industry.

At that time, the whole business was in the predatory clutches of the Motion Pictures Patents Company, which completely dominated the situation because of control of basic patents. Nobody seemed to be greatly exercised by this tyranny, because nobody envisioned the future magnitude of the industry. The new form of entertainment struck all of us as a pass-

A Fairway To Arntz

An extract from Ernest Hemingway's Hollywood Diary

By AINSWORTH MORGAN

I ARRIVED in Hollywood just as the bloody California sun sank in the ocean and hid the sunkist oranges and the grapefruit and the olives and all the different things it kisses, in darkness. I drove up a street which looked like any other street in any other town, but it was longer than any other street in any other town. It was so long I thought it had no ending to it until we pulled up in front of a Hotel called the Roosevelt Hotel. Then I knew that was the end of the street—or nearly—because the taxi driver said, "Here you are." I paid the fare. Four dollars and sixty cents. I forget where we had come from. The taxi driver had a brown face and a nose which was peeling. He had been kist by the sun, too. I got a room on the sixth floor. But I couldn't find the bed.

"It's in the wall," said the boy who was waiting for a tip.

"Which wall? There are four."

"That wall." He pointed to the wall behind me.

"Oh, that wall! How do you sleep in it if it's in the wall?"

"Pull it out and it falls down."

"Is it safe?"

"Yes. I think so."

"Thanks." I gave the boy twenty-five cents and he went out and closed the door behind him and I fooled with the bed to see if the boy had been right when he said he thought it was safe. It worked pretty well, but it had a squeak and I wished I had some oil to oil it where it squeaked. But I didn't have any oil so I finally left the bed down because I knew I was going to use it and didn't want to hear it squeak again that night.

I used the bed from eleven that night until nine the next morning. If I propped myself way up on pillows and craned my neck I could just see Grauman's Chinese Theatre diagonally across the street. But I didn't know it was Grauman's Chinese Theatre until after nine the next morning. I found it out from a blond haired girl in the coffee shop of the Hotel. She was a waitress. I was dunking a doughnut when I asked her what it was.

"It's Grauman's Chinese Theatre," she said, "Want some more coffee?"

I took some more coffee and while she was filling my cup from a big nickel tank behind the counter I had a chance to see the other side of her. I had already seen her face when she told me what it was across the street. It would have been a pretty face if it hadn't looked so tired. The other side of her was attractive too. She was slim and had flat hips and would have been pretty without clothes and I wondered if she could ever have a baby because her hips were so slender. When she came back with the coffee she said, "Cream?"

"In the movies?" she said.

"No. Not yet. I have an appointment at eleven."

"Are you'n actor?"

"No."

"I didn't think you was."

"Why?"

"Because of your clothes."

"What's the matter with my clothes?"

"They don't look like an actor's clothes."

"Don't they?"

"No."

"What do actors clothes look like?"

"They look different from yours."

"Give me another doughnut."

She gave me another doughnut and I dunked it in the coffee that was left. When I whirled it around in the coffee it made little waves in the coffee and reminded me of throwing a stone in a smooth lake. A part of the doughnut broke off and sank in the coffee and I had to fish for it with my spoon. I found it, but it didn't look like a doughnut any longer. It looked more like Wheatena.

I got to the X. Y. Z. Studio at five minutes to eleven.

"Is Mr. Arntz in?" I asked a girl who sat on a swivel-chair in front of a mahogany desk with drawers. The girl turned in the swivel-chair and looked strangely at me. I thought it might be because I had my hat on so I took my hat off and asked her the question again.

"Is Mr. Arntz in?"

"What's your name?"

"Hemingway."

"What's your business?"

"I write."

"Have you an appointment?"

"I have."

"Who with?"

"With Mr. Arntz."

"Does Mr. Arntz expect you?"

"I have an appointment with Mr. Arntz."

"I'll see if Mr. Arntz is in." The girl went to a switch board and stuck a plug in a hole which lighted a little light after she pressed a little handle. She seemed rather annoyed at me for asking if Mr. Arntz was in and she got mad at the little handle and seemed to think it was the little handle's fault that Mr. Arntz—or Mr. Arntz's secretary—did not answer the phone on the other end."

"I guess Mr. Arntz is not in," I said.

"Mr. Arntz is out," she said.

"Tell Mr. Arntz that Mr. Hemingway called to see him."

"Mr. Arntz is out."

"I know. But tell Mr. Arntz that Mr. Hemingway called to see him."

"Mr. Arntz is a busy man."

I walked down the stairs from the office where I asked the girl if Mr. Arntz was in. The stairs creaked. They were wooden. I remembered that most wooden stairs creaked so I went out in the sunshine wondering why a big company like X. Y. Z. ever used wooden stairs. The creak made me think of the squeak in the bed at the Roosevelt Hotel. The bed at the Roosevelt Hotel made me think of the blond girl in the cofee shop who had the tired but pretty face. I wondered if the bed would squeak with her in it.

I walked around inside the studio and saw a great many people apparently doing nothing. I asked a man dressed as Hamlet if he was Hamlet and he said no he was not Hamlet although he had on Hamlet's costume.

"Do you know Mr. Arntz?" I asked

"Should Writers Produce"

By
WM. ANTHONY McGUIRE

HAVING spent twenty-five years in the theatre and but three in the movies, I am most likely presuming when I express opinions of the one based almost entirely upon experience in the other. And yet, whether producers, writers or directors admit it or not, the movies since the advent of talkies have fallen into the lap of the stage.

I do not mean by this that only those originating in the theatre may succeed in the movies—there are too many examples to the contrary; but I do maintain that only those who have assimilated the knowledge of what theatre audiences demand of the stage can supply the best in entertainment to audiences of the movies.

The notes of a piano is an old, weatherbeaten, but nevertheless true example of fundamentals. The screen with all its background, its angles, its overhead shots, can do no more than present a drama, a melodrama, a comedy, or a musical—all of which the stage has been offering for centuries. There is no tradition to the talkies except the stage, even to the point of construction; for Shakespeare wrote in movie formula when he constructed his plays into many short, fast moving scenes. Therefore, my presumption is perhaps pardonable when I base my opinions of the movies upon my experience in the theatre.

I have been asked to answer the question: "SHOULD A WRITER PRODUCE?" and before replying I should like to define what I consider the qualifications of a writer; for alas, many of us scribble, some of us dictate, and others of us type, but few know how to write—no fewer than is the average percentage of ability in other crafts—but few enough to warrant caution in the definite application of the title. For instance, because a man writes a book, he is not a novelist; if his book is published, his career is promised—if his book is successful, his career has begun. All of which in any other line of work would mean—he is a beginner. If he repeats himself, or if he maintains a good average of success over a period of years, then, and not until then, should he be classified by the nature of his talent—for not until then will he have gained the experience necessary to fully justify his title.

So it is with the theatre. And when I say a playwright can direct and produce, I do not mean the writer of an unproduced play or the author of one successful one; I mean the fellow who has earned his spurs over a period of years, obtaining in that time a fund of knowledge applicable in any field of entertainment; I mean men like George S. Kaufman and George M. Cohan, who have written and staged hit after hit, and whose experiences with audience reactions transcend any other study of entertainment psychology I know of.

But there are only a few like them—you will tell me—and they are old in experience and devoted to the stage. Make up your mind to it—there can only be a few like them in the movies, and you can only increase the percentage by increasing the opportunities. No one knew that George Kaufman could stage a play until he did it. His association with his plays until the rise of the curtain, his consistent success, proved his knowledge of showmanship. So I imagine his producer wisely figured that he was more trustworthy of supervising than someone who knew absolutely nothing about either writing or showmanship.

But how to increase the percentage of opportunity among the writers? It's not a problem. First increase the percentage of talent among the writers. How? Develop it. How? Give them back their self respect—let them feel that they are not writing for the approval of one individual—make them responsible to the public for their work. They're not now—because the public knows that writers for the screen have little voice in the final decisions, and what is more demoralizing, the writers are aware of this public knowledge. Don't subject them to the domination of a director; for with the rarest exceptions, no director is better than his script, and many of them not as good. Certainly they should not have the privilege of altering an author's script unless the author be granted the privilege of correcting the director's work. If it is a good rule for the one, it should be twice as good for both. I, however, do not see why either should suffer indignity. A picture should be the combined result of all both author and director have to give—and one should not be subjugated to the other if the studio desires the best results from both. For, whether you are willing to admit it yet or not, the play is the thing even in the movies; which fact places the burden of the outcome on the author.

Then why not give him the position in your midst his work entitles him to? It will make him more important to you, and will add to the effort he will put into everything he writes. Further, eliminate high salaries—let the survival of the fittest apply; pay authors a percentage based on a fair royalty arrangement—let the one who gives you a hit share in it.

In order to do this, however, you must first give him a degree of responsibility—because no author will turn his script over to another's supervision on a percentage basis unless he has some powers of protection.

How to develop authors to warrant such power? Begin now—by making dialogue direction a part of every author's contract. In New York an author, in accordance with his contract, not only attends rehearsals of his play, but must remain with it for two weeks after its opening. Something of this sort can apply here. When an author writes a picture, include in his contract a special arrangement for him to be on the set to direct dialogue, or to be on hand for any additions or scene changes necessary.

The expense of this plan will be very small in comparison to the directing and producing talent you will derive from it; and when you develop a writer with showmanship into a producer, you should have a far superior type of supervision than is being given many pictures to-day.

In conclusion—Did you ever notice how the rumble of a railroad train penetrates the night? I hear one now—sounds like it's passing right by my door, even though the tracks are over a mile from here. Yet I can never hear it during the day time. But it's comforting tonight—Makes me think kindly of "THE CHIEF" in case I'm all wrong about the movies.

The Story Conference

By
WILBUR DANIEL STEELE

A BIG proportion of bad screen stories are bad because they are thin, and they are thin, not because they have too little in them, but because they have too much.

It seems to me that this condition will subsist as long as the story-conference method of building fiction remains in vogue—that is to say, as a "constructive" factor. Could it be content with mere vetoes, its function might be strongly justified. The trouble with it, once the treatment of the projected piece has been set (and there lies the right and necessary job of the conference of all concerned) and the writing of the play given into the author's hands, is that the all-getting-together method is almost certain to thin the tale.

The one thing above all others which a piece or fiction must have, if it is to have a life of its own, is a body of its own, of its own growing. And the "constructive" type of conference is essentially a device for "getting more stuff in," grafting bits of meat from other bodies upon a torso already held in check from sprouting three heads and a dozen legs of its own flesh, only by the sweat of the author's will.

This coming with gifts is a natural, an inevitable thing. Not alone is the author thinking about the story all of the time—others, producer, director, supervisor et al, are thinking about the story at least part of the time. The essence of drama in the making is that it is having every instant to choose between two paths forking as its feet. And though they be both leading in the same direction, toward the one goal, yet once your story has taken this fork and refrained from taking that, then it can never again be quite the same-looking story it would have been had it taken that and let this one go by. The difficulty is that in the minds of others (let's say supervisor and director each independent) the tale may have taken that other path. And that path immediately reforking, no sooner have they parted company with the author than they have parted themselves—and none of them realizes it—not one of the three. To each, busily multiplying separation, there come imaginative scenes, situations, lights of character, natural and even inevitable in his created scheme—and grand good picture-stuff too. There comes a glow. There comes a conference. And disaster.

To begin with, none of them seems able to comprehend that they are talking about three different stories, peopled by twenty-times-three different characters (unless perhaps the author may guess it, if he be an old hand at authoring.) However, it wouldn't matter much if they did. Were there a need to sacrifice it would be different. But there isn't. This is "a picture"—there's room in the footage for the dream-pets of all the three.

"The more twists the better" seems to be an axiom of the story-tinkering trade. In the author's (adapter's) treatment there are palpable gaps left, which, in the secret places of his mind, he had intended to fill with action something less than violent, whereby his people might be given a life and a difference, and their situation take on a color however faintly its own. But here the ever-dependable hobgoblin of the fourteen-year-old in the tenth row, ready to yawn the instant the pistols stop shooting, comes to the rescue of the allied dreamers The chunks of excitement (perfectly good excitement) which fit so neatly into their several stories (which they sincerely still believe to be all the same story) can be easily whittled to stop up each and every one of those dull gaps—and there you have it now—a story with something doing every moment all the way.

The truth is that you have all of that—except a story. For a story is nothing if it is not the ordered march of cause and effect across a segment of human lives, no odds whether the stage be Elsinore or Chinatown or Wonderland. But now with such a plethora of effects, there's little if any room left for causes, there's no time for dramatis personae to take breath and turn into people, no gate of self-identity for the spectator to enter by and lose himself and begin passionately to care, eagerly to wonder what the end will be. So you have lost the one quality that brought the art of the drama into our scheme of things—(and I believe it to be the one quality for the want of which most flop-pictures flop)—the quality of suspense.

I think all authors of experience know a thing which few non-authors ever realize; that the job proposed by any story-idea worth doing is not one of building up but one of stripping down. It is not a job of sowing new complications; the seeds of too many lie already in its own soil. It is the sweaty job of weeding out all these complications, situations, twists, kicks, (tempting though they be for an instant's gain), which do not carry that story strongly along that story's road to that story's goal. And stripping down is a thing which one mind (at a time) seems to do better, in silence, than four minds full of new angles in a conference room.

Sa' Racket, That Scenario!

MISTER LAIRD DOYLE gets interviewed

Q. Mr. Doyle, will you kindly tell the eager listeners of the Continental Broadcasting Company tonight how you happened to begin writing scenarios?

A. Certainly, Mr. McNamee. My father and I were clam-diggers, and the clams shut down on us.

Q. And you started writing for the talkies?

A. No, sir. When the clams shut down—those were the silent days.

Q. Then you were a title-writer?

A. No, indeed. My cousin was a title-writer. He used to sign checks "Count-so-and-so" and "Prince-such-and-such." He's in San Quentin now. He's still writing. The parole board.

Q. H'm——Well, Mr. Doyle, let's leave your cousin—

A. Yes, we can come back to him. He'll be in the same place. You asked me how I started writing scenarios. My first was a sex movie. I felt I was fitted for this. My experience was in the clam beds. I was pretty much at sea when I first started. Floundering.

Q. How did you happen to come to Hollywood?

A. On a bicycle. This was one of the first cycles. About eight years before the gangster cycle, to be exact.

Q. And how did you get your start?

A. I ran over a supervisor at Hollywood boulevard and Vine street and was unanimously elected president of the Writers' Club.

Q. Did the supervisor recover?

A. No. That's why they elected me president. Being president, I drafted a list of reforms. A producer saw it and thought it was a scenario. It made more money than "The Covered Wagon."

Q. Was it produced as you wrote it?

A. No, indeed. They put eleven writers on it. But I got screen credit. I got the eleven writers fighting among themselves. While they were so engaged I ran to the producer. It was months before they started speaking again and by that time the picture had been released.

Q. Where do you get your ideas for your scenarios?

A. I send to the Department of Agriculture for the crop reports. This is a new source. And I also rely on the power of suggestion.

Q. That last is very uncanny—

A. Not very. I simply wait for some other writer to suggest something good then submit it myself.

Q. Isn't that unethical?

A. No, indeed. Recently a producer told a writer that William Shakespeare knew his stuff—and the writer called the information desk to see what office Shakespeare had so he could pick up some fresh ideas.

Q. Then the joke was on him.

A. I'll say it was. All us other boys knew that Shakespeare was working over at R-K-O.

Q. Have you ever faced any serious problems in your writing?

A. I should say. One time I went temporarily deaf and didn't have any ideas for a long time.

Q. What did you do?

A. I studied lip-reading. After that no writer dared eat in the Brown Derby unless he had his back to me.

Q. Are writers born or made?

A. I'd say, offhand, that masculine writers are born—and feminine writers are made. Although not so much so as actresses. Hollywood is a peculiar place.

Q. Are there any original stories in Hollywood?

A. Five. But they've all been used.

Q. Do you like writing?

A. Yes, unless it's on the wall.

Q. What do you do then?

A. Same as everybody else—get a job at another studio.

Q. How do writers get by in Hollywood?

A. On credits. Grocer, Butcher, Tailor. Some accounts run for years.

Q. Do you write topical stories?

A. No. Those South Sea yarns aren't in vogue much these days.

Q. Timely stories?

A. Time and time again. I once told a director that if he didn't like my copy I wouldn't let him shoot my story.

Q. Did he object?

A. Not all all. He said he'd shot it five times already.

Q. Do writers have nice quarters?

A. Yes. At Warners they have rooms with lounges and locks on the doors.

Q. Do you dream much?

A. No, I sleep quite comfortably out there.

Q. Do you have long hours?

A. At Warners, I'm often in my office for three or four days at a time.

Q. Don't they have any code? That's outrageous.

A. Yes, it is. A carpenter finally woke me up after breaking the lock, pulling me off the couch and rubbing my face with a wet towel.

Q. Do you live comfortably in Hollywood?

A. It's beastly. A ten room house. A lousy—pardon me, Mr. MacNamee—ten room house. Tennis court. Swimming pool. But no golf links. Imagine that! No golf links! They treat us like dogs in Hollywood, Mr. MacNamee. It's disgraceful. Consider the writer. If it wasn't for the writer where would the screen play be? Where would art be? Where would Joe be? Where would busy bee? But you get the idea—

Q. You mean that you're—downtrodden?

A. Say, that's the word for it! I hate Hollywood! I hate producers! I hate executives! I hate directors, actors, producers, gatemen—"

Q. What are your plans for the future, Mr. Doyle?

A. I'm going right back to the clam beds. Yes, sir. Immediately. Almost immediately. Soon as my present five thousand a week contract's up. I'm through starving. Yes, it's back to the clam beds for me—as soon as the clams open up.

Austin Parker

Sense or Censors

By GENE FOWLER

NOW that the Ulysses of Mr. Joyce has been anointed with judicial oils, it would appear that something can be done to garrote censorship in general.....The wit-nit babblings, stale violet fancies and imbecile-antics of censors have been negatived somewhat in the so-called literary field. Just why the motion picture industry has not tweaked the indigo noses of the censorial eunuchs is not clear.

The press wears a chastity belt by constitutional right, and any newspaper unincumbered by corporate control or other corrupt leanings may move virtuously and breathe legally. The editor, functioning within the sphere of his publisher's policy, guards against such libels as might threaten his economic structure and rules out such obscenities as might alienate his readers. While amenable to all manner of one-horse laws, the more modern purveyors of information, propaganda and entertainment—the cinema and the radio—have no specific and firm foundation assuring them a decent freedom of expression. This condition directly hampers the writers of pictures, confronting them with such monumental problems as: "How much of Harlow's leg may we show in Kansas?"

Whenever anyone makes a plea for freedom of any sort, the bible-benders and thyroidic hymnsters set up a yammer. Guided by their own strangled preferences—were they free to act and had the necessary vigor of gland—they cry that license, not liberty, is the pole star of the petitioner. Yet, in a script, the very stifling of convincing dialogue or honest situation leads to a condition far more deplorable than the presentation of an open effect openly arrived at.

The producer, director and writer, shackled like a troupe of rheumatic Houdinis, connive, scheme and risk mental hernia to circumvent the censor. Resultant scenes ofttimes are so dizzy that they offend discerning spectators and drive morons into the park to swing little girls.

I remember a scene in which Mr. Somebody suddenly carried Miss Somebody Else into another room for purposes which presumably were giddy and gay. This was allowed—the scene I am speaking of—provided no beds were shown and no dialogue was used to identify the chamber of horrors. Still, I don't think anyone looking on and drooling the while, believed the lad and lassie were bent upon counting their beads. The scene following was a masterpiece of censorial evasion. The ostermoor arena was DARK. But there were subdued noises, such as are identified with biological well-being. And then we saw two small lights—indicating a pair of cigarettes—being waved like the batons of weary orchestra leaders. Of course, we of bawdy minds never once dreamed that anybody was in bed—or on the floor—smoking those cigarettes. We all thought we were glimpsing the nuptial zooming of fireflies.

A confection such as cited above does not strike me as an important contribution to the arts or sciences. It merely confuses one's sense of honest taste; or compels the less sturdy of our kind to reach over and pinch Mrs. McGillicuddy's bustle. Monsieur Rosenblatt should interview the ushers on this phase of national fun.

So long as a movie creator indulges in a hundred yard dash of innuendo, a few furlongs of double entendre, depicts his hero and heroine in coats of mail while hanging from pretzel-shaped trapezes, he is permitted to put over the idea that a shot-gun wedding is in the cards.

The animalistic embrace is allowable and certifiable only on the following conditions:

1. If a lot of mumbo-jumbo words are said over the grappling twain, attesting to matrimony.
2. If the senor and senorita are blindfolded and riding back-to-back on a wild horse about to go over a cliff.
3. If accompanied by the magic words: "Come up and see me sometime."

Every writer should endeavor to kick this picayune censorship directly in the groin. Presumably the producers won't, or can't, do anything about it. Armed with the greatest publicity weapon of all time—the picture—the moguls do not realize what opportunity is theirs in the field of militant propaganda and for sound causes.

What would happen if a choir of pelvic jailors were to censor the newspapers? A political blast such as would change Congressional seats and drive the hecklers back to the Black Forest. What would happen if the picture people were to boycott the penny ante politicians, keeping their mugs out of the newsreels (else showing their noses in Technicolor) unleashing films of the "Gabriel Over the White House" variety, exposing the sham and insincerity of the moral guardians?

Of course we have a few boys here, who—without a checkrein—would go on a rowdy spree. This is evidenced by the tendency to overdo each new and arresting word that comes to the screen. I am thinking of the still unburied and timesome slang, such as the word "Scram" and the constantly recurring "Nuts." Perhaps I am too naive, but I was fourteen years old before I realized that nuts grew on trees.

The broad views on censorship as held in the gallant state of California have not demoralized anyone. Of a certainty, those views—like so many other paternalistic slants—were fostered by a pecuniary desire to pamper local industry. But the result is the important thing to consider.

If writers continue to be bludgeoned and hamstrung by censorship, pictures will continue to be dull and misleading. How to cope with all the verbotens that make Burgomaster Hays' headquarters look like the dead letter office is beyond the ken of any author. Gulliver is held by Liliputian strings.

Inane censorship is one reason a writer goes back to New York feeling as useless as the male udder. Of course, there are other reasons, but why say "boo" to the firing squad?

"The Cinema in France"

By
BORIS INGSTER

There are 22 theatres in Paris playing American talking pictures. All of these theatres usually well patronized.

This is the situation despite a nationalism in France unknown in this country save on the stages with George M. Cohan. The explanation lies in the patent superiority of American films.

What are the reasons for this wide variance in quality; or, more pointedly, why are French pictures so thoroughly bad?

Two reasons bulk large.

The first is censorship. Hollywood scenario writers who complain ceaselessly and bitterly of censorship here, and insist it drains their work of reality, should do a script in Paris.

There government, with its daily cabinet change, exercises a watchdog authority over the films that is unmatched in the civilized world outside of Hitler Germany.

Pictures like "I'm A Fugitive From A Chain Gang," "Gabriel Over The White House," or "Big House" (certainly no documents of radicalism) would be unthinkable, altho French audiences applaud such pictures from other countries.

Then there is the French "system" of production. The entire industry resembles our own Poverty Row. Almost all films are financed on a shoestring. A not inconsiderable number of major pictures are "angeled" by individuals of wealth with a non-commercial interest in the feminine star.

Almost all the stars themselves are free-lancing. Likewise the writers and directors.

(Editor's Note: The author of this article just returned from a seven months stay in Paris, where he did scenario work for Agrafilms.)

Two influences predominate in French productions: Russian pictures, for their photography and directorial imagination; and American pictures, for the ir story construction, technical skill and commercial "finish."

The only original director, Rene Claire, has no influence or success in his country.

Enquiring among the more intelligent creators in the Paris studios, I found that Frank Capra seems to be the most popular American director. They believe his pictures are completely in the American "style."

As for French audiences, they seem to favor among American pictures the intimate, human type. "Back Street" is a tremendous hit there. Mae West was the sensation of 1933. Kay Francis is regarded as the model American woman, and even the inferior vehicles of this star are loudly acclaimed.

The worst thing to be encountered in a Paris movie theatre is a "dubbed" version of a Hollywood picture. These are atrocities. The originals are sold to French exhibitors, generally for a small price. Then the exhibitor dubs in voices in the native tongue. But so carelessly and inartistically is this done that the result screams for the bonfire. Often extra girls supply the spoken dialogue for finished American actresses. The practice is doing a great deal to destroy the box-office value of our stars with French audiences.

These random impressions and too many others to deal with adequately here, knit into the following conclusions:

That the French film industry, never apt, continues third-rate.

That French audiences know this, and steadily patronize American entertainment. (Incidentally, the Russians, with relaxing of their old policies, will soon give the Americans real competition in Europe—in the opinion of many observers I have talked to. Since the Nazi control, German pictures have lost favor abroad entirely.)

That this foreign market can be restored to its pre-talkie pre-eminence, if Hollywood producers care to take the proper pains—with painstaking dubbing, with greater emphasis upon story-telling by image, with pictures of guts and honesty.

For French audiences are obviously hospitable to American pictures.

.....HAT memo worries the hell outa me. He wants an idea. He wants it quick. But where the hell am I gonna get it? I ain't got no more nails left. Eatin' 'em. If only I hadn't had that sherry before lunch this wouldn't 'a happened.

'n that dam typewritter keeps grinning in my face. Maybe I oughta have another cigarette . . . or coffee. I know . . . a walk . . . I'll take a walk around the lot. Deadline at three. Meet the corpse . . . the writer. Story conference at three o'clock. If only I hadn't taken that hat this morning. It's a jinx. I shouldn't 'a' bought it in the first place. I think I'll quit smokin' cigarettes.

I wanted that corner suite in the first place. It's lighter. You can think better there.

Listen typewriter, I'll make a deal with you.' I'll treat you nice . . . you treat me nice. Dont' look so dam sullen when I want to get an idea. You've had it easy for weeks. I ain't touched you. Now when I want an idea, you grin at me or look black.

Come on now, let's make a bluff at it. Maybe if I bang away loud and fast the thoughts will think they're comin'. What can I write that's loud and fast? Bloomberg, gloomberg, iceberg, schulberg, thalberg . . . haw! That's too close to home.

Look at those nervous hands. Neurotic fingers drumming on the keyboard like a tinpanny pianiste idling.

The phone . . . Conference postponed 'til ten in the morning. Relief. What's this? A linotype:

crreeeeeeaaaattttcnnnnmmiiissssgobwhldd*

There it is—a trifle confusing. The line looks Gaelic.

hhhaavveeeeeeeggiiiiirrllldddnnnnnnoooooouuucccwttxpmssf*

Toward the end it's like striking chords.

It gets to be swell fun; sounds like a hell of lot of action and takes no thought at all. Sort of a clattering cleaning up of the mental Augean stables.

I must have forty of these cryptographs before I call it a day. Businesslike, I take my day's stint home. That night, I'm bored. I take up my typographical hiccoughs and look at them idly. They invite anagramming.

I look again at the first line . . . the one that looks Gaelic. I dismember it, shuffle the parts, try a number of combinations. You remember it was like this:

crreeeeeeaaaattttcnnnnmmiiissssgobwhldd

This is what I make of it.

CREATE ANTAGONISM BETWEEN CHILD AND MISTRESS.

Why, it makes sense! Uncommon sense! Instinctively, I flatter myself, I must have subconsciously created the thought first, then scrambled it up to make it tough for myself.

The second line works out magnificently:

HAVE GIRL DENOUNCE HERO CONCLUDING WITH UNEXPECTED ADMISSION OF LOVE.

Why . . . it's just like a ouija board!

So, like a type-pecker, I keep poking away at the keyboard, making cryptic abracadabra that translate into scenes, dialogue, climax and finale closeup.

Well, it goes on like that for hours, my consonantal sentences spitting out ideas that fit perfectly into my problem play.

I look up the history of my machine.

The typewriter originally belonged to a yogi who couldn't keep up the payments.

Men in White

By DORE SCHARY

(The scene is in a hospital operating room. Four white-coated figures stand about the room in varied poses of relaxation. The doctors are waiting for the patient to be wheeled in and are occupying their idle moments with a little shop talk. They are named, for our convenience, Joe, Eddie, Jack, and Bill.)

JOE (adjusting his apron): This fellow Stevens is a prima-donna, all right—shows up for an hour—and he's out again.

EDDIE (enjoying the opportunity to take a rap at somebody): Yeah—he's got a snap. That's what happens when you get in the big-money class.

BILL (he is an innocent young interne): I hear he's pretty good.

(The others look at BILL quickly).

JACK (scornfully): Get that? Pretty good? (he makes a gesture) He's a washout—getting along on his rep—he's been getting by on other people's hard work. He gets a lot of credit for doing nothing.

JOE: Sure—(he waves a bony finger at BILL). I've been in this business for two years—and I've done a lot of work—and the only thing I got some credit on was on a lousy tonsillectomy.

EDDIE (determined to finish his opinion of Stevens): Why, Stevens hasn't done a job yet that didn't stand restitching.

BILL (a babe in woods): But I heard he was good at this type of thing.

JACK: Yeah—(he shrugs his shoulders)—but this type of thing is out. (he makes a noble effort to clear up his statement.) Anybody can do a simple appendectomy, but when it comes to something that needs real skill—like a sarcoma—Stevens doesn't rate.

JOE (reflectively): I worked with him once on a cirrhosis—(disgustedly)—he killed, I tell you!

BILL: How does he get by?

JACK: Knows the right people—plays the social scale.

BILL: Well, I guess I got a lot to learn.

EDDIE: You sure have. When you're in this racket as long as me you'll know that real merit don't count—(impressively)—it's who you know.

JOE:That isn't all. They won't give a fifty-dollar a job man a chance—it's the fifteen hundred dollar boys that get the big assignments.

JACK (reminded of something): I'd have given my eye-tooth to get that Rockerbuilt job . . . I'd have handled it differently than Stevens did.

EDDIE: Sure, he ruined it by too much cutting.

JOE: His big mistake was handling it for cancer—when it was an out and out tumor.

JACK (nodding his head): That's what I say. I told that to the supervisor—but you know—(he makes a deprecating gesture)—those supervisors!

JOE: It beats me how most of these supervisors get in. None of them are practical men—just a bunch of dummies.

EDDIE (now on his favorite subject—supervisors): Only the other day one of them asked me if I had seen Bailey's goitre work—he wanted me to use the same line-up for a Caesarean! Can you tie that?

BIL: It's certainly discouraging, isn't it?

JOE: Humph! If it wasn't for the chance of getting a real break I'd go back to New York tomorrow and try to do something in Mt. Sinai.

JACK: Believe me—I'd do the same thing if I wasn't tied up. I'm sick of this. I'd rather be a street-cleaner.

EDDIE (adding salt to his wounds): It wouldn't be so bad, if you could work by yourself—but the guys they team you with! You can't recognize your own work when they're through with it.

JOE: That's it exactly. I had a beautiful acute peritonitis once and they called in Baumvogel to work on it with me and he botched it up completely.

JACK: I had the same thing. I had a t. b. I wanted to try up in Saranac—Baumvogel sent it out to Arizona.

BILL:How did it do?

JACK: Just as I thought—it died!

(At this point the patient is wheeled in and Dr. Stevens walks in. He strides majestically into the room and everyone snaps to attention.)

STEVENS: Well—(he makes a gesture toward the patient)—let's get into it fellows.

JACK (as he and the others prepare): Back to the old grind.

BILL (venturing an opinion in order to impress STEVENS): How about starting in with a local?

STEVENS (imperically): No—not on this kind—we'll use a general.

(By this time the patient is prepared and STEVENS is handed a scalpel.)

What do you say, boys—let's get going. I want to get a couple of sets of tennis in this afternoon.

JOE—Swell—(they are practically ready).

STEVENS (lifting his scalpel): O.K?

JACK: Right!

STEVENS: Turn it over!

(And as the doctors turn the patient over and STEVENS starts the operation we gently drop the curtain.)

"Don't Write Originals!"

By
VERA CASPARY

I HAVE been warned more often against the dangers of writing movie originals than I have against the pitfalls of drink, dope and loose living Nearly all of my friends have taken me aside at some time or other and warned me, "Don't write originals." Even studio editors who had telephoned the day before and wanted stories in twenty-two minutes for Janet Gaynor, Marlene Dietrich and Rudy Vallee, have become confidential over the third highball and whispered, "Because you're a good sport, I'll give you the lowdown. There's no use writing originals."

In spite of all this, I notice that originals continue to sell, to be made into good pictures and make money for the companies. I sell them myself. Not all that I write by any means, but three out of six, and considering the amount of work in an original as compared with the work in a play or a book or short story, the percentage represents a very good way for a writer to make a living, particularly if he wants a lot of spare time for his writing.

A lot of people think that the writing and selling of originals, but particularly the selling, requires a secret almost as precious as the secret of the alchemist's stone. Since I have had some luck and a lot of pleasant publicity, I have been pestered with requests that I collaborate, help or reveal the secret that will enable the others to share my good fortune. And I am a good-hearted wench so I read all their stories, at the risk of some day being called a plagiarist, and I find in nine cases out of ten that they haven't an idea that is suitable for a screen original any more than the Antigone of Sophocles would be a story for Jimmie Durante.

An original, in order to catch the jaded fancy of editorial boards and producers, must be a whole lot better as story material than the novel, magazine story or play they would buy without half so much deliberation. The novel or magazine story that has been printed, the play that has been produced, have already received the benediction of investment. Some publisher has put money into plates; some producer has paid a cast a couple of weeks' salary anyway and invested in sets, costumes and guaranteed theatre rental; the story must, therefore, have some merit.

But an original story that comes to them, with no other recommendation than an agent's name on the blue or red or brown paper binder, must be as tight structurally as a first-class murder mystery, it must have as many twists as a French farce, and it must be as rich with revelations of human weakness and human greatness as a Priestley novel. If a stage play is built around one situation with three or four minor situations building it up, the screen original must have two or three big situations in it, with ten or twelve sub-climaxes, contributing to the excitement.

There are two ways of catching the interest of these jaded story editors. One is by the presentation of a striking idea, the other is the construction of a solid story. A great many originals are presented as ideas, the stories built after an option is bought, and frequently a whole staff of writers engaged merely to build the story frame.

To my mind, and I am often wrong, the worst pictures result from this method. For even the building of stories for canned entertainment is not a completely mechanical job. When a lot of tired writers get together and wearily dig out situations that were good in other plays, books or pictures, the result is the canned drivel that provides vehicles for famous stars and drives the poor spectators home, bored and bitter.

The other method is the submission of a manuscript to studios after a story is completely worked out. From a writer's point of view, this has one big drawback. While the editors and producers may like his idea, they may object to some point in the story and therefore reject the whole manuscript. On the other hand, that gamble is worth while because the other elements of the story may attract the buyers.

And the main objection to an idea, submitted forlornly and by itself, is that no idea is sacred. This is not an accusation. It is merely a statement. Ideas are contagious, like measles. John Jones and William Jones read the same newspaper every day, hear the same radio program, are influenced by the same sounds and smells and colors. What I wonder at is how two people in this standardized world ever have two completely different ideas.

An idea is easy to steal, it meets its double in the first editorial room, it is worthless as soon as it is talked about too freely, and if it isn't talked about, there is no chance for it to be acclaimed. A good story, on the other hand, is a solid possession, a property, and the idea from which it sprang retains its vigor, originality and importance because it was not forced into the stereotyped model.

The prejudice against originals is not all the fault of the editors and producers. So many stories are just so much garbage. Either an inexperienced writer is looking for an easy way to make money without learning how to construct, or a weary author has to make payments on his house, his automobile and the wife's fur coat, and he doesn't want to bother with dialogue or prose rhythms.

But there are some first rate original manuscripts. I have seen a few, written by experienced and careful writers who understand the needs and limitations of the screen, that were much better as stories, as dramatic frames, and as writing than ninety-nine out of a hundred magazine stories. Unfortunately there are not many of these, and more unfortunately, the producers will not give them as much consideration as they give printed stories, far less appropriate for the screen.

While this prejudice exists, the writer who wishes to sell an original, has to take a tremendous gamble in writing his story. But what writer doesn't take, a tremendous gamble? Plays, magazine stories, books are certainly gambling chances. Original screen stories do not take as long to write as any of these others, although they take longer than most writers are willing to believe.

Because the prejudice exists as a tremendous handicap which must be

Writer's Big Problem

By
ROBERT PIROSH

"Dear Mister: I have got a 'Genie Plotter' and Polti's 'Thirty Six Dramatic Situations,' so I can think up good plots and stories and all like that; but I am not much of a hand at finding good names for my heroes and lady heroes and others. Would appreciate if you would move a finger to help me in this matter.

(Signed) Desperate"

Dear Desperate: Glad to move a finger to help you in this matter, and believe me it is indeed a matter! I have on my desk four full length novels and no less than eighteen short stories—all of them masterpieces—which I have not submitted for publication because I have not yet found suitable names for the characters.

There are any number of systems for choosing names; but none of them, in my opinion, is worth a tinker's d-m.

The first and perhaps the most ingenious, presupposes a working knowledge of the alphabet; viz: a, b, c, d, e, f, g, etc. The writer, as an instance, is racking his brain for a good last name for his hero, a splendid young chap in a modish Glen Uphart plaid suit. He concentrates on the letter A.

"What name," he asks himself, "begins with the letter A?" He thinks of Arzoumanian, which is just fair; Applebaum, which doesn't seem to fit the hero; Anker, which brings up the disturbing question of "Anker Wat?"

With a sigh, he goes on to the letter B. Barnes sounds too rustic. Buchanan—too hard to spell. Browning—bad connotations. Then on to C and D and E and right on up to W. (It is folly to fool around with X, Y and Z.)

You will readily see that this system is no snap. You have to be on your toes every second, and even then you are by no means assured of success. With bad breaks, you are liable to wind up with a hero named Barker, a heroine named Harper, which would get the reader all mixed up. So perhaps you had better forget the alphabet, if you haven't already, and have a another system.

Here is one that will appeal to the Van Bibber in you. You walk along a crowded thoroughfare until you spot someone who resembles the character you are trying to name. Then all you have to do, theoretically, is find out the person's name and you're all set. In actual practice, however, it doesn't work out so well. Lloyd's will give you 3 to 1 that your man thinks you're a process server and runs like hell, 5 to 1 that you can't spell his name if he does tell you, and even money that he can't spell it himself.

Maybe a better bet for you is the "Write the story and let the names bloody well take care of themselves" method. This one will be your meat if you happen to be of an imaginative turn of mind—the sort of person whose whole youth can be evoked by the smell of glue, let us say, or by the pitter-patter of rain pitter-pattering in through a hole in the roof—the sort of person who is reminded of something by everything.

You simply fill in the names as they suggest themselves while you are writing the story. For example, you start the story like this:

" 'Fancy seeing you here,' sneered the elegant man-about-town.

'What's fancy about it?' nitified ——— ——— ———, our inelegant heroine.' "

Right then and there, you fill in the name that seems most appropriate. It sounds easy, but I've been thinking about it these last ten minutes, and so help me the only name that comes to my mind is Mae West. So you can see that this system is just a big bust as far as I am concerned. I merely pass it on to you for what it is worth, and will be pleased to accept your personal check for that amount.

There is another system—known as the Bell System—which puts in the hands of the writer of a book that includes a long list of names, along with addresses, phone numbers and other useful information.

I don't do so well with this phone book, as it is called in the profession. Right off the bat, I get to wondering how many Smiths there are in the book, and nothing will do but that I count them. Then of course the total must be checked aginst the Joneses. Then I discover that there really is a Poppodoppoulos and I must call in the family to show it to them. And in the end I am pretty sure to come across the name of a friend I've been neglecting, to give him a ring and to go out with him for a glass of ale and a talk about the jolly times we used to have on the old "World." (I never worked on the old "World" but the mention of it certainly does add tone to a piece of writing.)

I have no patience with Somerset Maugham or whoever it was who pointed out the Obituary Column as the best source of names for fictitious characters. It would seem to me that a person of feeling would be above robbing the dead of their names before they are decently buried. It isn't cricket. And even supposing that you could waive the question of ethics on finding just the right name; wouldn't it cramp your style to know in your heart of hearts that Grace Whinny, your vivacious heroine, was really the beloved wife of Willie Whinny, and that she had died (selig) at the age of 68? (Mineola papers please copy.)

So there you are, Desperate. There's no magic formula for choosing names. Every writer is up against the same problem, and even the best of them fall down on the job now and then. Take for instance those famous lines in that famous "June Moon" song:

"Give your child a name,
I mean a last name."

Do you seriously think that the authors couldn't have married off the father and mother respectable like. It is pretty obvious that the only hitch in the proceedings was that they just couldn't think of a good last name!

Dear Sig and Milt:

Enclosed are notes requested. They will acquaint you with details of my lurid career that may encourage some slight effort toward getting me work. Seven originals and two adaptations in seven months, sandwiched in between six acting jobs is fair enough for a fellow without background—but scarcely sufficient for one of my dynamic quality and—er—equipment. Look:

Educated at St. Francis Xavier's Jesuit College, New York City. While at school was a regular super at $7 per week at the Metropolitan Opera House. First writing work, reportorial, on the New York American, about two years.

Then went to the box office of the Percy Williams theatres in New York City as an Assistant Treasurer.

From there to the back stage as an actor in which I spent about four years in small parts in New York with leading stars . . . Lillian Russell, Wm. H. Crane . . . and others. . . . Also as a juvenile lead on the road with traveling companies.

First in pictures with the early independents about 1907. . . . Then back to the stage and returned for a long stay before and behind the camera in 1910 when I joined the original Vitagraph Company in Flatbush, Brooklyn, as a stock member . . . remaining with them for less than a year when I joined the Kalem Company on a five-year contract as feature leading man and Director . . . Stayed with them until they disbanded in 1915.

Returned to stage under contract to Oliver Morosco . . . Appearing in his New York production of "Upstairs and Down" as lead.

Short time in service with the U. S. Navy, during war. To Los Angeles as leading man of the Morosco Stock Company.

Back to pictures in 1919 as leading man and Director—a free lance.

1920 and 1921 . . . spent in traveling around the world. Then three years, as director with the Selznick Company. Part of 1927 and 1928 in Europe.

Since then have been under contract to different major studios . . . Paramount and last a two-year stretch in the big house at Universal City 1929-'30. Also interspersed in the last ten years have been some excursions back to the stage.

I have written at different times throughout my entire life. Also have been always considered a very fine liar . . . the above accounts however will bear investigation . . . while directing I wrote most of my own material . . . which, however, was during the silent days . . . I have a very interesting library of both plays and manuscripts . . . also a pictorial library of manners and customs which I collected while traveling . . . a passion of mine at all times when I can afford it and many when I can't.

I have lived for protracted stays in . . . England . . . South America . . . China and India . . . also when let alone in various parts of the United States . . . have used a typewriter all my life with two fingers and never learned to spell.

Have never lost an engagement through lack of ability in any branch of our profession, but have been thrown out the front doors of some of our best studios through my quarrelsome disposition . . . never been accused of undue modesty. I am expecting that end to my association with the Chesterfield and Invincible Companies.

Latest yarns . . . Originals . . . dialogue and continuities: "BY APPOINTMENT ONLY," "DANCE GIRL DANCE," "IN THE MONEY" "THE QUITTER" "TOGETHER AGAIN." Adaptations . . . Dialogue and continuity. "MAN OF SENTIMENT," "TWIN HUSBANDS"

The others we'll forget . . . Good dresser on and off . . . can operate a piano without putting a quarter in the slot . . . and know some of the best people in our business and all of the worst . . . and as George Ade would say: "Wishing you the same."

"Four Complaints in Three Acts"

Wrapped in Cellophane

By

FREDERICA SAGOR
and ERNEST MAAS
(After Gertrude Stein)

PRELUDE: A Narrative of Prepare for the Worst.
ACT I: Swell Fish half indoors and half out of doors.
ACT II: Might it be Hollywood if there were no Swell Fish.
ACT III: Hollywood: Its Saints and why they are so.
ACT IV: The Saints reassembled and re-enacting why they do do like they do do.

PRELUDE

To love to love to love them so.
They make Swell Fish.
Swell Fish.
Swell Fish at least.
Oh at least.
Swell Fish.
Aboriginals and sub.
Suboriginals and ab.
Ab sub sub ab.
Ab.
Sub.
And digga digga doo.
You write them.
Fish.
Swell indeedy.
So what.
Or you don't so what.
So what you don't.
Or don't you.
So what what what so what so what so what what.
But Swell Fish they make.
Swell indeedy.
Saints love to be teased.

ACT ONE

About Swell Fish.

How would you like to be fried half indoors and half out of doors? Year in and year in and in and out and in?

Indoors and out of. Fried half and half.

Like Swell Fish.

Or versa vice and not profoundly around the other way or behind the beyond the beyond of it either. They make the grandest bouillabaisse.

Which Saints are fond of.

Or should be.

Or would be.

Or may can must might would should and could be.

But.

But toasted Susie is their ice cream.

Toasted Susie is their ice cream.

Their ice cream.

You're telling us.

The answer is phfui.

ACT TWO

Money money money money money money money.

Beautiful word.

Burb of a burb.

Money.

But not for Swell Fish.

Positively not.

It would be unsaintly.

To say nothing of heterodoxical unorthodoxy.

Putting it quaintly.

So always remember to forget it if you like to remember to forget it if you like to forget to remember to forget to remember to forget it that ice cream is their toasted Susie. Hey hey.

Ice cream is their toasted Susie.

Toasted Susie is their ice cream.

Their ice cream.

Hey hey.

Some fun eh kid.

Hey hey.

And what hey hey hey hey hey hey would become of Hollywood if hey hey there were no Swell Fish to fry year in and in and out and out half indoors and half of doors or to put it more clearly and less plain what would become of it.

Become become become of it.

Become of it.

Become.

Hey hey hey hey hey hey hey what would of it become.

This is getting too coherent.

That's apparent.

Could four acts be three.

Don't ask foolish questions.

For Art's sake.

All Saints wear Brown Derbies.

ACT THREE

Saints and why they are saints no one can tell you because no one can and if one could one wouldn't wood won. Yet the Saints of Hollywood are Saints because they are not and producers is just a lovy dovy nickname for them. Although associate producers and producer associates are also that way. Only more so. Oh much.

Swell Fish have no grievance with the Saints but the FOUR COMPLAINTS IN THREE ACTS which will be four before we get through and after all four complaints in four acts which are as yet only three is little enough about Swell Fish for that matter or any other.

But this is getting too coherent again. Like some piptures.

And getting like some piptures too coherent again is not getting that incoherence which is so essential to nothing at all and destroys that unity never intended in the first place. We refer of course to Swell Fish.

Swell Fish.

Deliciously Swell Fish.

ACT FOUR

ing fad. Did I say all of us? Well, that isn't exactly true—as you shall see.

One day, as Morton was dictating a letter, an office boy entered and announced that a man outside wanted to see the boss. Unable to remember the stranger's name, the boy was sent back to get his business card. He returned to report that the visitor said he was too poor to have a business card; and moreover wouldn't explain why he had come. The boy described him as a "funny-looking little Jew."

I have often wondered since that day what might have happened to the mammoth picture industry if Morton had had a hangover, a not infrequent condition with my employer, at which times he was a highly irascible individual. This morning, however, his mood was benign; and he told the boy to show the man in.

He was, indeed, "a funny-looking little Jew"—but he was a most earnest little Jew, and an honest one. He told Morton that he owned a little nickelodeon out West; was convinced that a golden future lay ahead for the new entertainment; that he intended to open several new theatres in vacant stores in his town; and that he wished to buy our projection machines—on credit.

Morton asked him why he didn't apply to the Motion Pictures Patents Company. The visitor replied that he was on their blacklist, because he was an independent; and was not permitted to buy projection machines or cameras from anybody in the big company.

Morton studied the little chap, and after a while decided to do two things: First, violate our agreement with the great corporation by surreptitiously selling our product to the stranger; and, second, to take a chance that we would ever get our money.

The two men shook hands on the deal; and then and there began a business relationship that lasted until the tyrannical hold of the octopus was broken—largely through the efforts of this same little Jew.

Some time later, I was in Luchow's, a popular cafe on 14th Street, where it was my practice and pleasure, whenever I had the money, to drop in for a few seidels of Kulmbacher, of sanctified memory!

Leaving Luchow's I strolled toward Third Avenue, intending to visit my old friend, Tom Sharkey, in whose saloon it was likewise my wont to drop in occasionally for a beaker or two of rye.

Just before reaching Sharkey's I noticed that a former haberdasher's store was now occupied by a new business. The whole front of the place had been torn out, and hideous metallic music was blaring from the cylinder of an Edison gramaphone.

Entering, I discovered that it was a "peep show," one of the earliest forms of amusement which utilized the principle of the motion picture. A number of men and women were inserting pennies and nickels in the slots of the apparatus around the room; and out of curiosity I followed suit. Presently, I talked to the attendant, or manager, about the new enterprise.

As I started out of the Arcade I saw two men standing near the entrance. Pausing to look into another penny exhibit, I could not help overhearing their conversation. They were wondering where they could raise about a thousand dollars to open up another place. The attendant said one of the men owned the Arcade. After a while I proceeded on my way.

I have often wondered since that day what would have happened to me had I had the happy inspiration to offer those two men the thousand dollars I then had on deposit in a bank. Undoubtedly, they would have gratefully given me a handsome share in their future enterprises.

"The little Jew" who came into Baxter Morton's office that day was Carl Laemmle—and one of the two men in the "peep show" on Fourteenth Street was Adolph Zukor.

But, as I said at the start of this reminiscence, everybody thought the movies would turn out to be just a fad. Did I say everybody? Well, obviously that isn't exactly true, either.

Funny, isn't it—how, when you start to tell a simple little story, you use up so many words! I intended to relate four or five little incidents—and I find that two of them have used up all my space.

Well, maybe in next year's annual Writers' Number I'll continue these episodes. Or maybe, if Billy's readers are interested, I might narrate other "Paragraphs from a Reporter's Notebook" from time to time.

In any event, I still maintain that only writers can write stories—that producers should produce, that directors should direct, that stars should act—and that all three of them ought to keep their hands off of the writing of stories.

A Fairway to Arntz

the man who had on Hamlet's costume.

"He's busy."

"I know. The girl who sits at the mahogany desk on the second floor told me that. But do you know him when you see him?"

"He doesn't know me."

"That's not exactly what I asked you. I just wondered if you would know Mr. Arntz if you saw him."

"He's on Lot. No. Nine. But he's busy."

I thanked the man who wasn't Hamlet and was going to give him a cigarette but I only had one left so didn't. I was smoking my last cigarette when I strolled up beside a man I thought might be Mr. Arntz because he was on Lot Nine. He was sitting on the floor with five other people in the middle of a set which looked like it might be The Mount of Olives and they were all shooting crap.

"Shoot the works!" said a lady who was dressed like the Virgin Mary as she chucked a fifty-dollar bill in the center of the circle of players and spit on the dice.

"I'll tek it all!" said the man who I was now pretty sure was Mr. Arntz.

The lady dressed like the Virgin Mary threw a natural.

"Holy Smoke!" she said, "I'm hot!"

She pulled the two fifty-dollar bills away and replaced them with a one dollar bill. Two men who might have been Apostles each faded her for fifty cents. She threw a four.

"A hundred she 'fours,' " I said and I dropped a hundred-dollar bill over the Virgin Mary's shoulder.

"I'll tek it all!" said the man who I was now certain was Mr. Arntz. I was going to introduce myself to Mr. Arntz, but I was afraid I'd win and then—if it really was Mr. Arntz—he might take a sudden dislike to me and say he never made an appointment with me by wire and that wouldn't be the truth and I'd lose my temper and it would get in the papers and there would be another scrap like the Tully-Gilbert bout only it would be the Arntz-Heminway bout.

Well, the Virgin Mary threw a four the first crack. Mr. Arntz said, 'Jeez'! and I picked up the two one-hundred dollar bills and said thanks and thanked the Virgin Mary for throwing a four and left the set that looked like the Mount of Olives and never met Mr. Arntz because I had won his hundred dollars and I was afraid he wouldn't like me.

I walked through the gate and gave up a pass which someone had sent me to the Roosevelt Hotel to a man with a uniform who wasn't very civil for he didn't say 'thank you' or 'good bye' or anything. I realized I would have to approach a man as busy as Mr. Arntz through different channels. Mr. Arntz was a busy man.

When I stepped off the sidewalk in front of the X. Y. Z. studios I nearly got hit by a driver who I know would have been a hit-and-run driver if he had hit me. But he didn't hit me because he put on his brakes and missed me. His brakes squeaked. The squeak reminded me of my bed in the Roosevelt Hotel and the bed in the Roosevelt Hotel reminded me of the little blond girl in the coffee shop with the tired face and slim hips. I wondered if she knew Mr. Arntz and could say a good word for me and get me an introduction that would be a better introduction than telling him who I was to his face after taking a hundred dollars off him.

I walked into the coffee shop in the Roosevelt Hotel and found the blond girl still pouring coffee. She looked a little more tired than she had in the morning and I could understand why because I would get tired myself just pouring coffee out of the same nickel tank all day. It would be more fun to be a cook. She recognized me and asked me if I wanted some more coffee and doughnuts and if I got my job in the movies and if I liked Hollywood.

"Just coffee," I said, "I'm not hungry, really."

I watched her as she filled the thick cup with coffee and I knew I hadn't been mistaken when I thought her hips were thin. I hoped, for her sake, she'd never have a baby because her hips were too thin to be safe.

"Do you know Mr. Arntz out at X. Y. Z.?" I asked her as she wiped somebody else's coffee off the counter in front of me.

"Do I know him?"

"Yes. That's what I asked you, I think."

"I'll say I do. The skunk ruined me when I first come to Hollywood."

"The beast!" I said.

"Why?"

"Just because he is, to have done that to you."

"I mean why do you want to know if I know him?"

"Because I want to know him. I have an appointment with him but I don't know him."

The blond girl put her elbows on the counter and then put her chin in the cups of her hands and looked at me.

"I know a lot about him which I could tell you. And then when you know what I know it wouldn't be very difficult for you to get to know him."

The blond girl's idea seemed like a good one so I paid for my coffee with Mr. Arntz's hundred dollar bill and when the blond girl had gone to the cashier in the Hotel and had brought me back ninety nine dollars and ninety cents, I told her to keep the change and told her I would meet her later and she could then tell me what she knew about Mr. Arntz. Her face looked prettier and less tired when she tucked the bills in the pocket of her blue apron and told me to meet her in the lobby at nine-thirty that night. I went out onto Hollywood Boulevard. But I came back again because I had forgotten to ask her what her name was and I thought it would be just as well to know her name insomuch as I had given her a hundred dollars for a cup of coffee and had only drunk half the coffee. And she seemed to think she knew a lot about Mr. Arntz which would help me to get to know him.

"Hortense," she said.

"All right, Hortense, I'll see you later in the lobby." I pressed her hand. "Dear Hortense," I said and went out.

I met Hortense in the lobby of the Roosevelt Hotel at nine-thirty and she had on a dish-like hat with a feather in it like a feather in the tail of an African bird I once saw in the Zoo in Cairo.

"There's too many people here. I can't hear what you're saying," I said, "Let's go up to my room on the sixth floor. It looks out on Grauman's Chinese Theatre and the bed is hidden in the wall so you have nothing to fear, Hortense, because it's quite a job to let it down."

"It isn't if you know the knack."

"The knack of what?"

"Of letting it down."

A Fairway to Arntz

She said this just as we got in the elevator. The boy driving the elevator had a mole on the side of his neck which disappared under the edge of his collar when he turned around to look at Hortense and me. I knew what he was thinking.

"Sixth floor," I said.

He stopped at the sixth floor and let us out and we walked down the corridor and around the corner to my room.

Hortense told me all I wanted to know about how to get to know Mr. Arntz and she also told me she liked me because she knew I wouldn't like Mr. Arntz. I told her I knew I wouldn't like Mr. Arntz any better than she did. Not much better anyhow. Of course Mr. Arntz hadn't ruined me so I would like him a little better than she did. But I told her I'd have to pretend to like him because he would be my boss and if he knew I didn't like him he might not renew my contract and then I couldn't pay her a hundred dollars any more for a cup of coffee.

"Are you happy, darling? Because I'm happy as hell," she said.

"I'm always happy," I said, "but I'm worrying."

"Don't worry, darling. I ain't worrying. I'm fine. I feel fine."

"Do you really?"

"Yes, grand, darling."

"I feel grand too. But it annoys me. I hoped it wouldn't happen."

"Hoped what wouldn't happen, darling?"

"Hoped this bed wouldn't squeak again. I meant to buy some oil or complain to the management."

I went to sleep about three o'clock wondering if, when I met Mr. Arntz, he would remember that I was the man who bet a hundred dollars that the lady dressed as the Virgin Mary would throw a four.

Don't Write Originals

overcome, original screen stories have to be better stories than a great many printed tales. They do not have to be written so well, for good writing will not sell them. They must be clear, however, emphatic and logical as any good mechanical story is logical. There is a technique of presentation that is individual and economic, and the manuscripts should be as finished, in their way, as stories submitted for the printer.

A first-rate original for the screen is as spontaneous as any novel or play idea. It is not an old novel idea, squeezed into a few pages, to avoid hard work; it is not the outline of a play discarded because the author could not fit it into the dramatic form.

A screen original is an original story, conceived for and fitting the screen. It fulfills the standards for stage plays inasmuch as dramatic construction is concerned, but like the novel, it can show a number of people in a number of places, heightening dramatic interest by its flexibiliy. It has, like every other form of writing, its limitations, and often its very flexibility is one of its greatest limitations.

But the time will come when authors, and producers, too, will realize that the screen is a medium for an individual and original method of story-telling. When that millenium arrives, the writers will respect the screen form enough to realize that it deserves better than the cast-off, worn-out plots that turn editorial boards bitter at mere thought of originals; and the producers will see the screen story as a screen story, and not as a vehicle that was holy because it was printed, and therefore, twisted and contorted, can make a better picture than a story planned and written for pictures.

in the meantime, spontaneity gets its chance occasionally and, while they keep on telling you there is no chance for originals, they continue to live up to their whimsical reputation by producing them.

literary page in the world? Didn't I write half a dozen novels and get pretty good reviews?

I should have said nothing about reviews.

"Reviews? By whom . . by what?" demanded M. Jefferson, champion of the proletariat.

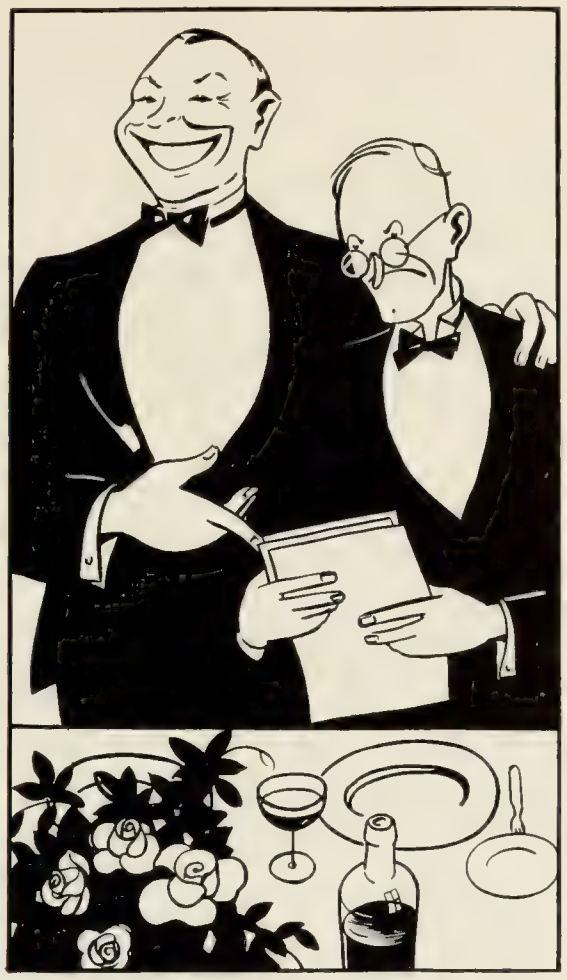
I had to admit that never had one of THE CRIERS' hundred editors praised my work. I bowed my head. M. Jefferson was touched by my humility. He was touched, perhaps, because he had yet to touch me for the fifty dollars that would pay for the family's dining car charges.

"You can never tell," he consoled me. "There is Swane over there with tickets in his pocket."

"Who? Me?" And Swane unlimbered to renew hostilities.

The appearance of the roll that was to have paid the installment on the flivver stopped their bickering. I split the sixty bucks between them and turned to my own troubles, wondering what the Missus would say when I appeared before her, a penitent.

They repaid the loan out of the first week's pay. I heard no more from them until some months later. Then I heard from them. Apparently their artistry did not get into their pictures. I have their word for it. From each came substantially the same note. Here is Kupdrayer's:



"Don't go to see WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT. Von Sternberg ruined it. My name is on it though, I objected. I refused to see the finished picture. Wait till you see my book."

I have been waiting vainly for more than two years, and have seen neither book, play or letter. I did read a piece in THE REPORTER that M. Jefferson Kupdrayer charged Frank Handel Swane with stealing his credit. I cannot understand why twenty-dollar-a-week birds earning five hundred, should need credit.

Hollywood seems to do things to people—even to great artists, like my pair. It wrecks their morale, their art. It is terrifying. As for my pair, they never did get wise to Hollywood, though Hollywood got wise to them. By last accounts they were lecturing on the "Fascism of Motion Pictures"—to their creditors.

Ever sit in on a banquet while a toastmaster, with more cracks to his line than a syndicated columnist, introduced a speaker who was a washout? It happens often.

Think about your theatre the same way. You book a feature, promote it, stunt it, advertise it to a fare-thee-well. And you pack them. You're just like the toastmaster. You've got your customers on edge, waiting for something swell.

And then . . . up comes the speaker of the evening—your sound—the most vital part of your show. And what do your customers do?

If you have High Fidelity, they sit thrilled to the most perfect sound that money can buy. They listen to realism unrivalled by life itself. In short they listen to natural sound, and they go home, sold on your house, sure to come next week.

INDUSTRY ON PAN TODAY

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•WHY not Will Rogers for President? President of the Academy.

Head of this industry's creative branches.

Many years ago they tried to run Will for the House of Representatives and later for the Senate. Both bids he rejected. He might like the sound of the President title, in fact, he grabbed himself a vote or two about six years ago at the Democratic convention, but that was in fun.

The creators here in Hollywood need a leader, require a man who represents everything that Rogers has. Why not talk him into taking the job? Can you imagine the influence the industry would immediately achieve. Where we have not one representative in the Senate or House (and every other large industry has at least one) we would have Rogers a representative who would, at one and the same time, properly represent us against every agency that is pot-shooting at the picture industry. And at the same time he would have the confidence of the industry, and top it off by being the American citizen whose heart is closest to the great American heart.

And with Rogers sitting at the head of the table, the producers will think twice before they start pushing the creators about. The men and women who make the pictures in this industry would have in Rogers a man who knows most of the answers for the rackets that are constantly used against them.

The Academy has been walking on its heels for the past few months. It became afflicted with a political disease that bowed it down. It needs a stimulant such as only Rogers could administer and, with such stimulation it could—and would—become the greatest power for the GOOD of the entire business.

What do you think of the idea?

And in mentioning the Academy and Rogers we are not speaking with any thought of throwing rocks at the Writers Guild or Actors Guild. Both are NECESSARYand both can function —much better with a better Academy. For with that organization working as it should, the creators would have a clearing house for their grievances that could not be had, to advantage, in any other body.

London—Katharine Hepburn is expected to go into an immediate huddle with Alexander Korda about his offer of $200,000 for one picture on her arrival here. She sailed from New York Saturday.

Actors' Guild May Postpone Election

According to report, it is quite likely that the Screen Actors' Guild will postpone its annual election meeting for one month.

The meeting is scheduled for April, but Eddie Cantor does not return here until the first week in May, and some leaders feel that it would be a wise move to wait until his arrival. The plan is only in the conversational stage.

Sam Goldwyn Returns; Starts Work Next Month

Sam Goldwyn came back from New York Saturday, all ready to plunge into production work. "Resurrection," starring Anna Sten and Fredric March, will be the first to get under way, starting April 15.

That will be followed by "Barbary Coast," with Gary Cooper starred and William Wellman directing. Eddie Cantor will be back May 1 to go into his musical and, after that, another Anna Sten is set.

The loss reported above is a decrease from the previous year's figure of $1,250,283, and is a bit better

THE LOW DOWN

So Saturday night there was still another party in honor of His Excellency Charles Davila, Roumanian Minister (given by Dorothy di Frasso) and a very gay one that lasted way past anybody's bedtime. It was an all-talkie, all-singie, production with Count Carpegna (at the piano) and Tullio Carminati, Virginia Gilbert, Countess Zoppola, Dolores Del Rio and Don Stewart furnishing the music, if we may call it that. The Clark Gables, Lydia Macy, Harvey Ladew, the Gary Coopers, Kay Francis, Jessica Barthelmess, Andy Lawlor, Mrs. Phillip Benkard, the Sonny Chalifs, John Farrow, Maureen O'Sullivan, the David Selznicks, among those present.

Have a laff! Y'know, when Earl Carroll brought those eleven beooties out here with him to be in his "Murder at the Vanities," he also brought with him Tom Rooney (his business manager) and Mrs. Rooney, who has been acting as chaperone de luxe for the eleven show-girls. Now Mrs. Rooney is one elegant eyeful. So much so, that a test of her was made at Paramount the other day and she will be seen in "Cleopatra." While the gals she chaperoned—who were receiving all the publicity—are still in the "atmosphere" class.

Guy Kibbee spent the entire morn, the other morn, doing an eating scene over at Warners. From 9 to 12 he did nothing but eat, and by noon had naturally reached the bursting point. Hugh Herbert, who knew perfectly well what was going on, came on Kibbee's set just as the 12 o'clock whistle blew, and walking up to Kibbee (just as though he'd suddenly "arrived in town") said, "Come on, Guy, I'll buy you that lunch I owe you today!" Yeh, Hugh is Scotch.

Struss Celebrates

Karl Struss, Paramount cameraman, celebrated a fifteenth anniversary Saturday. Struss, as a still man, asked C. B. DeMille for a job fifteen years ago when DeMille was making "For Better, For Worse." He is now shooting DeMille's "Cleopatra."

New York REVIEWS

"SIX OF A KIND"
Paramount prod.; director, Leo McCarey; writers, Keene Thompson, Walter DeLeon, Harry Ruskin; photographer, Henry Sharp.
Paramount Theatre

World-Telegram: The piece is filled with set after set of situations that are gorgeous in their nonsense and that make this "Six of a Kind" a grand and hilarious frolic. People as it is with such excellent clowners, it is difficult to say which one of them is the most side-splitting. But if I had to make a choice I would say that W. C. Fields gave me my heartiest laughs.

American: A really uproarious farce, presenting a half-dozen of our greatest current comics supported by a full score of skilled troupers. It is simply a melange of divine nonsense, which, without rhyme and with no better reason than Bill Fields, et al., enables the customers to indulge in an enjoyable hysteria. The direction is swift and sure, and never affords an opportunity to quit giggling.

Mirror: The inspired, the glorious Mr. William C. Fields contributes monumental nonsense to this comedy, stealing the picture neatly and prettily. His clowning is sublime.

Times: A merry, mad affair detailing alarming happenings on a cross-country automobile jaunt. All those connected with this farce do excellent work, including the Great Dane.

News: Leo McCarey, who has a genius for putting over comedy gags and situations, directed this stimulating comedy that is keeping the audiences of both theatres in high good humor. The entire film doesn't run more than an hour with the laughs coming at the rate of about one a minute.

Sun: A friendly, likeable picture with almost no plot but plenty of chuckles. These six slightly daffy, wholly charming people can manage to carry along a picture, plot or no plot, jokes or no jokes, all by themselves.

Post: Its comedy situations are laid out on more conventional lines, but it has moments of hilarious fun; a fact that could hardly be otherwise in the hands of so variedly gifted a band of comedians.

Journal: It doesn't happen very often that six superb comedians are gathered together in one picture. Nor that a director, blessed with such a cast, is wise enough to let the players do the work in which they're so highly skilled. But it all happens on the Paramount screen in a piece known as "Six of a Kind." It is utterly hilarious. And utterly mad. It is swell entertainment.

"MIDNIGHT"
Universal release; director, Chester Erskin; writers, Claire and Paul Sifton.
Roxy Theatre

Mirror: A unique motion picture in that it makes no compromise with movie technique. Dignified, heavy and entirely mental, it is a play of ideas, thoughts and conversation. Psychological drama may be highly diverting in the theatre. It makes an odd movie and one with a limited appeal.

Herald-Tribune: Despite Mr. Erskin's earnestness and care and his wise refusal to inject extraneous humor into his grim narrative, the story remains equally confused and curiously dull, unconvincing drama. The narrative loses in force and conviction and ends by seeming only dull.

American: It is a slow, but plodding entertainment, a study in psychology, which, despite its suspenseful atmosphere, becomes wearying before a finale is attained. It is, perhaps, too "mental" for a movie.

Post: There is no reason why a theme of this kind couldn't be lathered into a highly dramatic story. The trappings of melodrama are present in "Midnight," but they never succeed in seeming other than if they had been pulled out of an old trunk. The picture suffers throughout from ponderous and uncertain treatment, and its pace is at all times too slow for comfort.

World-Telegram: Although nothing of vital importance to the welfare of the cinema has been accomplished by the production of "Midnight," Chester Erskin, the director, has made a curiously disturbing film For in spite of its over-stylized direction it is exciting much of the tme and good melodrama the rest.

Journal: "Midnight" is a lugubrious conversational drama more suited to the stage than the screen. A stage play can sustain interest in characters who stand around talking and thinking (if the dialog and thoughts are interesting), but a motion picture has to move.

Times: Although it has the effective carpentry of melodrama, it is a story of unusual interest. In Mr. Erskin's direction it emerges on the Roxy screen as a nervous and somewhat hysterical tale, blurred occasionally in the telling, but consistently compelling.

'The Show Must Go On'

Carrying out the theatrical tradition that the show must go on, Frank Borzage returned to the Univesal lot Saturday and resumed direction on "Little Man, What Now?"

His father died Friday morning from injuries received in an automobile accident late Thursday night. Universal promptly halted production on the picture indefinitely, but Frank remained away but one day, Friday, and was on the set early Saturday morning. Universal authorities announced that he will stop only long enough to attend the funeral. Those who know the deep love Frank had for his father can appreciate his attitude.

Agent Battles May Go to Labor Board

Attorney Milton Silverberg, representing Robert Riskin, the writer, who is being sued by the Small-Landau agency, took a legal step Saturday which may result in taking all such suits out of the courts and throwing them into the lap of the State Labor Board.

Silverberg filed a demurrer to the Small-Landau suit in which he claimed that jurisdiction in such cases should rest with the Labor Board. The agents are burned up over the idea because the Labor Board already plans to supervise the agency field and, if Silverberg is successful, the going will be much harder.

Casting Directors Guests

Leon Gordon will be host tonight at the "White Cargo" performance at the Playhouse to the casting directors of the principal motion picture companies and members of their staffs.

Fox Borrows Westcott

Fox has borrowed Gordon Westcott from Warners for a top spot in "Call It Luck," which the Sol Wurtzel unit is producing. Herbert Mundin and Pat Paterson have the leading roles under James Tinling's direction.

'STAND ON YOUR FEET' GIVES FOX FILM A REAL WINNER

Picture a Hit in Every Department

"STAND ON YOUR FEET'
(Formerly "Fox Follies")

Fox

Direction .....Hamilton MacFadden
Story Idea....Will Rogers, Philip Klein
Screen Play and Dialog....Ralph Spence
Music .....Jay Gorney
Songs and Lyrics: Irving Caesar, Jack Yellen, Lew Brown.
Photography.....Ernest Palmer and L. W. O'Connell
Producer .....Winfield Sheehan
Associate Producer.....Lew Brown
Cast: Warner Baxter, Madge Evans, James Dunn, Sylvia Froos, John Boles, Arthur Byron, Shirley Temple, Ralph Morgan, Jimmy Dallas, "Aunt Jemima," Mitchell and Durant, Nick Foran, Nigel Bruce, Stepin Fetchit.

Oakland.—If audience reaction is any criterion, Fox has a winner in "Stand on Your Feet," the re-named "Fox Follies," which was previewed at the Grand Lake Theatre here last last night. It is undoubtedly a standout picture, with a creditable cast, plenty of action, an opportune theme that carries a punch, catchy music and spectacular settings.

The title does not do justice to the picture. It should have been called "Out of the Red." The climaxing song, featuring the grand finale of men and women of all occupations in a triumphant march back to prosperity hits an extremely popular note and should be one of the smashing successes of the year.

The plot in its entirety sounds an optimistic note on the country's determined push out of the depression. The tuneful music and clever comedy are paraded in rapid-fire action to lighten the burden of distress, and epitomizes the indomitable American spirit overcoming adversity.

Warner Baxter reaches new heights in the stellar role of Lawrence Cromwell, the National Secretary of Amusement, chosen to aid recovery through placing the populace in a happy frame of mind. Ably supporting him is Madge Evans as the executive of his juvenile department, whose job is to build up the morale of the coming generations.

The inevitable romance adds a pleasing note. In its march through a period of economic stress to prosperity and happiness, the picture lets love, laughter and song hold sway by means of a galaxy of admirable entertainers and sensational chorus ensembles.

Among the big chorus numbers is one showing toe dancers on top of the spray of a fountain, a clever takeoff on a doll dance, in comedy miniature. There is a great comedy number led by "Aunt Jemima," and the final plunge into the "March of Prosperity," with the chorus girls swarming all over tall buildings, makes one of the most spectacular and beautiful effects yet seen on the screen.

In addition to Warner Baxter and Madge Evans, Jimmy Dunn makes a great personal hit. He also aids and abets in the making of a new child star, the joint song and dance done by himself and little Shirley Temple being one of the most delightful features of the production.

Stepin Fetchit and a score of others drew hearty applause for their comedy efforts. The music is fully up to the high standard of the rest of the picture. Among the songs that, judging by their reception, must be labeled as hits, are "Our Last Night Together," featuring John Boles; the Dunn-Temple number, "Baby, Take a Bow," "I'm Laughing," "Broadway's Gone Hill-Billy" and the finale, "Out of the Red.'

No especial credit can be given to any one person. It must be shared by Winfield Sheehan, the producer; Director Hamilton MacFadden; Lew Brown and Jay Gorney, who did the music; Will Rogers and Philip Klein, who suggested the original idea; and, in fact, everyone who had anything to do with making the production the success it is destined to be.

Oscar Tosses Party for 'Darktown Strutters'

Paramount's Oscar Smith played host yesterday to the elite of Central Avenue and had Duke Ellington and his band as guests at a surprise party given for the birthday of his three-year-old daughter, Little Depression.

'Catherine' Still Tops in London

London.—"Catherine the Great" continues to knock 'em over in this city, and is once again held over for an additional week. Other pictures that have proved strong enough to run into extra weeks are "Jack Ahoy," "Footlight Parade," "Man's Castle" and "Bolero."

New pictures coming to town to take their chances with the public are "Emperor Jones,' at the Marble Arch;"Search for Beauty" at the Plaza, on the same bill with "Ann Vickers"; and "Mystery of Mr. X" replaces "Queen Christina" at the Empire after four terrific weeks for the Garbo picture.

Ostrow Speculates In Original Story

Lou Ostrow personally purchased "Alias Mary Dow," an original story by Forrest Halsey and William Allen Johnston, negotiations going through the Inloes and France agency.

Monogram producer plans to sell it to another producer in the same manner that Edgar Selwyn, of MGM, purchased "Baby in the Ice Box" and sold it to Charles R. Rogers.

Roberts Will Direct Cooper in 'Honor Bright'

Paramount has set Stephen Roberts to direct the next Gary Cooper starring vehicle, "Honor Bright," when the star returns from MGM, where he is making "Operator 13" with Marion Davies.

Registrations Must Be Pared 20 Percent

Real headaches begin tomorrow night for both the extras and the NRA code committee for extras. Tomorrow night the committee starts work on the problem of reclassification of this large group of people.

Reclassification, in reality, means the elimination of many thousands from the registrations at Central Casting. There are some 17,000 registered extras now on the Hollywood lists. The code calls for the paring down of this group to a figure somewhere between 2500 and 3000.

Subcommittees of the Extras Committee have been working on the problem for some time. Tomorrow night they will present their suggestions to the main committee, which meets with Una Hopkins, chairman pro tem. Mabel Kinney, permanent chairman, is still in Sacramento, where she is a witness in a suit against the State. She expects to return late this week.

Lew Brown Signed By Fox for 2 Years

Fox has signed Lew Brown to a two-year ticket at a salary of $2,500 a week for the first year and $3,500 for the second term.

Brown will be in complete control of the musicals made on the lot, which seems to eliminate Buddy De Sylva and George White from future Fox reckoning.

United Artists Will Release Vidor Film

King Vidor has concluded his deal with United Artists for the release of his first independent production, "Our Daily Bread," which will get under way soon with Karen Morley and Tom Keene in the top spots and John T. Qualen, Addison Richards and Barbara Pepper playing supporting roles.

Vidor moved his unit out of the General Service Studios, where he had been preparing for the past two months, to the United Artists lot because of his releasing agreement.

Beecher to Strickling

New York.—Milton Beecher, who handles fan magazine contacts on the staff of Howard Dietz at MGM, is getting a break with a Coast trip to confer with Howard Strickling at the studio.

Para. Drops Story

Paramount has relinquished its option on the Damon Runyon story, "Lemon Drop Kid."

Yesterday in New York with Helen Gwynne

It would seem that there is the reverse side to the autograph racket too. That is, according to a friend of ours who witnessed the following incident. It happened during the last visit to New York of a very well known male "he-man" star. This star had draped himself over a lounge in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria, one arm flung over the back of the couch, hand hanging over the back of it. As he lounged thus, a couple of cute little gals walked over to him and asked him if he would mind signing his autograph in their memory books. The star literally jumped into sitting position and as he did so, the hand that had been hanging over the back of the settee came forward and it came forward with a fountain pen in it and said fountain pen was all open and ready for work!

Victor Emanuel gave one of those enormous parties in honor of the Lionel Barrymores the other evening and along with them as the star of the evening was the latest social sensation of New York, the son of the Aga Khan of India. Lou Holtz, Phil Baker, George Gershwin entertained and Jane Winton obliged with a coupla songs. Muriel D'Orsa and Ben Finney still going places together were there, along with Tallulah Bankhead, Lilyan Tashman and a fine spattering of socialites.

Mayfair very gay in spite of the fact that New York is again being blanketed with snow, (and the diehards still insist that the blizzard of '88 was the best example of that kind of outdoor sport,) with Harry Evans dancing Harlem sharpie until the wee sma' hours and driving the Rhumba experts currazy. The Morgan gals were there with Aga Khan, Jr. in tow. The George Murphys, Billy Seamans, Ethel Levey, Inez Courtney, Marian Spitzer, Herb Harris, Johnny Walker, Frank Hunter, Marge Franklin, Everett Jacobs, Lil Tashman, Eddie Wasserman, Marion Saportas and Winkie Thomas couldn't quite make up their minds whether Harry Evans was the sporting thing to do at the Mayfair.

Ed Lowe gets back from Chicago this week and it looks as though he and Lil will do personal appearances at the Paramount. . . . The Frank Morgans celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary over the week-end by spending most of their time at Twenty-one. . . . and speaking of that number, the main attraction about buying your liquor from 21 Brands, Inc. is that Frank Hunter, tennis champ, is the seller. . . . Jack Kirkland recovering from la grippe, planning to marry the gal when she arrives from the coast. . . . It looks as though Jock Whitney is the white hope of the picture industry. . . . Every time a new deal is discussed, Whitney is supposed to be the backer. . . . A Spaniard, in very broken English criticized his own query neatly when he asked, "What is is the attraction in that fellow doing that play in Hollywood now, called 'Autumn CROAKUM'?"

Industry on Pan Today

the apparent apathy or befuddlement of the industry itself.

For example, at a late hour last night it could not be ascertained whether the Hays office was going to take a definite stand at the hearings, or rest its case on the testimony of various club and women's groups which have been allied with it in recent years in the attempted "censorship from within."

Charles C. Pettijohn and other officials of the Hays office are in Washington, but they have made no announcement as to their plans and seem uncertain just what action they will take.

Every picture man to whom you talk in town tonight is a picture of bewilderment. Local men know how easily it is possible for the Patman bill to slip through to become law, in the present attitude of Congress towards regulating anything and everything.

The Patman measure would create a Federal motion picture commission with power to regulate films in interstate commerce—a roundabout way of giving it censorship powers through other clauses which prohibit interstate commerce to "films which tend to debase or corrupt morals," or "reflect disrespect for law or religion."

And the bill introduced by Patman on Saturday, prohibiting compulsory block booking, adds a clause compelling distributors to furnish "accurate synopses" of pictures to all theatres. This would play havoc with present sales methods, by which programs are sold in August and September and where, in many cases, the producer has little more than a theme or a title on his schedule. If producers are compelled to furnish "accurate synopses"—and then later pictures to live up to those synopses—it is going to mean a revolution in present picture-making methods.

TRIBUTE

Fox Takes Two

Finishing "Scarlet Empress" at Paramount, Bert Glennon treks to Fox, closely followed by Theodor Sparkuhl, another Paramount contracted cameraman, who is loaned to Fox for another picture beginning today.

Stengler Checks In

Mac Stengler checked in at his home lot (M. G. M.) after completing nice assignment on special location stuff in Florida. Mostly fishing stuff for shorts but the footage is packed with thrills for the hook hounds.

Warren Sets Record

Over the week-end Dwight Warren turned fade-out on the two hundredth production photographed by him for Educational. Two hundred and first is under way. In this changing and changeable business this is a record.

Avil Returns

Gordon Avil, longtime staff cameraman for M. G. M. at Culver City, and recently associated with Jam Handy industrial films of Detroit, is back in town shooting scenes for a big industrial; also turning out some backgrounds on an air epic.

Assistants Officially Recognized

One of the most unexpected but most pleasing features of the Academy Awards Banquet was recognition of six assistant directors. One from each studio of major importance received a scroll of honor.

When Will Rogers made his snappy little speech to Charles Lang, he pulled a reply from the winning photographer which was right in line with the above.

In a few well chosen (and very sincere) words, Lang gave credit to his crew and the Paramount lab.

We can't even hope (as yet) to have the Academy recognize the assistant cameramen—but unofficially there's no rule or reason to deny us that right.

Therefore—we are today presenting to Bob Pittack (Lang's operative photographer on "Farewell To Arms") and to Cliff Shirpser (Lang's assistant) The Brulatour Bulletin Trophies for the winning camera crew. This will be permanent practice in years to come. To Mr. Lang we extend our heartiest congratulations.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION:

WHAT'S YOUR FEELING TOWARD THE PRESENT SPEED OF SUPER-SENSITIVE EMULSION?

JOHN SEITZ (Fox): The ideal in photography is to be able to reproduce exactly what the eye sees. The speed of present-day super-sensitive films does not exactly meet this ideal despite the fact that the color sensitivity and general photographic quality are really very fine.

ARTHUR EDESON (Warner Bros.): The speed of super-sensitive negatives which we're using today seems quite adequate for all practical purposes. Generally speaking, the broad improvement in photography during the past two or three years may be laid right in the lap of this fine negative film. I'd like it a bit slower for exteriors.

CHICK McGILL (Twentieth Century): I think it's just right. I certainly hope you make no change in the present emulsion speed.

JOHN FULTON (Universal): As my present work largely consists of special effects, miniatures, projection backgrounds, etc., we take advantage of everything the emulsion has to offer in the way of speed. I think you can never make a negative too fast for me.

JOE WALKER (Columbia): If a faster emulsion could be developed and consistently maintained without the sacrifice of any of the present high quality, I'd certainly welcome it.

CHARLES LANG (Paramount): I have felt for a long time that motion picture photography can be improved further only with the aid of a more highly sensitized panchromatic emulsion. The quality today is pleasing, but in my opinion not always a natural visual reproduction.

JOE AUGUST (Columbia): It's perfect . . . don't change it.

BENNY KLINE (Columbia): I wouldn't know what to do with more speed, but I certainly don't want less.

CENSORS TAKE IT ON CHIN

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•THERE'S an interesting picture presented on that Radio lot. A human interest picture. To get the full kick of the human interest you have to go back over the events of a year or so.

You remember those days? When we read, "Selznick signs new contract; Selznick won't sign; Selznick in, Selznick out."

Then followed the period, "Cooper quitting, Cooper staying; Cooper going away, Cooper coming back."

Those who know their picture business can readily see how such happenings encourage the formation of anvil choruses. At the first breath hinting that an executive is about to go, you can usually find the knockers gathering courage to come from beneath the rocks.

Which is the why of the human interest thrill we used to get on our visits to the Radio lot during those various periods.

Even after David Selznick had moved his bag and baggage, his former associates—and employees—couldn't seem to say enough good things about him. (Remember a congratulatory paid ad they took on the occasion of "Dinner at Eight's" premiere?)

Even now, with Merian Cooper vacationing, and his exact status undecided until he reaches his own decision on his return, they go out of their way at the Radio lot—from Pan Berman down—to lay the credit thick on Merian Cooper for the great job he did before illness overtook him.

If you don't think these things are unusual, just start a rumor on a few other lots we could mention that an important executive is on the way out, and see how quickly the cackler's chorus gains courage.

Uh-huh!

That chap, Ben Kahane, must have harmonizing qualities of leadership; Pan Berman must have straight line constructive abilities; executives like Frank O'Heron must be able to keep their eye on the ball and let the gossips fall where they may.

A gang like that can be expected to go places.

And a spirit such as you see on the Radio lot these days rallying behind

Katharine's Scene

New York.—Whether Katharine Hepburn is staging an act, or acting on a stage, is hard to figure, but she let intimates know before she left here that she would be in no hurry to return to the States if Radio did not meet her desires on the future.

Congress Has Law To Help Bankrupts

New York.—Speed for the approval of reorganization schemes on which both Paramount and Radio are anxiously waiting was indicated as a possibility today with the introduction in Congress of an amendment to the Federal bankruptcy law by which Federal courts could okay new set-ups if two-thirds of the creditors and a majority of the stockholders approve.

If the legislation passes both houses, it would hasten presentation and probably approval of their respective reorganization plans.

New Theatre Group

New York.—Theatre Mart Group has been organized to produce plays with offices at 1520 Broadway. Those in it are Barry Thomashefsky, Boris Bernardi and Jay Adler. They will present a series of plays similar in nature to that which made Group Theatre popular.

Carr and Ostrow East

Going to attend the Monogram franchise holders' convention, Trem Carr hops a train for Atlantic City March 27 and Lou Ostrow leaves two days later. Convention will be in session from April 4 to 7.

Congress Expected To Drop Censorship But Will Hold Hearings On Block Booking

Washington.—Motion picture censors and the entire idea of censorship took it on the chin for two hours yesterday at the hearing before the House Committee on Foreign and Interstate Commerce. When the hearing closed there was grave doubt if any more time would be wasted on the Federal censorship idea as contained in the Patman bill, although more hearings on the block booking feature are sure to follow.

In the first place, Congress is in no mood to inflict another eighteenth amendment trouble on the public and,

Kent For Showdown On Fox West Coast

Kramer Sees Goldwyn

New York.—Earl Kramer, one-time Universal sales executive, later in Europe for FBO, and most recently in the Far East for United Artists, is on his way to the Coast to confer with Sam Goldwyn on a deal to represent Goldwyn as a specialist in Europe.

Loew's Slips Over Deal for Poli Dates

New York.—Big news for MGM stockholders was contained in the announcement on Nicholas Schenck's arrival here that the Loew circuit now controlled Poli, Inc., with its eighteen New England houses. A. C. Blumenthal, now president of Poli, referred all queries to Schenck. In the absence of any record of a real estate transfer, local film men interpreted the whole flurry as really meaning that MGM had sneaked in and made a booking deal with the Poli group for a number of years to come. And that's control, in one way.

London Scents Conspiracy In Sarnoff-Rothafel Visit

London.—After America's newspapers have been filled with reams of stories, later denied and forgotten, about Roxy starting a Radio City in London, the aftermath comes: London's newspapers are now scenting a huge conspiracy on the part of Rothafel and Dave Sarnoff to somehow or other seize control of British broadcasting and to Americanize it. Whatever that means.

52 for MGM List

New York.—Nick Schenck, on his arrival here, made the definite statement that MGM would again figure fifty-two pictures on its program next year, thus quieting rumors that the organization might reduce to a number of specials.

Kelly Will Stop Here

New York.—Arthur W. Kelly, vice-president of United Artists and for years chief of the foreign department, is going to stop over in Hollywood for a breathing space on his way to Australia. Kelly leaves Saturday by boat, through the Canal.

LEE TRACY STEPS INTO PARAMOUNT-UNIV. JAM

The Paramount-Lee Tracy deal has left a sour taste in the mouths of Unversal executives, the latter studio having signed Rian James to produce the Tracy pictures and also made other preparations for the actor, only to learn that he was concluding a deal with Paramount for four pictures, leaving the Laemmle outfit out in the cold.

The Paramount deal for three pictures a year and possibly a fourth, is being held up because of a certain clause in the contract which Tracy ob-

Stanley Suit Against Electrics on April 2

New York.—The trial of the anti-trust suit of Stanley Co. of America against the A.T.&T., Electrical Research Products and the Western Electric begins April 2 in the U. S. District Court in Wilmington, Del.

The Warner interests already have a temporary injunction and are now seeking to broaden this to prevent the collection of service charges. If Stanley wins its action, the injunction will be permanent.

'WRONG NUMBER' DULL BUT THEME GOOD FOR PICTURES

"WRONG NUMBER"

By Eloise Keeler; presented by the Intimate Theatre Group at the Provincetown Playhouse; staged by John F. Grahame; settings by Alexander Maissel. Cast: William Bonelli, Whitner Bissel, Dorothy South, Helen Bliss, Genevieve Belasco, Patricia Martin, William S. Phillips, Alan Flood, Fred Smith, John Mortensen, Harold Bassage and Elsa Ryan.

New York.—The idea of treating the subject of numerology seriously in a drama is a commendable one, and so is the title. However, an idea is one thing, and the dramatization of it is another. The author of "Wrong Number" tried valiantly, but the inept fashion in which the play is worked out only brought raucous response from the audience.

The possibilities of using the science of numbers, manipulated by a saccharinely unctuous villain, appear unlimited. Miss Keeler tries to show how it can snare and trap innocent women and their families into entrusting themselves and their possessions to the guidance of a get-rich-quick fakir, yea, even permitting him to dictate a young girl's future in marriage and a youth's choosing of a career.

Like hypnotism or religious fanaticism, some people allow the "vibration of numbers" to lead them into extremely foolish decisions, especially when the exponent of this "science" is a psychologist as well and knows how to take advantage of human weakness and desires. The Mrs. Morrison of this play is a good example.

Genevieve Belasco, Whitner Bissell and William S. Phillips were well liked. There may be a good farce drama in numerology, but this is not it.

Screen Actors' Mag. Off the Press Today

After a million headaches incidental to getting the first issue to bed, the Screen Actors' Guild announced last night that its new magazine will be off the press late today.

It was slated for March 15, and is being eagerly awaited by all players, as it is the first chance they have had to put in print exactly what they want without the supervision of some hard-boiled editor.

Odd Columbia Deal Puzzles Industry

New York.—Everyone in the picture business here was trying to figure today just what the set-up of Columbia Pictures is. The puzzle came with a report of the company to the New York Stock Exchange yesterday which stated that the company has bought back 1,474 voting trust certificates.

It was learned at the same time that all the voting trust certificates are vested in three trustees, namely Joe Brandt and Harry and Jack Cohn. BUT—Brandt left the company two years ago, and the wise ones in the business here are now trying to figure what his angle is in the set-up. The trio are said to hold the voting trusteeship for a period of ten years, starting in 1930. There is much speculation as to how come Brandt is in on this close control of an outfit he is no longer with publicly.

PARA. 'YOU'RE TELLING ME' FUNNY BUT NEEDS TRIMMING

W.C. Fields Tops and Rest of Cast Good

"YOU'RE TELLING ME"
Paramount

Direction .....Erle Kenton
Author .....Julian Street
Adaptation: Walter DeLeon and Paul Jones.
Photography .....Al Gilks
Cast: W. C. Fields, Joan Marsh, Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Adrienne Ames, Louise Carter, Kathleen Howard, James B. "Pop" Kenton, Robert Kenton, Robert McKenzie, George Irving, Jerry Stewart, Del Henderson, Nora Cecil, George MacQuarrie, John M. Sullivan, Venon Dent, Alfred Delcambre, Tammany Young.

The Paramount comedy, "You're Telling Me," is a series of gags strung on the thread of a very thin plot.

However, with W. C. Fields in the principal role, the plot doesn't make so much difference. But what is unfortunate is that the Fieldian gags are elongated and insisted upon and drawn out and played up and hammered in until they become tiresome.

Consistent and thorough cutting will do wonders for the picture and will give it a chance to be what it certainly deserves to be . . . a good, fast, out-of-the-ordinary comedy.

Fields plays the part of a happy-go-lucky inventor, who drinks too much, is a source of complete annoyance to his wife, and finally queers the marriage between his daughter, Joan Marsh, and Buster Crabbe, son of the richest family in Crystal Springs, by his uncouthness.

However, an accidental meeting with Princess Lescaboura (Adrienne Ames) on the train, changes all that. The Princess becomes interested in the poor down-trodden man, visits him at his home, and plays fairy godmother to all his troubles.

Fields is ridiculously funny except when forced to prolong his gags, as witness the one on the golf course that started out to be screamingly funny and gradually petered out from sheer exhaustion. Joan Marsh is charming as his daughter; Adrienne Ames brings dignity to her role; Louise Carter is Fields' vitriolic wife; Kathleen Howard is well cast as Crabbe's society-struck mother, and Tammany Young is extremely funny in a small role.

Walter DeLeon and Paul Jones adapted the Julian Street story, and Al Gilks photographed it. Erle Kenton's direction is intelligent, with the exception of the many over-emphasized scenes.

When this picture is cut, don't worry about it. Your patrons will like it.

John Arnold, president of the American Society of Cinematographer was an interesting talker yesterday over the complete NBC coast network on the subject "Cameras and Cameramen."

Beer Replaces Cash

Picture people get a laugh at Caesar's bright spot on Hollywood Boulevard when they discover where the beer is kept. Believe it or not, it is in a huge money vault that once housed thousands of dollars. A bank formerly occupied the place. Instead of removing the vault, Caesar put the beer tanks there.

Research Council of Acad. Meets Again

The Research Council of the Academy swings into action this week on the resumption of the program that was interrupted a year ago.

F. Morgan, William Rudolph, Ted Soderberg, A. G. Wise and R. C. Willman.

Radio Wants Wellman To Direct Ann Harding

Pauline Lord Signed by Para. for 'Mrs. Wiggs'

The Warner publicity department is giving a farewell dinner today for Joe E. Brown who leaves tomorrow for San Francisco to hop a boat for a three months vacation in the Orient. The player is scheduled to wind up "The Circus Clown," which Ray Enright directed, this morning.

Camera Union Grows

Fifteen applications for membership have been received by the cameramen's union, Local 659, IATSE, during the past two weeks, it was announced yesterday at their headquarters.

Acad. Banquet Cash Better Than Hoped

Academy officials were smiling yesterday as figures on the cost of the Awards Banquet were being put into shape, for, due to the sellout, the deficit will not be as great as was anticipated.

The steering committee expected the organization would have to take quite a financial bump, so secured the cooperation of a group of members to guarantee the deficit. What this will amount to will not be known for two or three more days. Two of the most expensive details of the affair were Duke Ellington's band and the statuettes. It was learned yesterday that the statuettes stood the Academy almost an even thousand dollars.

Extras Meet Tonight to Talk Consolidation

Members of the Motion Picture Supporting and Extra Players will again take up the question of amalgamation of the various extras' organizations tonight at a meeting in the Liberal Arts building of the Hollywood high school.

The proposal was advanced some time ago by Allan Garcia, head of the group. It has met with first hot and then cold reception by the various groups. The Junior Screen Actors' Guild has announced that it will have no part in the combine.

Animated Marriages

The marriage complex appeared recently among the staff of Animated Pctures Corporation. Lee Blair and Mary Robinson were married. Then Murray Griffin wed Eleanor Martin of Detroit.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

There's a big fight going on in a home office at this moment over what policy the company will pursue in story buys for the coming season. The two warring factions are A: The group that wants to buy ORIGINALS and books and, B: Those who are still holding out for plays and books with the emphasis on plays. . . . Adaptations of plays for pictures, with just a few notable exceptions, have never been particularly happy in screen translations, and still they are bought and at high prices too, because it is so easy to be fooled by three acts that run along smoothly with curtains accounting for a great deal that cannot be said or for time lapses. . . . And then, when they are bought for pictures, pictures that run anywhere from an hour and fifteen minutes to an hour and a half with no intermissions, the difficulties start, as only an adaptor can tell you.

Books are only slightly less difficult. With books it is a question of elimination of extraneous material—mostly characterization or psychological studies or both, and it's a tough job to make a moving picture out of them. . . . Of course, buys of both books and plays are governed by the fact that one is a best seller, (reaching a few HUNDRED THOUSAND people if it's sensational) and the other is a hit reaching a few THOUSAND people in New York, a few more in Chicago and a few HUNDRED on the road. And on the strength of that they are bought to cater to the common tastes of MILLIONS in a medium they were mostly never written for and never quite jibe with. This applies mainly to the drayma . . . with comedy, they can always call in Arthur Sheekman or get Jimmy Durante to make a movie.

It seems to us that originals and short stories, even the short, short stories, are the answer to the picture producer's delimma on material. . . . And probably the best examples of that kind of buying are Damon Runyon, who is enjoying a vogue at the moment, and Darryl Zanuck who knows that an idea clearly expressed in a few lines can be whipped into better picture material at lower costs than paying thousands of dollars for published books or produced plays which—at their best, have hidden in them an idea—or perhaps it's a good title—and at their worst offer a hodge-podge in stage or literary technique that has been so well produced they look as though they should be movies. And this is written with exceptions duly noted and appreciated.

Jules Levy Here

Jules Levy, sales manager for Radio, arrived in town yesterday by train from New York. He will be here a week, conferring on the studio's future product.

That gang at Universal pulling for Frank Borzage as they never pulled for anybody. They were already beginning to ooze enthusiasm over "Little Man" when Frank was dealt that terrible blow last week. Now enthusiasm is backed by a heart-tug spirit that is great.

They tell us up at Paramount that it looks as though young Charles Vidor has a picture coming up in "Double Door" basing opinions on the first week's rushes.

And speaking of young directors, Manny Cohen deserves a palm for the vision that is looking ahead in the directorial field. Al Hall, Bill McNutt and Grover Jones, Bob Sparks, Jane Loring and Harlan Thompson—these are investments in the future that are going to pan out. But more, they evidence a darn good executive trait.

Still on the same subject: Over at Monogram Trem Carr and Lou Ostrow are raving about another "first directorial" effort—"Manhattan Love Song," megged by Leonard Fields. In the past Fields has operated as a member of the writing team of Fields and Silverstein.

But to make a great jump—there are a lot of the boys rooting hard for Bob Vignola, veteran of the wars, as he gets a real chance with Hawthorne's "The Scarlet Letter." •

Heard a lot of comment yesterday—and not at the Universal lot, either—about what looks like a raw deal on somebody's part for Carl Laemmle, Jr. The latter took his courage to the races, signed Lee Tracy for one picture when everybody else was looking the other way, then put a climax in the script when he let it be known that he had practically closed a long term deal with Tracy. Make no mistake about it—Junior Laemmle was the guy who was due for the brickbats if there were any to come. Who knew? So when nothing happens but praise for the idea—what else happens? Huh? The ice having been broken by young Junior—and no cold water following on the ice-breaking—the deal is closed with PARAMOUNT for Tracy. Somethin' wrong.

Radio City To Be Star In Radio Production

H. N. Swanson's idea, which was born about a year ago, to produce a picture based on a story written around Radio City, is finally coming to light.

Paul Finder Moss and Julius Epstein, who have just finished "Big Broadcast of 1934" for Paramount, have been signed to write an original story based on this idea.

Union Trying to Bring Cameramen Into Line

Cameramen's Local 659, IATSE, has sent a letter to cameramen, warning them that there is a movement on foot among the producers to cut their salaries and work them longer hours.

In an apparent attempt to get the boys back into the union, the letter calls attention to the fact that the local is keenly interested in maintaining wages and proper hours.

Sam Taylor Recovers

Sam Taylor returned to work yesterday at Harold Lloyd's after an attack of pneumonia. "The Cat's Paw" will resume work Monday with Taylor directing.

Warners yesterday assigned Lloyd Bacon to direct "Hey, Sailor," which will team James Cagney and Pat O'Brien when it goes into work next week.

Lola Gentry East

Lola Gentry, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Film Board of Trade, left yesterday by airplane for Indianapolis where her mother is very ill.

Hyman of Standard Behind New Firm

New York.—The new company, "Famous Authors Pictures," through which Jacques Kopfstein will present eight pictures for the state rights market, takes on importance with the news that Mark Hyman, of Standard Cinema Corporation, is backing it.

Standard Cinema has backed the Larry Darmour Productions, Continental Features and Mickey McGuire comedies—an RKO release—in the past.

The new company will be called Coply Productions, with Kopfstein as president, and the pictures to be made by some West Coast producer. Michael Arlen's "Lucky Lady" is planned for the first.

George Marion Jr. Held For a Second at Para.

Paramount yesterday worked out an extension of its contract with George Marion Jr. to include another script assignment.

Upon completion of "Kiss and Make Up" for B. P. Schulberg, he moves over to the Louis Lighton unit to write the screen play on his own original, "Here's Your Quarterback." Beyer-MacArthur negotiated.

that Kent has asked for a showdown, and wants to know whether the bank is going to continue to run the five hundred houses or whether they can be returned to his direction, as they were for a brief period after he took over the Fox helm.

Because of the advances made by the parent organization to Wesco, Kent, as executive of the parent, has a strong card up his sleeve if he insists on the showdown.

Censors Take It on Chin

secondly, there are doubts expressed as to whether Congress has any right under the Constitution to enact any legislation whereby children will be prevented from seeing certain pictures.

Representative Patman, author of the combined censorship and block booking measure, opened the hearing with an attack on the picture industry. He said it had made ten promises to reform and had kept none. His proposed legislation, he said, was merely a project to open up the entire problem and he felt that many changes would be necessary before a final bill was passed.

Canon William S. Chase, the constant reformer, followed Patman. He reiterated his usual arguments and also spoke against block booking. Mrs. Robbins Gilman, of Minneapolis, also favored the censorship idea. She is president of the Federation of Motion Picture Councils of America and chairman of the Motion Picture Committee of the National Council of Parents and Teachers.

"Censorship is necessary to protect children," she said. "The themes of many pictures are solely of love, sex and crime. Furthermore, scientific tests have shown that boys have learned through the movies eighteen different ways of killing people."

Representative Pettengill, Democrat, of Indiana, interposed with a remark to the effect that he wondered what Will Hays had done for the movies to warrant his enormous salary, this being one of several cracks aimed at the General.

After Rabbi Israel, of Baltimore, had spoken in favor of the bill, Representative Connery, of Massachusetts, made an eloquent address against it, alleging that censorship should be a matter of local autonomy.

Charles C. Pettijohn, of the Hays office, also spoke against the bill, arguing that the existing powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission are sufficient to control the shipment of lewd or salacious material through the enforcement of heavy penalties. He pointed to the moral reputation of Chicago as an example of a censor-ruled city.

Speaking of block booking, he said that less than 20 per cent of all pictures are sold in that fashion and that, when good pictures come along, exhibitors never resort to their cancellation privileges.

"Good moral pictures are usually bad pictures for the exhibitor," he said, "and so-called bad pictures are usually the best for them. For example, the Mae West pictures have played eight or ten repeat engagements in many places."

There was a little excitement at this point when Abram Myers, of Allied, was called, and Representative Chapman, of Kentucky, started to heckle him. Myers said he was filing a brief in support of another anti-block booking bill and understood that it would have a hearing later. Chapman asked a number of questions about Myers' career in pictures and in exhibitor organizations, whereupon Myers retorted heatedly that the representative was "an unfair duck who must have had lies whispered in his ears by the producers."

LEGIT CODE WORRIES PIX

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE hate to be a party, in even the slightest way, to adding to present studio overhead. It's the Big, Bad Wolf of every studio right now; and the Ever Present Alibi for writer, director and supervisor.

But there is a new job to be added to the payroll.

Regardless of overhead worries, necessity forces us to arise in our might and insist that there is a new job needed in the picture business, a new classification that should put at least a couple of dozen men to work very soon.

What this business needs is a couple of dozen:

INTERPRETERS.

Interpreters of what?

Why, merely chaps who will sit in between writers and executives, and do their best to make one understand the other.

And if you think this is an off-hand remark, you don't know the actual making of pictures.

There is more stumbling, stuttering, hemming and hawing, and expansive gurgitating in the making of motion pictures because at the crucial point the problem is in the hands of two tribes that DON'T UNDERSTAND each other's language, than you can possibly imagine if you haven't sat in on one of these sessions.

So—without any NRA prompting—we think we are right when we advocate that the industry create a couple of dozen jobs—well, at least twenty-two or twenty-three—for INTERPRETERS!

Picture the author who comes up for air after three weeks struggling with what he fondly believes is an original slant on a creative job!

He is in the inferiority complex stage, and tries a couple of the slants on his wife or his mother-in-law, but they don't seem to react. Their minds are on the day's budget.

But he has a conference on at 11 a.m. with the "producer." And before that, there are a couple of points on which he would like a reaction from a sympathetic soul.

An author is a peculiar animal at this stage of his development. He

Forty-hour Week And Strong Labor Element In Authority Expected In Film Code Also

Washington.—The proposed new revised Code for the legitimate theatre holds the center of attention here today because it is felt by those close to the administration that eventually there will probably be a new Code for the motion picture business modelled along the same lines. And if the labor provisions that are incorporated in the legitimate theatre Code are any criteria of what may transpire some day in the picture Code, labor and the actors will have nothing to complain about.

The new legitimate Code hearings are called for next Wednesday, and

MARY PICKFORD MAY BE INDEPENDENT PRODUCER

New York.—From what can be gathered about the many conferences that Mary Pickford is holding in New York, it seems pretty certain that she is giving grave consideration to a proposition to produce independently for United Artists release.

Miss Pickford owns one-sixth of the United Artists company and has the right to release eight pictures annually through that medium. She has

THE LOW DOWN

Heh, heh! The other day a writer was interviewing a certain petite brunette star with an Anglo-Saxon name. He asked her nationality.

"Oh," said the star, "I'm half Scotch and half Irish."

Just then the mother of the actress stuck her head in the door of the room and said: "Dolling, I'll wait for you dunstairs in de car."

Whereupon the little movie star laughed it off with, "DEAR Mother—she still retains some of her brogue!"

A lot of people wondered out loud how a certain young supervisor has managed to make good (and he has made good) at the studio where he is employed. They point to the fact that before he was made a supervisor, he never showed much promise in any direction. However, some think that not only is a director-pal of his reading scripts and making the proper comments upon them for this fellow, but that the supervisor may have absorbed a great deal of this director's knowledge through constant association with him. Well, maybe that's the answer to it all.

At a party the other night, Johnny Weismuller was seated at the table opposite the wife of a famous star. Jutting her arm across the table at him, she asked, "How do you like my new bracelet?"

New York REVIEWS

"THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD"

20th Century prod.; director, Alfred Werker; writers, George Hembert Westley, Nunnally Johnson.

Astor Theatre

News: George Arliss has given many excellent performances on the stage and screen, but he has never, in my opinion, quite equalled his playing of the double roles of the elder and younger Rothschild in Twentieth Century's latest and most elaborate production. The picture has been beautifully mounted, with careful attention paid to the detail of the beautiful sets, and it has been given masterful direction.

Post: The story is presented straightforwardly, without apology or sentimentality. Because of its lack of dramatic sequence, the picture lapses at times into reiterative passages that become monotonous. But these defects do not weigh against Mr. Arliss' impressive characterization. The spirit and purpose of the picture are embodied in him.

World-Telegram: Written beautifully and richly produced, "The House of Rothschild" moves smoothly and entertainingly. The interpretations by George Arliss are so smoothly, so calmly, so humorously done, that they become a very gem of acting. Here, then, without hesitation, is a film that goes on the recommended list of this department.

Journal: Timely, brilliant and filmed with a magnificent dignity, "The House of Rothschild" is acted, written and directed with intellgence and taste, and its star, George Arliss, gives the finest performance he has yet contributed to the screen. "The House of Rothschild" takes its place as one of the outstanding productions of the screen.

American: The film belongs to Mr. Arliss, and none will begrudge it him any more than he will hesitate to share his laurels with the cast that gives such exquisite support. Alfred Werker's direction increases the throb and thrill of the story. "The House of Rothschild" is a tower of entertainment.

Herald-Tribune: Always an actor of skill, resource and that slightly mystical quality known as "technique," the distinguished Englishman is decidedly at his best, playing with ease, crispness and considerable forthright power. "The House of Rothschild" is a persuasive piece of anti-Nazi argument, done handsomely in the costumes of an earlier day.

Sun: "The House of Rothschild" deserves an audience for the general excellence of its production, the strength of its historical background, the vivid performances of George Arliss, Helen Westley and C. Aubrey Smith. It should insure a triumphant birthday to Twentieth Century.

Times: Mr. Arliss outshines any performance he has contributed to the screen, not excepting his expert and highly revealing interpretation of "Disraeli." He exacts sympathy in the two parts and never fails to make the most of gentle bits of comedy. The story runs along smoothly and swiftly, clinging substantially to facts in the major points. Where there are embellished bits of history, it is all so well done that it makes a grand show. In fact, the picture is engrossing throughout.

Mirror: This brave picture is the most impressive film the great George Arliss ever made. Significant and strong, "The House of Rothschild" is a magnificent picture. A lavish and handsome production has been given the film. Alfred Werker's direction is distinguished. The dialogue is rich and vigorous. The costumes are interesting. It is a picture of genuine importance, stately beauty and stirring dramatic force.

Meehan Applies for Academy Reinstatement

John Meehan, who resigned from the Writers' Branch of the Academy last summer when a large number of the members withdrew, yesterday applied for reinstatement.

During the past week, according to official announcement, two new members were also added to the Writers' Branch. They are Ewart Adamson and Ernest S. Pagano. George Yohalem, formerly a member of the Assistant Directors' Section of the Academy, has transferred to the Writers' Branch.

Credit for Sammy Lee

New Play for Columbia

New York.—Columbia has obtained an interest in a French play, called "The Red Cat," which A. H. Woods will produce next Fall.

Burns and Allen Will Take Four-Months Rest

George Burns and Gracie Allen will leave for New York on completion of their current picture, "Many Happy Returns," for Paramount, to be gone about four months.

Although the trip East is for the purpose of a rest, the team will likely grab off a few personals and radio jobs while there.

College graduate, intelligent, industrious and unassuming, expert typist and bookkeeper, desperately in need of work, would make excellent chauffeur, secretary and handy man. I should appreciate hearing from anyone that could use him at a minimum salary.

ASC Tries to Clear Up Location Tangle

The problem of location work has been worrying the producers and the American Society of Cinematographers. While the ASC has an agreement with the producers for studio camera control, they have been worried over the fact that the American Federation of Labor gives jurisdiction over locations to the IATSE group, claiming the ASC is a company union.

This has been one of the strong cards the union has continued to hold in the picture business, and cameramen have been very active in getting their union cards before going on locations. This week the ASC sent a letter to all members explaining that it wishes to clarify this question of whether or not they must have union cards. The letter quotes various sections of the NRA Code, and recommends that members consult the Code "before allowing yourself to be threatened or persuaded to pay money in any organization for the purpose of being allowed to work."

While the letter does not state positively that ASC men do not have to belong to the union to work on locaton, the organization's routine notices carry carry the line at the bottom: "An ASC Card Is All The Protection You Need On Location—Anywhere."

'RIP TIDE' THALBERG'S FIRST SINCE HIS RETURN, A HIT

Shearer, Goulding, Marshall Brilliant

"RIP TIDE"
(MGM)

Direction .....Edmund Goulding
Story .....Edmund Goulding
Producer .....Irving Thalberg
Art Direction....Alexander Toluboff and Fredric Hope
Photography .....Ray June
Starring .....Norma Shearer
Cast: Herbert Marshall, Robert Montgomery, Mrs. Pat Campbell, Ralph Forbes, Skeets Gallagher, Lilyan Tashman, Helen Jerome Eddy, George K. Arthur, Halliwell Hobbes, Florine McKinney.

A distinct innovation is "Rip Tide," which marks Norma Shearer's screen return after a long absence, during which the lady seems to have added even more to her physical and histrionic charms. The film is an innovation inasmuch as it is almost completely devoid of action, yet the mental "action" is dynamic enough to carry it along through climaxes that successfully create the illusion of swift movement.

With the flawless performance of Herbert Marshall in a difficult role, added to the vivid and impressive moods as portrayed by its star, Norma Shearer, "Rip Tide," with its great appeal for any type audience (particularly the feminine contingent) and the penetrating direction of Edmund Goulding, stands to make its producers and exhibitors a barrel of money.

"Rip Tide" might be limited to more sophisticated audiences were it not for the fact that it embodies in its story elements that at one time or another have come into the lives of any and all—from broker to milkman—from society belle to milkmaid.

At one point or another, some sequence in the picture is bound to "hit home" with every member of any audience—therefore the assertion that even though Goulding's dialogue and direction are sly, subtle and civilized—he is nevertheless firing at everybody when this yarn unwinds.

"Rip Tide" traces with meticulous care the path traced in a human being by the slow, poisonous growth of a terrific jealousy. The audience sees the ugly emotion grow from the very beginning until it brings upon itself the very thing it fears.

Marshall marries Miss Shearer because he KNOWS they belong to each other, in spite of her indiscreet past. She is madly in love with him, too, but under the influence of wicked Aunt Hettie (Mrs. Pat Campbell) she goes with her to Cannes while Marshall is in the U.S.A. on business.

A glass of champagne—a kiss—with Bob Montgomery, who later gets drunk and falls off her hotel balcony; newspaper headlines—cheap publicity—and Marshall coming back, eaten by jealousy—too suspicious to believe any evidence in his wife's favor. He tortures her and himself—decides upon divorce, and leaves her. After she really has been unfaithful to him, he wants her back and she goes to him—unable to confess the very thing he has feared — yet brought about through his own jealousy. When he finally does discover his wife's infidelity, they again decide to part, but ironically, it is at this point that he utterly recovers his faith in her. Finis.

The fine efforts of Goulding, Marshall and Miss Shearer, together with the beauty of the production itself, and the presence of Robert Montgomery, who again is the charming young rake in the picture-garden, give the customers plenty to like and talk about.

Mrs. Pat Campbell is a very amusing Aunt Hettie, and Ralph Forbes a likable and convincing secretary. Lilyan Tashman, George K. Arthur, Skeets Gallagher, Helen Jerome Eddy and Florine McKinney appear briefly but with effect in supporting roles. Photography by Ray June is expert throughout.

Hays Bans Pictures About Dillinger

New York.—The Hays office has sent out an official ban on any picture based on the career of John Dillinger, the bandit, stating that such a picture would be "detrimental to the best public interests."

Three 'Baby Star' NomineesWithdraw

The Wampas committee received three withdrawals from the Wampas Baby star nominees because they won't be in town for the elections next Tuesday. They are Julie Haydon, who is in San Francisco playing in "Autumn Crocus," Adalyn Doyle, who is enroute for Europe, and Marjorie Lytell, also out of town.

Three other promising young players were nominated to replace the withdrawals. They are Dorothy Short, Katharine Maux, and Rose Bestro. Tests will be made of all 34 nominees this Friday and Saturday to be shown at the Writers' Club the night of the election.

Atwill Tested at MGM For 'Treasure Island'

MGM is concluding a deal with Lionel Atwill for one of the leading roles in the Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper co-starring picture, "Treasure Island." Tests were made yesterday. The deal is being held up by a matter of billing, which is expected to be ironed out today.

Alice Brady a Guest

The Corn Beef, Cabbage and Culture Club, composed of newspaper men and screen writers and whose motto is "No Women and No Speeches," has finally succumbed and has invited Alice Brady as guest of honor at luncheon tomorrow.

Dorothy Tree Switches

A change of plans at Warners has Dorothy Tree going into a featured spot in the Edward G. Robinson production, "Dark Tower," in place of "Du Barry," when she finishes work in "Friends of Mr. Sweeney."

ASC Changes Plan Of Board Election

Members of the ASC, by an almost unanimous vote, have adopted an amendment to the organization's by-laws which changes the set-up of the Board of Governors.

The new ruling will do away with the present system of electing an entire new board each year. Beginning with the next election, only five members will be chosen for the board. These will be elected for a three-year term. Each year thereafter five men will be elected, while ten old ones will carry on.

Members of the present board will draw lots to see which five resign, which five will continue for another year, and which will continue for the next two years. The election will be held on April 2, at which time the new board will elect officers for the coming year.

MGM Wants Marshall For 'Antoinette' Lead

MGM is negotiating for Herbert Marshall for the lead opposite Norma Shearer in "Marie Antoinette," which Irving Thalberg will produce after "Barretts of Wimpole Street." Marshall made tests for the role yesterday.

The Shearer-Marshall combination has just completed "Rip Tide."

Move to East Will Cut Staff at Educational

Educational cuts down on production on its lot here as a result of a decision to swing a portion of its short subjects work to the Astoria plant in New York.

Action gives notice to Lon Young and his secretary, Janet Rex, both of whom are considering other proposals.

Beecroft May Stay Here

Chester Beecroft, independent producer active in Florida for a few seasons past, came to Hollywood a few weeks ago to look things over and now may stay in our midst due to two very tempting offers from majors for exec producing spots.

MGM Signs Jean Dary

MGM has signed Jean Dary to act as technical director on "Marie Antoinette" and "Undress Parade." Miss Dary formerly was connected with Rene Clair in Paris and Gilbert Miller in New York.

Alice White Bows Out

Alice White announced last night that she had bowed out of the cast of the Paul Lukas starring picture, "Affairs of a Gentleman," at Universal, feeling that the role did not suit her.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

Of course, we got around to it a little late, but since a nation-wide tour is planned for it, it might be just as well to give Hollywood a small inkling of what's in store for it when "Four Saints in Three Acts" finally reaches the Coast. This is the Gertrude Stein-Virgil Thompson "opera" and it's really something you shouldn't miss. . . . The libretto sounds like a collection of all the inane remarks you've ever heard repeated about movie conferences. But if you think that Gertrude Stein didn't write a great deal of it with her typewriter in her cheek and take the opportunity to kid the general and accepted idea of opera, why you're just missing a lot of fun.

The music is perfectly grand, borrowing generously from the classics and negro spirituals, and deliberately appropriating quite a few well known folk-songs with a couple of tangos thrown in for good measure. Whether the music or the words came first doesn't really matter because they never really got friendly anyway, except that Miss Stein has chosen words that sing well and, for a beautiful love-duet, the boy and girl merely repeat the number of scenes that have gone before and let it go at that. The orchestral overture occurs in the middle of the third act (or maybe it was the fourth—no matter). The cast is entirely negro, which undoubtedly accounts for the fact that one critic claims it has the same quality as "Green Pastures." Which is something like saying any place that has palms looks like California. But don't miss it. You've never been able to understand the words to opera anyway, and every once in a while some character cracks out with a hearty laugh line that could be understood anywhere. Al Jolson could only "take it" for the prelude and first act.

Migosh, how burned-up a certain movie critic is here in town. One of the major companies that turns them out in two week schedules got kinda peeved at a couple of poor reviews its pictures got at trade-showings and insisted to the publisher of a trade daily that he send his advertising man along with his critic to see all future pictures so that they can get "fair" reviews!

Ken MacKenna is rehearsing in "Wife Insurance" that "hit," "By Your Leave" having done a sudden nose-dive the week the picture rights were sold. . . . You've never heard anything like the reception Mary Pickford got when she showed up at a big benefit performance. . . . Roland Young, Ben Wasson, Miriam Hopkins, Erskine Gwynne helping to keep the Ritz bar jammed at cocktail hour. . . . Conversation overheard between a couple of movie fellers: "I hear so-and-so is working at Blank Film Company." "Sure, they had to take him in. He owes them a hundred and twenty thousand dollars!"

'NEW FACES' B'WAY REVUE BRIGHT, CLEVER, TUNEFUL

New Talent in All Lines Uncovered

"NEW FACES"

Charles Dillingham production; conceived and directed by Leonard Sillman; Lyrics and sketches by Viola Brothers Shore, Nancy Hamilton andJune Sillman; Music by Warburton Gilbert, Donald Honarth, Martha Caples, James Shelton and Morgan Lewis; Sets by Sergei Soudeikine; Supervised by Elsie Janis. At the Fulton theatre.

New York—Shades of ye olde Garrick Gaieties. With a group of ambitious newcomers, plenty of pep, bright ideas delivered with freshness and gay insouciance, a bit of sly satire now and then and a collection of settings that alone is worth the price of admission, New York has a revue that should keep it well amused right through the summer months.

So far as uncovering talent is concerned, Nancy Hamilton shines above the crowd, both for her imtations of Hepburn and Garbo and for her ability to write bright sketches. Imogene Coca, who has had chances in a couple of other revues, here reveals herself as a pretty swell comic with a great gift for pantomime.

Of the lads being given their big opportunity in this show, Henry Fonda does himself proud all along the line and James Shelton comes through with a Noel Coward imitation that's pretty priceless and precious stuff. And then there are Peggy Hovenden and Dorothy Kennedy Fox, (a gal who can dance) and Louise Lynch, who sang in our better clubs during the prohibition era and turns out to be a mild Park Avenue Libby Holman, and Leonard Sillman, who is an ambitious boy who likes to sing dramatic songs and interpret them in the dance and who is also credited with the production. The latter is very much more to his credit.

And then there are the sets, probably the most amusing and lovely that have been used on the stage in many and many a musical revue. A very special bow to Mr. Soudeikine, whose bright conceptions of backdrops and scenery more than once saved the show from being put into the amateur class.

The material is sprightly and of the moment, ranging all the way from Russian conception to good-natured digs at our more popular idols, including an Elsa Maxwell party.

The stooges signed an exclusive managerial contract with the Leo Morrison office. Walter Kane, of the Weber office, was granted permission by Morrison to negotiate a one-picture deal for them, to be made before Universal had a call on them, which is about ten days, and Kane went ahead and signed them for a series with Columbia.

Legit Code Worries Pix

motion picture executives are already viewing it with considerable misgivings and alarm as they realize that perhaps the fate of their industrial affairs depends upon it.

Outstanding in the legitimate theater Code is the fact that no actors shall be permitted to work in excess of forty hours a week, except during rehearsals. This ruling also applies to chorus girls, company managers, house treasurers, wardrobe attendants, clerical help and musicians. It also includes musicians, stage employees, engineers, firemen, oilers, or other skilled mechanics, excepting where previous contract as of July 1, 1933 calls for less than forty hours. Scenic artists are limited to thirty-two hours per week.

The make-up of the legitimate theatre Code Authority also indicates what may be expected in a revised picture Code. Labor holds a tremendous weight therein. On this Authority will be one representative each from Actors Equity, Chorus Equity, IATSE, American Federation of Musicians, United Scenic Artists of America; one representative from a group of employees not heretofore embraced, one from the Dramatist Guild, three from the National Association of Legitimate Theatres, Inc., one from the National Dramatic Stock Association (which shall have two representatives as members whenever questions relating to controlling stock productions are concerned); two members with votes to represent the general public, and one member without vote to be appointed by the Administrator to serve as he may specify.

It is felt here that there is more than a possibility that a similar revised Code may be handed the picture business eventually, due to the fact that there has been so much stalling and argument so far as carrying out the present one is concerned. Labor seems to be on the way to gaining the upper hand and those close to the situation are advising the picture producers to trim their sails and get their individual ships in order before they have it done for them.

The picture business comes into the legitimate theatre Code in the line of unfair practices, it being considered an unfair trade practice for an employer to aid, abet or assist in the voluntary release or dismissal of any actor for purposes of permitting accept employment in pictures.

These men will select the chairmen of the public relations, business relations and finance committees for their sections.

Ruskin Does Script Re-write in Four Days

With Harry Ruskin turning in a four-day script job on the George Burns-Gracie Allen picture, "Many Happy Returns," Paramount puts the picture into work today under Norman McLeod's direction.

Script job was done at the request of the comedy team, who requested revisions on the ground that the old script line-up virtually starred them, a rating which they are ducking.

Franklyn Pangborn and Joan Marsh were signed for featured spots.

Taurog Will Direct 'Her Master's Voice'

Norman Taurog is slated to direct the B. P. Schulberg production, "Her Master's Voice," on completion of his current assignment, "We're Not Dressing," the Bing Crosby picture for Paramount. Clare Kummer is writing the screen adaptation of her play.

Boy at Frank Capra's

GOSSIP around PARIS

Bill Fitelson in town for a terribly busy week; after all, taxis or no taxis, you can't do a month's work in a week. . . . But Bill doesn't mind, you know; he just tells his American stories with the same pep and humor as if he didn't screen pictures from morning until midnight. . . . Bill, what's all this conferencing with Victor Trivas, with Jean Keim from Gaumont and all the others? . . . Film benefit for American Hospital under patronage of American Ambassador Straus to be held with "Roman Scandals"; looks like an affair to fill paper columns. . . . How about some sympathy for Mr. and Mrs. Sacha Guitry; they just can't get a divorce. They are dying to get one, but can't find a reason—a pity. . . . Paul Muni piloted through town by Curtis Melnitz. . . . You bet, Russhhhia is conversation topic, too. . . . There's hardly an American left here who wouldn't have seen "International House." . . . They take along the Frenchmen and try to translate dialog as spicily as Parisians can stand. . . . They can stand a lot, you might have guessed it, but take it from me, Americans can stand much more—in all puritanic purity.

Hakim not well seen around Para. offices. . . . Never knew that Mr. Haik speaks English like a 100 per cent Uncle Sam. . . . So does Kastor at Chambre Syndicale. . . Why not, they all hope to make pacific invasion into the States with cash and product. . . . Seidelman and Friedman lunching with Zama, Columbia manager, in Paris. . . . Sokoloff, you should know it, was formerly with Moscow Art Theatre. . . . He is a real fellow—and has he got ideas!—almost as many and as original as his pal Trivas. . . . H. W. Leasin, of RKO, believes in unusual year for his office. . . . Visit of Phil Reisman and Dowling only strengthened his enthusiasm. . . . Olivier down to Brussels closing big distribution deal. . . . Now, Hollywood girls, this is news, but not a suggestion. . . Yvonne Hautin takes Nun's vows in modest and impressive ceremony, with pals and friends of Comedie Francaise assisting.

Why, you know a guy called Mussolini; he's an Italian, too, though it's a secret. . . . Imagine: "After all, we (Americans) are evolving the most beautiful race of womanhood in the world. C'est deja quelque chose!" says a Herald mail-bag writer and signs ONE WHO HAS BEEN TO HOLLYWOOD. . . . How's that for publicity, girls? . . . Stephen Haggard doesn't miss a show since he's walking the streets of Paris. . . . Universal office staff all loaded with expectations at announced return of Friedland. . . . "Duck Soup" opening today at Studio 28; looks good for a real run if one may judge by the demands made for the picture. . . . Bye, bye; Phil Reisman, Bill Fitelson and Sonia Heine are waving good-bye to old continent on top of the Berengaria—with regrets. . . . But why the regrets, after all? . . . Well, happy journey and so long.

COLUMBIA SALE NOW HOT

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•CHARLES C. PETTIJOHN, in recent appearances on behalf of the industry, is using an argument that is well worth passing on to creative workers. Very frequently we also need bits of factual evidence for the defense.

Pettijohn takes up the chief squawk now being made by such groups as the Motion Picture Research Council in their fight against block booking, which is: "The poor downtrodden exhibitor doesn't want to show those awful pictures, but he can't help himself. He has to buy blindly, and take whatever those monsters, the producers, force on him."

It's a favorite argument. And sounds so pat that we of the industry almost began to believe it ourselves. And shamefacedly apologize for the necessity of block booking.

But let's see the facts.

Through the machinery of the Film Boards of Trade Pettijohn made a survey in thirty exchange centers. And here is what the test showed:

"That what these well intentioned public groups call 'good' pictures—such as 'Old Ironsides, 'Disraeli,' 'Cradle Song,' 'Little Women,' 'Alice in Wonderland,' 'Cavalcade' and 'Evangeline' — those are the very pictures that your theatre owners call 'bad' pictures because they don't take in money at his box office. Now some public groups call Mae West pictures 'bad,' although Judge Wolfe and I do not. They call 'Little Caesar,' Eddie Robinson's gangster picture 'bad.' This survey shows that when exhibitors had the opportunity to cancel those pictures they 'did not choose' to do so. There has not been a single cancellation in the United States to date on any Mae West picture. Not one. They broke all records for getting prompt play dates and repeat engagements. 'Little Caesar,' which was the picture written around the life of Al Capone, holds the next best record."

All of which doesn't leave much to the argument that the lowly exhibitor is an innocent party forced to present pictures that he'd rather shelve.

And why should the exhibitor seek that hypocritical pose? There's no need of it. He is the servant of the public, just as the producer is. And both will exist only so long as they give that public WHAT IT WANTS.

Gate Crashing

New York.—Fox foreign importations continue arriving. Here's today's list on the Ile de France: Andre Daven, production manager; Mlle. Annabella, Andre Berly, Jean Murat, Daniel Parola and Pierre Brasseur. All on their way to Fox Hills.

Gordon May Film 'Dodsworth' on Own

New York.—All the hot competitive bidding for "Dodsworth" on the part of the majors may come to naught, because it now looks as though Max Gordon will produce the play for the screen himself, with Erpi backing, in the East.

Gordon is asking a hundred thousand and a split for the screen rights, and not any too anxious. If he makes a success of the picture on his own he will likely produce all his plays for the screen himself, with Erpi backing.

Gregory LaCava Closes Two Year MGM Deal

New York.—Gregory LaCava has closed his deal for a two-year term at MGM. LaCava has two pictures to make first before moving to the Culver City plant, one for Jesse Lasky and one for Darryl Zanuck. "Casanova," with Charles Boyer in the lead, will be the Lasky subject.

Goldwyn Adds Aarons

Samuel Goldwyn yesterday announced the appointment of Alex A. Aarons to his staff of producers. The new appointee was formerly a partner in the stage producing firm of Aarons and Freedley, which sponsored "Lady Be Good," "Hold Everything" and "Girl Crazy."

Harry Cohn Reported Ready to Sell His Controlling Interest; DuPonts Liveliest Bidders Now

New York.—That forecast The Hollywood Reporter made over a week ago of a possible change in control of Columbia Pictures reached the boiling point on Broadway yesterday, with every insider and near-insider ready to tell you that it would be only a matter of a few weeks before the reins of the company change hands.

The Du Pont interests are the favored bidders. Mixed in the picture is a mysterious "Mr. Young"not the L. A. Young, who angeled Tiffany Pictures—but another Young understood

'Rip' for Screen with W. C. Fields the Star

New York.—Paramount announces plans here to produce "Rip Van Winkle" with W. C. Fields starred. Lyda Roberti probably will be in the opposite spot.

The picture will be under William LeBaron's production wing.

Expect Early Action on New Paramount Set-up

New York.—Prospects of early action on the Paramount reorganization are seen in the series of home office conferences now in progress. Emanuel Cohen's visit East is for the purpose of joining the same confabs.

'Rip Tide' Day and Date

As a result of a number of regional previews, MGM will open "Rip Tide" in thirty cities Thursday and Friday of next week.

Selznick-Joyce Drops 100 Clients

The Selznick-Joyce office, which is reputed to have the largest number of clients of any agency, is understood to be tightening up, slicing off nearly one-quarter of its list. Releases include number of big names, one of whom is Bebe Daniels.

Agency has cut its list from 330 to 250, according to the statement of Ralph Blum at the Labor Commission hearing yesterday.

Lee Tracy Signs with Paramount for 4 Years

The Paramount-Lee Tracy deal was closed yesterday, with Tracy signing for four years, a one-year straight ticket with three annual options. The deal calls for Tracy to make three pictures a year, and possibly a fourth. His first picture will be "A Son Comes Home."

Two for Boles at Radio

Radio yesterday put through an extension on its loan-out committment from Fox on John Boles and gets the star for two pictures instead of one. He will team with Ann Harding in "Virgie Winters," and with Irene Dunne in "Age of Innocence."

'Cheaters' for the Talkies

New York.—Universal has closed the talking rights to Max Marcin's play, "Cheating Cheaters," which the company produced as a silent in 1926.

U. A. Builds in London

London.—The Pavilion Theatre here is to be razed, and replaced by a 6000 seat picture house, with United Artists controlling the venture.

'Rothschild' April 3

The opening of "The House of Rothschild" at Grauman's Chinese theatre has been definitely set for Tuesday night, April 3.

MARY PICKFORD TO MAKE EIGHT FOR U. A. RELEASE

New York—Confirming the prediction of the Hollywood Reporter of yesterday, Mary Pickford officially announced last night that she is to become an independent producer.

She announced that the directors of United Artists have put their okay on her plan, and she will release eight pictures a year through that organization. These will all be made on the United Artists lot, she said. Two of

Warner Buys 'Adeline'

New York.—"Sweet Adeline," the Jerome Kern musical originally announced as a Rowland and Brice production for the screen, has in the end become the property of Warner Brothers, the deal being closed yesterday.

My friend, Lilyan Tashman, is dead. The gay, attractive, lovable Lilyan is dead. I am only one of those who mourn her as a friend. To be mourned as a friend is the last and finest compliment to be paid her, and one which Lilyan earned by her rare and great capacity for friendship.

Her acquaintances numbered hundreds—her friends were few. But those who knew her intimately and were the recipients of her confidence for many years, have known the lasting sincerity and generosity that were Lilyan's—and they are remembering those qualities now, with full hearts.

To many, the passing of Lilyan Tashman is as though a bright light had suddenly gone out. For Lil, with her vivid personality, her wit, her genius for entertaining, and the joyous moments that were afforded by her lavish hospitality, leaves behind a corner in Hollywood that will be dim, indeed, without her.

Among those who sorrow most at the passing of Lilyan Tashman are those who were close to her many years ago, when she was very young—unknown. They sorrow deeply, because, all during the years of plenty and to the day of her death, these same friends remained close to her. The sin of ingratitude was one which Lilyan could not forgive—and one of which she was never guilty.

I shall miss her sparkle and her cheery companionship. We shall all miss the very definite things that Lilyan contributed to the Hollywood scene. But I grieve most that I have lost a stimulating and sincere friend.

LABOR BOARD HEARING SHOWS AGENTS DIVIDED

Hope of agents getting together in one organization for self-protection was smashed yesterday when it became known that the ninety agencies were split, with one group gathering with Ralph Blum and another said to be with I. Bear Newman, attorney.

Newman popped up at yesterday's Labor Commission hearing on agency control with an attempt to get Charles Lowy and Thomas Barker to postpone final acceptance of the rules and regulations for agents for ninety days. The action was a surprise to Austin Sherman, Ralph Blum and Martin Gang, legal committee for the agents. Committee rejected Newman's demands, as did Lowy and Barker.

The agency field, it was said, is hopelessly divided, due to personal differences among agents, enmities which have been carried on for years. Situation has ten of the larger agents grouped as the Blum contingent, while the smaller offices are said to be with Newman.

Newman's demand for a moratorium was said by both Austin Sherman and Charles Lowy to be unnecessary, since the agents and the Commission were agreed on rules and regulations with but minor change.

them will have Miss Pickford as the star. The others will star or feature other well known players.

Miss Pickford is now organizing her own company, which she says will probably bear her name. She is arranging the finances, and declared that a large part of the money will be her own. If the preliminary details can be ironed out in time, she hopes to start her first picture in June and have it ready for Fall release.

Already, she says, many well known stars and directors have advised her of their desire to work with her organization. She will probably have some of the biggest names in the industry connected with her.

Mary says she still retains all her former financial interests in United Artists and its subsidiaries, having given up only a one-ninth interest to Schenck; and that she and Fairbanks still control the studio ground.

Charles Furthman was excited yesterday over the Will Hays ban on any Dillinger yarn, and ready to debate the question on any corner at any time as to whether there is any harm to public interest in exposing the truth about the gangster's career.

Steffi Duna Signs For Three at Radio

Radio yesterday signed Steffi Duna to a term contract. She signed to make three pictures a year for Radio with the right to make any outside deals that she and the studio agree upon.

The studio has taken the Don Hartman story, "Romance in Manhattan," off the shelf, and assigned Salisbury Field to write the screen adaptation in which Miss Duna will have the top spot.

Ray Enright Replaces Archie Mayo on 'Dames'

Warners have assigned Ray Enright to replace Archie Mayo on the dramatic sequences of "Dames," on which Busby Berkeley has been working for the past two weeks.

Mayo is still tied up with "The Dark Tower" and Enright finished his work on "The Circus Clown" yesterday, allowing the studio to make the change. Mayo will probably direct another picture before leaving on his European vacation.

'Harmony' Ticket By Writers' Guild

The following statement was issued last night by the Screen Writers' Guild:

"More than one hundred and twenty-five members of the Screen Writers' Guild joined in sponsoring a 'harmony' ticket to be presented at the election next April 5.

"The action of the sponsoring group followed a peace agreement between members supporting the personnel and policies of the present Executive Board and Free Lance members seeking larger representation for their group on the new board.

"In addition to representatives of these two groups, the 'harmony' ticket included three proposed nominees 'at-large,' to represent any other elements in the Guild who may have been in disagreement with the members of the present Board or its policies.

The proposed ticket recommended to the membership for nomination follows:

Ralph Block, Oliver H. P. Garrett, Rupert Hughes, John Howard Lawson, Frances Marion, Brian Marlow, Wilfred MacDonald, Dudley Nichols, Ernest Pascal, Arthur Ripley, Allen Rivkin, Wells Root, Raymond Schrock, Courtenay Terrett, Tristram Tupper.

Allen Rivkin last night stated that his name was used on the ticket without his permission.

Lynn Overman Signed For Bing Crosby Film

Lynn Overman was signed yesterday by Paramount to replace Charlie Ruggles in a featured role in the Bing Crosby picture, "She Loves Me Not," which will be directed by Elliott Nugent. The Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office made the deal.

Overman is now in the B. P. Schulberg production, "Little Miss Marker."

"A WOMAN IN HER THIRTIES"
(Warners)

Direction .....Alfred J. Green
Authors....Ann Garrick and Ethel Hill
Adaptation .....Manuel Seff
Photography .....Byron Haskin
Cast: Aline MacMahon, Paul Kelly, Ann Dvorak, Patricia Ellis, Helen Lowell, Dorothy Tree, Mayo Methot, Marjorie Gateson, Dorothy Peterson.

"A Woman in Her Thirties," cleverly missing a total submersion in sentimentality, is the story of a woman with a heart as big as all outdoors.

It is thoroughly and beautifully honest . . . honest as to story, casting, direction and settings. It is utterly believable. The only fault to be found with it, as previewed last night, is its screaming need for cutting, and heavy-handed cutting, too, with compression of scenes and mood. Aside from that, the story, cast and direction could hardly be improved upon.

Aline MacMahon has one swell role. She is Madame Valerie, in the 30's, lonely, aching to love someone, and devoting her entire energies and time to her fur shop . . . until she meets Paul Kelly, a sailor who can't get a job.

They get married, she because of her overwhelming need to love a human being, and he because it offers a soft berth.

Her growing tolerance of his wandering ways; her understanding of the other women; the little human deeds of kindliness with which she softens her hard-headed business dealings, and his final awakening to the beauty of the very plain woman who is his wife, is the story . . . and a terribly true one.

Aline MacMahon's technique, which she undoubtedly has, is not apparent in her Madame Valerie. She IS Madame Valerie, and poignantly so. A gorgeous piece of work. Equalling her performance for sheer, real humanness, is Paul Kelly's.

Ann Dvorak has a smaller role, but she handles it well, and Helen Lowell contributes an outstanding piece of character work. Patricia Ellis, Mayo Methot, Majorie Gateson and Dorothy Peterson are all well cast in lesser parts, and Dorothy Tree is effectively unpleasant as Madame Valerie's designing niece.

Hats off to Al Green for the quiet intelligence of his direction; Manuel Seff adapted the Ann Garrick-Ethel Hill story, and Byron Raskin photographed.

This is a completely human and tender story, admirably acted and directed, and, when cut, should be a good bet any place.

MGM-Wellman Dicker

MGM is negotiating with William Wellman to direct "The Postman Always Rings Twice," the James M. Cain best seller. Wellman is committed to Sam Goldwyn to handle "Barbary Coast," but the MGM deal would follow it.

Princely Retinue Too Big for Zanuck

New York.—The reason that Prince Sigvaard, who renounced a throne to marry a commoner, will not make pictures for Darryl Zanuck is said to be that the Prince demanded transportation for himself and retinue of ten persons, and Zanuck balked.

Agents' Attorneys Find Labor Bd. Fair

The Labor Commission is seeking to police and not control the agency field, according to Charles Lowy, counsel for the commission, at the agency hearing yesterday. This is because the agents have not yet formulated a satisfactory code.

Austin Sherman, Ralph Blum and Martin Gang, representing the agents, made certain suggestions yesterday which were accepted, subject to the approval of the State Labor Commissioner. The Commission agreed automatically to approve contracts containing these ideas.

The first provides that, at the desire of either agent or client, the contract may be cancelled if the client has not been employed for four consecutive months, unless in that time he has refused work found by his agent where the pay was fair.

The agent must use all reasonable effort to get his clients set, and all controversies shall be referred to the Labor Commissioner.

The committee of attorneys stated that it found its efforts to draw up a satisfactory form of agent-client contract hopeless, because of the diverse nature of the agency field. Another hearing will be held tomorrow.

'Canal Boy' Off, Rogers Starting Ratoff Yarn

Due to casting difficulties, Charles R. Rogers has cancelled production on "Canal Boy," which was among his last four for Paramount and is replacing it with the Gregory Ratoff yarn, "I Love an Actress."

Adolphe Menjou and Miriam Hopkins are penciled in for the leads.

Martin Not Martyn

Francis Martin, Paramount writer, wishes the world to know that it is not he who is suing Jack Oakie for slander. It is Marty Martyn, the dance director, who is doing the suing. However, Francis is besieged by telephone calls at all hours of the day and night regarding the suit, and asks that those wishing to call about the matter notice the spelling of the name.

McGuire Stays at 'U'

William Anthony McGuire signed a new ticket for anothre year at Universal as a producer. He will produce four pictures during the next year, the first of which will be "Sutter's Gold." The deal was made by the Schulberg-Feldman and Gurney office.

Cast, Director and Story All Score

"MANHATTAN LOVE SONG"
(Monogam)

Direction .....Leonard Fields
Original novel.....Cornell Woolrich
Screen play: Leonard Fields, David Silverstein.
Photography .....Robert Planck
Cast: Robert Armstrong, Dixie Lee, Franklyn Pangborn, Nydia Westman, Helen Flint, Cecil Cunningham, Harold Waldrige, Herman Bing, George Irving, Harrison Green, Nick Copeland.

Monogram has given its "Manhattan Love Song" big-time production. Possessing more plot than is customary, the picture moves along at a fast clip due to capital direction, a better than average story of the poor rich and an all-around good cast.

Much of the credit for the success of the film should be awarded Leonard Fields, director and co-author of the screen play. With David Silverstein, he wrote what seems to be a tight script, frequently high-lighted by extremely clever pieces of comedy business. Too, the story often concedes its audience has intelligence enough to appreciate humor without undue explanation, a concession decidedly uncommon in independent productions.

Two wealthy sisters are bankrupt when their inheritance is misappropriated. Apartment rent on Park Avenue has been paid until the first of the year but there is no money for food. Only by taking their former chauffeur and maid as "paying guests" is catastrophe averted. In this emergency, the chauffeur takes charge, leading them into a situation reminiscent of "Come Out of the Kitchen."

Robert Armstrong delivers his standard performance as the chauffeur. Dixie Lee comes through with a dandy job as the blues singing debutante. Her voice has not been recorded to best advantage but when she is shown singing, a certain charm compensates the lack. She handles her comedy well.

The supporting cast contributes particularly outstanding moments. Cecil Cunningham tops with her Pancake Annie, out of the West to show her son, Harold Waldrige, life among the socially elite. Nydia Westman scores as the servant girl gone highbrow. Franklyn Pangborn, Herman Bing—what would we do without Bing when broken Germanic English is called for?—and Helen Flint give excellent account of themselves.

Photography by Robert Planck is unusually good.

Sell it for satisfying entertainment, featuring the pleasant comedy. It can't disappoint.

LaCava May Direct Marion Davies' Next

Cosmopolitan Productions is negotiating with Gregory LaCava to direct the next Marion Davies starring vehicle, "Movie Queen," which is based on an original story by Sidney Skolsky. Bing Crosby may have the co-starring spot.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

There's a new kind of agency in town that does just about everything to a story except produce it. The letterhead reads, "Final Shooting Scripts; (sic!) Scripts; Adaptations; Scenarios; Treatment; Montage Effects; Special Dialogue; Title Suggestions." They also do originals as a side line. Now if the boys are only good company, their future is practically assured. . . . Seriously though, it has long been a theory in this town that the better way to sell stories would be to submit them in screen treatment form, especially a lot of stuff that has been lying in the trunk or on the shelf or that was just overlooked because so often it's a little difficult for the buyer to see the screen possibilities and then again, story styles change and what might have been too hot a few years ago is just a program picture today. So, Mo Wax and Ronald Bank have gotten together to see what they can do about the situation.

There's one thing about the picture business; no matter where you put it, it's always good for a laugh. So they were about to make a murder mystery and the front office sent word that they wanted an actor with a Scotch accent for the leading role. So they tested a number of people but could get no one with a good, Scotch accent. . . . Finally they sent an appeal to the front office to let them use an Irish accent instead, because they were easier to find coupled with good acting. And the front office said it would be impossible to use anything but a Scotch accent because practically every other line in the script referred to the hero as the man from Scotland Yard!

Helen Morgan is about to journey out to San Diego to play the lead in a play called "Memories." . . . Just to prove that New York can have anything that California has, "The Drunkard" has come into town for a run. . . George White is going around telling the world what a snap picture-making is, which may be another answer to what's wrong with the picture business. . . . Somebody in commenting on Mr. White's "Scandals" said that if it had been the first talkie ever made it would have been a sensation. . . . Moriarity's (Marlborough House) had to close its doors on account of a free-for-all that started when someone objected to all the "furriners" coming over here to take advantage of the low dollar. . . . Twenty-One is blooming and booming again. . . The Shuberts want Steffi Duna in the worst way for a new review. . . Have the Marion Gerings really separated for "good"? . . . Arthur Kober, the Sid Perelmans and Jack Kirkland and his bride sail Satiddy on the Rex for some nights in Spain.

Waycoff Now Ames

Leon Waycoff has changed his name to Kurt Ames. Player just finished a featured role in "Now I'll Tell" at Fox, and will be listed under his new monicker.

with the ART DIRECTORS

William Darling, of Fox Studios, and Cedric Gibbons, at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, are carrying sore fingers this week as a result of so much handshaking. Darling won the Academy award for art direction on "Cavalcade," and Gibbons won the Hollywood Reporter award for the same on "When Ladies Meet."

A lot of complimentary raves are being passed to Fred Hope and Alexander Toluboff at MGM for their work as art directors on the Norma Shearer picture, "Rip Tide." As the art directors are usually almost completely forgotten in the studios when compliments are passed out, these two gentlemen are smiling broadly.

Even the picture critics are raving publicly about the art direction of Hans Dreier and Bernard Herzbrun on Paramount's "Melody in Spring," praising the colorfulness, yet excellent taste shown in the designing of the settings.

Van Nest Polglase and Al Berman did the sets for Radio's "Crime Doctor," which the critics predict will hit with the public. A nice job, too, according to the opinion of their fellow art directors.

After studying up on the corn country of the middle west, Chick Kirk has had to forget it, for "Alien Corn" is not to be made right now. That's what he was researching for, to design the sets for that picture. He says he knows a lot about corn, anyway.

Hans Dreier wins the undying respect of his fellow workers for asking Paramount to let the public know that Roland Anderson deserved credit along with him for the art direction on "Farewell to Arms," which took second place in the Academy awards competition. Only Dreier's name was mentioned, but he says Anderson had as much to do with it as he.

Dave Garber has finished the sets on the Charles R. Rogers production, "Private Scandal," and has started designing the settings for "Canal Boy."

Oh, yes! Those special effect settings that Willie Pogany is doing for the Warner Brothers' "Dames" are still being kept a deep, dark secret. Busby Berkeley says, "Just wait until you see them and you'll open your eyes." Willie says nothing.

Some studios give public credit for art direction. Others do not. The public is becoming art director conscious these days, and many persons in close touch with the art directors are wondering why practically everyone in the studios gets publicity but the art directors.

'U' Closes '1 More River'

New York.—Universal has finally taken up its option on Galsworthy's "One More River." The deal was handled through Pinker and Morrison.

'Speakeasy' Dates Back 3 Centuries

Oldest allusion to a Speakeasy, the derivation of which has several columnists battling, is claimed to have been discovered by David Silverstein, of the Silverstein-Fields writing team. Browsing through the Huntington Library records for the sake of "The Scarlet Letter," he found where Minister Increase Mather, of Boston, used the word in a sermon dated 1638.

Milestone and Col. In One-Picture Deal

The Columbia-Lewis Milestone situation was ironed out yesterday with his present three-picture deal being called off and a new one-picture deal arranged. Milestone will wash up at Columbia when he finishes directing the Wallace Smith yarn, "The Captain Hates the Sea."

On his three-picture deal, the first picture was to have been "Red Square," for which the director spent considerable time in Russia doing research work.

Say Hull Deal Closed

Reports reaching Harry Edington yesterday from his New York office were that Henry Hull had signed on the dotted line for his Universal contract, contradicting the statement credited to Hull in New York Tuesday that he had signed no picture deal.

Foster Signed by Fox

Preston Foster has been assigned to a featured spot in "Always Honest," which Harry Lachman will put into work at the Fox Western Avenue plant Monday. Sally Eilers and James Dunn have the leads.

Reisner on Musical

MGM yesterday assigned Charles Reisner to direct "Student Tour," a musical comedy with Charles Butterworth and Jimmy Durante in the leads. Picture will be produced by Monta Bell.

MGM Holds Erwin

MGM yesterday took up the option on Stuart Erwin for another term. Player is now at Columbia on loan for "Twentieth Century" and from there leaves on a personal appearance tour.

THREATEN ERPI CONTROL

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•THE sad fate of the fight against double bills is just another lesson to this industry that it is not its own boss. In a copy-book motto manner, we all admit in nonchalant moments that "the public is the boss." But in point of fact we don't let it guide all of our actions.

Then the public rises up every now and then and smites us one on the ear.

And we learn that sometimes a copy-book axiom can mean something.

Remember the start of the sales season last year, when the major sales managers with one accord announced that double features were dead?

And the juggling of the code phraseology which made it seem certain that the death verdict had been clinched?

But men propose, and a great gelatinous mass known as the public disposes.

And today, double features are back stronger than ever.

Why?

Because enough exhibitors, with their eyes only on the banker downtown, the butcher on the corner, and the grocer in the middle of the block —and having to meet all of them— found that the public would pay the freight for double features.

So executive pronouncements and code paragraphs can go out the window.

Speaking from a strictly personal viewpoint, we are unable to see how anybody can sit through two present day features, three reels or so of shorts, a COUPLE OF REELS of the local merchants' announcements and trailers they show nowadays, and consider it an evening of entertainment.

But who are we? And who are the other folks in the picture business who agree with us?

People ARE doing it. People who pay cash, hard-earned cash, for what they consider entertainment.

People who stayed away in irritating numbers when their neighborhood theatres tried to obey the higher-ups and cut out double features.

People who ought to drive home to us once more a lesson we all thought we knew, that the darn PUBLIC is our boss. Yesterday, today—and next season.

Lloyd Plans to Go Indie Like Pickford

Right on the heels of the announcement of Mary Pickford's intention of going into independent production, making two pictures a year, starring herself, and six others with other star names, comes the rumor that Harold Lloyd is hot on this idea, which he has been talking about for the past five years, and is reported to be talking a deal for a major release of a series of features which he will produce and not act in.

There is also talk that he is considering the Frank Craven play, "The Nineteenth Hole," as one of his first productions if his plans go through.

New York.—Trouble is brewing for the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and Erpi, according to a statement made yesterday by Robert Robins, executive secretary of the American Society for the Protection of Motion Picture Theatres and its affiliate, the National Electronic Association. Mr. Robins predicts that the A. T. & T. will soon be forced to divest itself of all its diverse subsidiary interests not directly concerned with telephonic communication.

'Scandals' Does Dive

THE LOW DOWN

It makes us a little ill to have to report upon the marital status of a brilliant actor and his wife, who, if we can believe some reliable information, will soon hit the divorce courts. The snake in their garden is a famous femme star, herself a wife and mother, who deliberately and ruthlessly shattered the happiness of the couple in question, without waiting for time to solve their problem, if such could be the case. With all Hollywood hoping that the actor and his wife would stand the gaff and see it through, we now hear that, although a divorce was denied by the pair a few weeks ago, they are definitely planning to get one . . . at least the husband wants it. If, when he is free, he becomes "still another husband" to the femme star, he will not find her so glamorous nor so sought-after as she might have been. Because sentiment locally is heavily against her, and people in their contempt for her recent actions, no longer refer to her as anything that even rhymes with lady.

Before Warner Brothers changed the name of Milton LeRoy to Philip Reed, there were a lot of stories around as to Milton's "stage background" and so forth, and a lot of local scribes were duly impressed—or were they? Well, anyway, imagine our surprise to have called to our attention, a book titled "The Rise of Elsa Potter," full of photographic illustrations. The pictures showed, sure enough, Milton LeRoy (complete in B.V.D.'s) in various stages of facial expession. So, who other than Milton LeRoy—pardon us, Philip Reed, could have posed for the pretty pictures?

So it seems that a few weeks before Joany Bennett's new baby was born, Gene Markey went to a fortune-teller for a little advance information. The woman took his hand, looked into the crystal ball and said: "You know, Mr. Markey—you SHOULD have been a writer." Mr. Markey's face is still purple.

New York REVIEWS

"GEORGE WHITE'S SCANDALS"

Music Hall Theatre

Sun: Mr. White put on a lively show. The music is catchy and accompanied by comedy sketches amusingly presented. Jimmy Durante prances through the film, singing here, making love there, all very Durante. If the "Scandals" continue to keep their Times Square atmosphere as effectively as this one, there should be a new movie edition along each year.

News: Mr. White presents a series of song and dance ensembles, and in nearly every one of them he takes a poke at the elaborate and often tedious routines by making these numbers something to laugh at. Most of the comedy, including the lyrics of some of the songs, is off color. Jimmy Durante's stuff isn't as funny as usual and is considerably more vulgar.

Post: The entertainment formula is simple and effective. It consists of songs, beautiful girls, ensemble dances and songs, beautiful girls and ensemble dances. The dance numbers are elaborate and colorful, but they are neither new nor effectively staged. The songs are tuneful and well sung, but for sheer bad taste we doubt if anything on the screen could touch them since Will Hays resigned the postmastership.

Mirror: Mr. White's first film "Scandals" is a gorgeous and rollicking revue, and one which undoubtedly will be a great treat to those Main Streets which never have been enlivened by a personal visit of one of his characteristic Broadway productions.

Times: A good deal more can be said in praise of the production than of the writing, for the narrative of this picture is of even less importance than those of other musical offerings. There are some clever ideas in the musical numbers.

Herald-Tribune: Its chief virtues, I should say, are a couple of good song numbers, a certain air of good nature and the personal contributions of Jimmy Durante and Miss Alice Faye. High amid its faults should certainly be placed a lot of unnecessary humor, a feeble narrative, and Mr. Vallee's earnest efforts to be humorous.

American: An ornate, lavishly produced, exquisitely photographed, but undeniably dull revue, this one must depend upon Messrs. Durante, Edwards and Vallee for whatever entertainment value it possesses.

World-Telegram: At best, the film version of his noted revue is but fair-to-middling entertainment. Essentially a revue with a backstage romance interpolated between numbers, the screen "Scandals" movs along slothfully except when one Jimmy Durante is on the screen. Then it seems to me to be boisterously funny.

Journal: In picturizing his revues, Mr. White followed his Broadway formula and the film offers song numbers, each with several reprises, blackouts, chorus routines and dance ensembles. There are more girls and the sets, natually, are larger and more lavish, but otherwise it's a White stage production done before the camera.

Para. at Production Peak; 11 in Work

Paramount has reached a production peak of all time with 3219 now on the payroll and 11 pictures in work. The months of April and May will also see plenty of activity on that lot as the studio expects to start 17 pictures during that time.

Due to the number of people working on the lot, the studio has issued orders to the staff to cut down on bringing guests to the commissary in order to give employees a chance to eat.

signed an "assent" to change his mind.

The point is of interest since the forty exhibitors concerned are members of the Allied States group, which originally started suit against the Code Authority, and later compromised. If Rosenblatt stands by his declaration it is very possible that Allied will once more go to the courts, which is just what every NRA official does not want at this time.

Bebe Daniels and Lyon Set on Stage Showings

Investigation by a Reporter representative of the story printed a few days ago concerning the shaving of the Selznick-Joyce list by close to a hundred clients, discloses that Bebe Daniels, one of the players no longer under the S-J banner, had asked for her release over a month ago, and after a series of amicable conferences with S-J execs, extending even to cables to Frank Joyce in London, the agency had consented to grant Miss Daniels' release.

Miss Daniels and Ben Lyon are leaving Hollywood this week to start a personal appearance tour in Chicago, the extent of which is only up to their own decision on accepting bookings.

Actors' Guild Hits With New Magazine

The first issue of the Screen Actors' Guild monthly magazine, the Screen Player, was put in the mails yesterday.

Comprising sixteen pages and cover in two colors, the new publication is one the actors need not be ashamed of. In fact, they should be rather proud of this, their initial effort in the publication field, for it is attractively gotten up and has interesting contents.

Eddie Cantor leads off with an article telling what the Guild stands for, in which he explains that the Guild was created because of the "new deal" of President Roosevelt which gave the actors the concrete encouragement and "political set-up which has made possible the organization of the Guild and its growth to date." He concludes with assurance that the Guild functions not only to secure the actor his rights, but to see that the actor fulfills his obligations to his employer at all times.

Ann Harding contributes a breezy "rib" at press agents. Ralph Block deplores the fact that the individual expression of the actor has been sacrified in pictures. Jeannette Sauer gives New York notes. Claude King does an acceptable sports article. In addition there are departments for Junior Guild notes, organization announcements and chatter about personalities.

Announcement was also made that the board of directors will be increased to 33 members. At present the figure is 21. The following slate was presented by the nominating committee for election: For president, Eddie Cantor; first vice president, Robert Montgomery; second vice president, Ann Harding; third vice president, James Cagney; secretary, Kenneth Thomson; assistant secretary, Richard Tucker; treasurer, Lucile Gleason; assistant treasurer, Jean Hersholt.

Manckiewicz has also asked for reinstatement in the branch and that Wanda Tuchock has just joined.

When Monogram attempted to borrow Heather Angel from Fox some time ago for the lead in "Jane Eyre," the bid was refused. Now Fox wants the story for Miss Angel, but Monogram refuses to sell. Adele Commandini scripted and the major plant is said to be interested in the script as well.

According to Monogram executives every major studio has attempted to buy the story, but since Monogram will make it, it is not for sale. The independent wlil import an English actress for the lead if it is unsuccessful in finding one locally.

Aylesworth Active On Radio City Pic

The picture planned will be the "NBC Revue of 1934," and is to be produced jointly by M. H. Aylesworth in New York and Pan Berman in Hollywood. All of the NBC radio stars and all of the RKO screen stars will be used in the cast, making the greatest assembly of stars ever gathered in one picture.

The story, which is the romance of a Radio City usherette and a publicity man, will have Radio City for a background. Aylesworth, according to the plans, will boss the making of these scenes, while Berman will handle those in Hollywood. This picture will mark Aylesworth's debut as a producer.

Jerry Goldberg, son of the late Joe Goldberg, has joined the Hoffman-Schlager office as an associate.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

This code business is still the worry and laughs around New York, despite the fact that it everyone pretty jittery. And in connection with codes, we ran into a Department of Justice man on his way back to Washington to report on various codes in California, including the picture set-up. And it is curiously irritating to us to find that the thing that still sticks in the craw of the government is not minimum salaries, but maximum salaries. . . . The first crack the Department of Justice man made was: "How can anyone in the world be worth ten thousand dollars a week?" Which question now takes first place in that old game of "cliche." And that same question is always asked without any thought being given to the answer on the part of the asker.

This particular person was a bit astonished to find out that there is no way of defintiely measuring the worth of a star to a picture . . . that if they were put on a percentage basis, there would be even more large incomes among the stars. He had never thought of the fact that the buyers of pictures run into millions, that these millions know nothing of picture production and their main interest is in the star or stars of the pictures. He had also never considered the fact that an actor's lot is not a long term one and that he must amass in a few years enough capital to give him a decent income for the workless years, that a business man can work all his life. . . . We repeat these fundamental truths in the fond hope that some code men are interested enough in the industry to read a trade paper, to stop just one moment to figure out the more apparent reasons why a star is entitled to any salary a producer is willing to pay because no producer will pay more than he can make a large profit on. The pay-off to all this is the fact that the code man who was trying so hard to save the industry money by figuring out a way to cut salaries, was also complaining about the fact that he had to pay an income tax to a government sorely in need of money and his support.

Gregory Ratoff finally got on a boat and sailed for England, but up until the last moment, nobody could be sure he'd make it. All on account of he's kind of a "man without a country" since he won't be an American citizen until a few more months have elapsed and they had to get a special passport for him. Then the English consul had to have a consultation about putting a visa on it. Then there was something about an alien labor permit. And then there was the income tax that had to be straightened out before he could leave. All very confusing, but the saling was tarrific and included the Dick Arlens and Evelyn Laye.

Bob Harris Coming

New York.—Robert Harris, Universal's eastern story head, left by train yesterday for story conferences at the Hollywood plant. He will be there about ten days.

MGM to Lose Its Famous Fig Tree

No longer will Greta Garbo be able to overlook the Verboten sign and pick figs from the famous 36-year-old fig tree at the MGM studios. It is going to be cut down so newly planned alterations in the wardrobe buildings can be made.

The tree was part of a ranch before Thomas Ince bought the site and built the first studio buildings. It has stood there ever since. Beneath it the most famous stars of the industry have stood and plucked its fruit. When Greta Garbo first came to the studio there was a sign—"Do not pick the figs"—on the tree. She couldn't read English, so picked them. Since then everyone has followed her example.

A.S.C. WARNS INDUSTRY OF TOURNEY SOLICITOR

The officers of the American Society of Cinematographers, through their business manager, Allen M. Watt, last night issued a warning to everyone in the motion picture business against a man they claim has been solciiting prizes supposedly for use by the ASC in its golf tournament, to be held April 8.

Mr. Watt declared that this man is not connected with the ASC in any way, has no authority to solicit prizes or prize money, and asks everyone in the industry not to contribute to him or to anyone except members of a duly authorized committee, who will present written authorization, bearing the seal of the society.

He said that the man had already collected a large check from Carole Lombard and a $40 golf bag from Ruby Keeler.

According to Watt, the man approached him and proposed that he take over the handling of the tournament.

"I asked him to bring me in a written plan of what he suggested, and told him that if it met with our approval we MIGHT then talk business," said Watt. "He brought in a rough outline of a proposed poster. I told him to bring in his plan before we would talk. The next I heard was when a major studio telephoned me that he had put up posters about the tournament and was at work soliciting. He has nothing to do with us.

"We are going to have the tournament. We will have prizes, but our own committee will arrange for them."

Baroness Sues Radio, Charging Plagiarism

Alleging plagiarism of her story, "She Spies," Baroness Carla Jensen filed an action against Radio in Superior Court yesterday asking damages totalling $750,000.

Threaten Erpi Control

waged by his organizations, Warner Brothers and General Talking Pictures, against the A. T. & T. monopoly in the sound field in motion pictures. Also a formal complaint against the corporation is being prepared for presentation to Senator Dill, of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. Robins predicts that Erpi will have to give up the sound picture equipment field and the actual production of pictures, and that the Western Electric plant will be kept to manufacture telephone equipment only. It also means, he says, that the ten-year licensing agreements with exhibitors and the 17-year contracts with producers will come to an end.

The Robins production is based on opinions of high Government officials that the monopolistic privileges granted A. T. & T. originally were never intended to permit the company to extend its powers into fields other than telephonic communication. He cites also the opinion of Judge Nields, at Wilmington, last June, when he said that all the Erpi contracts with exhibitors and producers were monopolistic and in violation of the Clayton anti-trust laws.

The seriousness of the situation is indicated by the report that A. T. & T. has already offered to throw all alleged rights and real rights to sound patents on the open market for any indie manufacturer to use at a reasonable fixed price, a concession never before made.

The permanent injunction suit brought by General Talking Pictures against Erpi comes up for trial at Wilmington on April 2. Adolph Zukor, Nicholas Schenck and David Bernstein made depositions yesterday for use at this hearing.

Austria Restricts Uniforms in Films

Vienna.—Should American producers not have troubles enough to comply with certain wishes of European governments, here is a new bother for them. The wearing of uniforms in films shown in Austria is bound to certain laws put into force in 1933. It is forbidden to exhibit or wear in an unworthy way any uniform of the former imperial army, navy, or any other uniform having been in use for any official employment for the defence of the territory in peace or wartime.

The Austrian War Ministry has issued the terms and conditions under which use may be made of uniforms in films to be shown in Austria. In several parts of the Austrian territory commissions will be nominated to supervise production and to advise producers on what is allowed and what is not.

Seven French Firms Unite For Economy

Paris.—Seven of the smaller French producers have formed a syndicate to reduce their producing expenses. One studio will be used successively by each of them, thus reducing their rent. They will engage a staff which will work for all the firms and make all their purchases collectively. They will examine possibility of organizing a joint distribution service.

Each of the producers will make two films a year. The syndicate, it is said, will realize a saving of 100,000 francs per film. The members are Messrs. Aguiar, Boulay, Gandera, Guerlais, Hourvitch, Kamenka and Nalpas.

Million More Seats Than People in Paris

Paris.—Statistics show that on a population of 2,871,429 for the French capital, there are 3,726,533 seats a week in the Paris film theatres. A further increase in the number of theatres would only be still more detrimental to the trade.

French film people have come to the same conclusion as in America and England that there are enough theatres for the time being.

Albert's Life in Film

SCREEN PLAY

COVER DISPLAY.....Norma Shearer (MGM)

Screen Play for April is interesting mostly because of a new $1,000 contest, which isn't saying so much for the stories, is it?

However, read "Put Yourself In Hepburn's Shoes," in which Val Lewton very cleverly puts in a word for Miss Hepburn; Dick Mook's story, "Clark Gable's Double Life"; "Margaret Sullavan Explains Herself," by Sonia Lee; "Steppes to Stardom," (Anna Sten) by Sidney Skolsky, and "Crosby's Hat Still Fits," by Jim Tully.

J. Eugene Chrisman has two stories, one that appears a little far-fetched, "The Girl Who Brought Garbo Back," (Kathryn Sergava) and another story on Garbo already done to death, "Love Comes to Greta Garbo."

Clark Warren has a yarn on Otto Kruger, "His Voice Spells L-O-V-E"; Nina Wilcox Putnam tells about "One Man's Search For Love," (Bruce Cabot); Gladys McVeigh has "Jolson Shares the Spotlight"; Marcella Burke interviews "Gary's Bride"; and Gene Raymond says to Helen Burns "I Prefer to Work Like the Devil."

Another department, "Hollywood Barrage," by Arthur Guy Empey, starts this month in Screen Play. It's not so hot.

The best story to come out so far on Anna Sten is "The Man Who Gambled a Million on a New Star," by Dorothy Calhoun. It is in the April Movie Classic.

Lynn Fairfield has a swell story, "The Blue Eagle—and What It Means to the Movies"; Charles Brock waxes most amusing in "Explaining the Moods of Connie Bennett"; Hal Hall writes a good yarn, "Margaret Sullavan's Final Interview—So She Says"; and Jack Grant is clever in "Jolson Says He's Leaving the Movies."

Mark Dowling has "Hollywood Wastes a Fortune in Fame," and enumerates the old-time stars whom the public still wants to see; "Jean Harlow Turns Author," by Gladys Hall, is interesting; Elizabeth Goldbeck lines up all the occasions when "George Raft Defied Hollywood"; Sonia Lee tells about Warner Baxter's kidnaping in "A Secret Until Now"; Don Benedict talks about the stars on the air in "Hepburn's Greatest Rival Is Hepburn"; Winifred Adyelotte has "Why American Husbands Fail As Lovers," interviewing Frank Morgan, and Ruth Biery concludes her "Private Life of Mae West."

BIG PICS JAM BROADWAY

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE are in receipt of an anonymous letter. It had almost reached the waste basket—because of anonymity—when our eyes caught lines enough to know that it was at least a "charming" letter.

So, despite the fact that Billy Wilkerson set the rule against publication of anonymous letters, the note of charm about this particular one gains it at least the right of mention.

It is a letter defending supervisors. And the "charm" part comes in the fact that it is evidently a letter from a supervisor's secretary. Feminine.

Who could resist such an appeal?

"Why does everybody pick on the supervisors?" says the letter.

"I have sat in on more conferences than I have seen Summers. And I have heard just as many ridiculous suggestions from writers and directors as I will ever hear from supervisors.

"I have seen authors take with a meek 'yes' suggestions from a supervisor that I knew were only feelers, straws thrown in the wind to get reactions. Should the supervisor be blamed afterwards if those writers didn't have courage enough to speak up and state their views at that moment?

"I have heard directors fight for pet scenes that had no place in the story, but only came into existence because they had discovered a new angle, or had a favorite line of dialogue. And I have heard supervisors who knew better finally agree on these pet scenes against their better judgment because they knew the director would never get out of their hair until they did."

And so on. Goes this "charming letter." From an experienced girl. Evidently.

Bless you, my dear (we always talk that way when speaking to the charming sex, in writing) we are not picking on the supervisors.

We know there is just as much right in what you have written as in all the clever diatribes against supervisors that have ever been published.

But the whole blamed thing is wrong!

Great books are created by ONE mind aiming with all its force at a single target.

Lack of N.Y. Show Windows to Exhibit New and Coming Hits Is Embarrassing The Majors

New York.—The picture business is in for that joyous—and also troublesome situation—of having a surplus of big pictures coming along at the same time. The situation on Broadway, key artery of the show world, illustrates a condition that, in minor degree, will soon be duplicated in numerous metropolitan centers. But it also forecasts a feast of good shows for the week-to-week houses of the nation when the big ones get general release.

Broadway's show windows are choked up, and the condition has the ma-

HURD VICTOR IN GREAT IATSE UNION SHOWDOWN

THE LOW DOWN

In spite of the Mayfair being called off, all the other Satiddy night doings went off—with a bang! The highlight was the successful Temple Israel benefit at the Pantages Theatre. All the "promised performers" came through—Grace Moore, with her beautiful songs; Bing Crosby, Charlie Butterworth and Frank McHugh with their inimitable "Boswell" act; Ethel Merman, Will Rogers, Fred Stone, Ben Bernie and Ted Lewis with their bands, Jack Oakie—just a few of those who entertained.

Around three a.m. most of Hollywood was in the Colony Club, where they spent the rest of the "night." Glimpsed there were Lee Tracy, Isabel Jewell, Lyle Talbot, the Clarence Browns, Kendall Glaenzer, Lewis Milestone, Liz Dupont, Nigel Bruce, Ivan Lebedeff, Wera Engels, Eddie Buzzell, the Sam Jaffes, Harry Cohn, Sam Harris—and great gobs more.

The John Monk Saunders (Fay Wray) switched their Mayfair party to their own domicile and wined the David Selznicks, the Bill Goetzes, the Freddie Marches, the Jack Woodys (Helen Twelvetrees), the Jack Morgans, Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young.

A little late—but still funny. For the opening of "Wonder Bar," Jack LaRue went and bought himself (or caused to have made) a brand new, full-dress suit—and very nice too! He dressed in a terrible rush, he was so anxious to get himself out in the new suit. So by mistake he grabbed a dress vest that he wears in the stujos—a bright yellow one—the kind that photograph such a nice white! So when he got in front of those lights at the theatre—there he was in his working vest! In other words—he was in such a hurry to get to the opening, he forgot he was going to an opening!

We nearly passed out at a party the other night when we overheard the following conversation. A writer was telling a certain actress that reading certain subjects would widen her scope, improve her acting, and so forth.

"For instance," he said, "you should read Zola."

"Okay," said the actress, "I will—who wrote it?" (!)

Entire New Set-up For the Cameramen

The Cameramen's union held a special meeting last night, called for the express purpose of ousting Howard Hurd, business manager of Local 659 and storm center of the organization for months. When the verbal fireworks were over Hurd emerged victorious and more firmly entrenched than he has been for months.

As a matter of fact, Hurd was the only union salaried official left on the rolls when the meeting was over. Edward T. Estabrook, business manager, took the floor at the very start of the meeting and resigned. He explained that the union must conserve its resources and retrench. His resignation, he explained, was his contribution toward that policy. He was given a roaring vote of thanks for his service to the union.

After it had been decided to retain Hurd, the board of executives then outlined the plan for cutting the overhead of the organization. This is what will be done:

All salaried employees, with the exception of Louise Lincoln, stenographer and bookkeeper, will be dropped April 1. Thus leaving only Hurd and one girl to run the business of the organization. The present ten offices which the union uses will be cut down to only three; the general office, the board room and the office of the business representative. The union magazine, The International Photographer, will be discontinued as the union's publication and will be disposed of to an outside party.

For months there has been an undercurrent of feeling against Hurd among certain quarters of the membership. It came to a head last week when they demanded a special meeting to take up the business of ousting him.

It was the contention of some members that Hurd was to blame for the unsuccessful strike of last summer. They also declared that his presence in the organization was keeping a lot of first cameramen from joining the union. He had a contract with more than a year to run. Some months ago Ed Estabrook was made business manager and Hurd was put in the background.

Last night every member had a chance to talk. There were heated speeches for and against him. Then it was moved that his office be vacated. This was defeated by a vote of 100 to 74, and Hurd was retained. Further, he was placed back in active charge of the union affairs, beginning April 1. The board of executives were instructed to meet with him and try to readjust his contract downward.

It was indicated last night that the union will now start a gradual buildup, with the hope that it will eventually regain the spot held before the strike.

Proud Eddie

Eddie Laemmle's new office at the "U" has an autographed photo of Carl Laemmle, Sr., to Eddie, which not only says some nice personal things but which adds: "—and a director who consistently on his pictures made more money for Universal than any other man." Someone has been studying the distribution records.

Billie Seward Held

Columbia has exercised the option on Billie Seward's contract for another six month period. The player has just completed a role in the John Barrymore picture "Twentieth Century."

Len Daly Quits Para.

New York.—Len Daly, of the Paramount foreign publicity department, is leaving that organization to join a similar department at United Artists under Sammy Cohen.

Martin Beck Abroad

New York.—Martin Beck, vaudeville pioneer and for a period active in RKO theatre operations, sailed for Europe on the Ile de France Saturday, with some mysterious plans.

Irene Dunne East

Irene Dunne leaves by train tonight for a vacation in New York. She will be gone about two weeks.

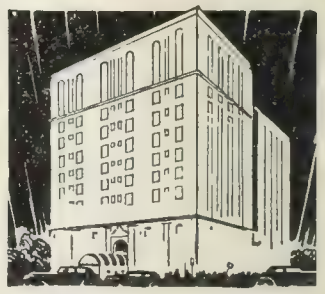
Sherman Collecting Heavy From the 'U'

Report has it that Lowell Sherman has collected to date in excess of $90,000 from Universal, without yet actually starting production on a picture.

The kick to the report is that Sherman is in the clear, it being said that he hasn't refused a single story offered to him for production. Apparently Universal gives him stories, then after a week or so of thought, takes them away.

Director's contract is for a forty-week period, during which he was to make three pictures. But if the forty weeks are up, and no pictures made, that's just Universal's hard luck.



Stone Set in 'Island'

Lewis Stone has been assigned the role of Captain Smollitt in the Wallace Beery-Jackie Cooper film, "Treasure Island," which is being directed by Victor Fleming under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg.

Monckton Hoffe has been assigned to write a treatment of "What Every Woman Knows," the J. M. Barrie play, which will be Helen Hayes' first starring vehicle on her return to Hollywood. Irving Thalberg is producing.

'VIVA VILLA' OUTSTANDING TRIUMPH OF SHOWMANSHIP

Should Be One of Year's Big Smashes

"VIVA VILLA"
(MGM)

Direction .....Jack Conway
Screen Play.....Ben Hecht
Suggested by book by Edgcumb Pinchon, O. B. Stade.
Photography: James Wong Howe and Charles G. Clarke.
Cast: Wallace Beery, Leo Carrillo, Fay Wray, Donald Cook, Stuart Erwin, Henry B. Walthall, Joseph Schildkraut, Katherine DeMille, George E. Stone, Phillip Cooper, David Durand, Frank Puglia, Francis X. Bushman Jr., Adrian Rosley, Henry Armetta, Pedro Regas, George Regas.

Trot out that frequently misused word "epic." Dust off all of the adjectives you haven't even thought of since "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "Big Parade." Dig up a whole flock of synonyms for "stupendous" and "colossal." Then shout "Viva Villa" at the top of your lungs. David Selznick has given it everything that makes it a showman's picture—including, of course, an advance legitimate news campaign that money could not buy.

Mexico should have no quarrel with this presentation of its Revolutionary bandit hero. Pancho Villa, as written by Ben Hecht and magnificently realized by Wallace Beery, is a simple soul. As a boy, he watched his father flogged to death for the sin of protesting when his lands were confiscated by tyrannical overlords, already wealthy. The lad flees to the hills and emerges a Mexican Robin Hood.

To this uncouth, untutored bandit chief, there is only one wrong, the oppression of peons—only one law, death to the oppressors. His cruelties are inflicted as a child is cruel, without thought that there might be another way to gain his objective. Primitive, barbaric, death is to him a triviality. What matter if men die today or tomorrow! They are destined to die some day anyhow. Yet, despite his grossness, he is essentially a gay fellow, worshipped by all peons, followed adoringly by his band of cutthroats. It is a vivid, unforgettable portrait of the man Villa that Beery and MGM give us.

Certain liberties have been taken with history, more by omission and suggestion than by deviation from basic fact. Many characters are entirely fictional, others patterned after real people. For example, General Pascal is more than a little suggestive of Huerta.

The simplicity of the characterization of Villa actually vies with the massive spectacle of the production. In this respect, the picture is more than masterful. Not often is there maintained such close affinity between human interest in a character and the grim, uncompromising horror of guerrilla warfare. Battles, fought by ragged men on horseback, have a graphic intensity that will leave you limp in your seat. Yet it is no slight upon the impressiveness of imposing spectacle to say that the real power of the picture lies in the humanness of Villa—a glorified portrait, if you will, but nonetheless an always engrossing one. Without doubt, Beery has never given a finer performance than his Pancho Villa.

Second only to Beery is Henry B. Walthall as Madero, a portrayal that ranks with his Little Colonel of "Birth of a Nation." Madero is the quiet, saint-like revolutionary leader for whom Villa campaigns and from whom he learns his first refinements—such as adding a "please" to the command "Shut up!" To avenge the assassination of Madero, "the little feller," Villa returns from exile to stage a second revolt against the villainous General Pascal, played extremely well by Joseph Schildkraut.

Stuart Erwin wanders through the story as an American newspaperman who makes friends with Villa. To make good the reporter's false dispatch to his paper, Villa captures a town, "just the way Johnny said it was done." Chalk up another excellent job for Erwin.

Leo Carrillo scores heavily as Sierra, Villa's lieutenant. It falls to Sierra's lot to commit most of the cruelties of the revolution, but in Carrillo's hands the assignment retains sympathy, in itself an achievement.

The other parts are smaller, but Katherine DeMille as Rosita, one of Villa's many wives (he always marries his girls if only for the evening); Frank Puglia as Villa's father, Phillip Cooper as the boy Pancho, David Durand as a young bugler, and George E. Stone as the poetic letter-writer, all make outstanding their opportunities. Fay Wray has one of the best scenes of her career, a powerful one, when she is horsewhipped by Villa. Donald Cook is convincing.

Direction is credited to Jack Conway, to whom was given the tremendous task of filming the version made in Hollywood around the scenes obtained in Mexico. No greater tribute to his work can be made than that it is impossible to tell which is which, though fifty per cent of the credit for the picture's sweep and power must go to whoever shot the Mexican sequences. And to Vorkapich must go credit for a crashing crescendo of tempo reminiscent of the "Birth of a Nation" climax, when the word spreads from hill to dale, "Villa Wants You!"

Photographic credits are divided between James Wong Howe and Charles G. Clarke. Together they have filmed scenes of remarkable beauty and breath-taking action.

A word, too, about the musical score of Herbert Stothart, which is in perfect accord with the theme.

It is to be expected that "Viva Villa," which ran a few minutes over two hours at the preview, will be cut again before release.

Young and Old

In the lobby after the "Viva Villa" preview — David Selznick the center of one group of handshakers on the production and, off in a corner, courtly Henry Walthall modestly accepting compliments from hoi polloi.

RCA Not Involved In G.E. Investigation

Washington.—Indications in the initial blast by a "protective committee" against the General Electric Company that RCA Photophone would be involved are completely evaporated on investigation.

COLUMBIA'S 'ONE WAS GUILTY' ANOTHER OF THOSE THINGS

Never Rises Above Mediocrity Level

"ONE WAS GUILTY"
(Columbia)

Direction .....Lambert Hillyer
Screen Play.....Harold Shumate
Photography .....John Stumar
Cast: Ralph Bellamy, Shirley Grey, Willard Robertson, Lita LaRoy, Vincent Sherman, Ralph Remley.

"One Was Guilty" is just one of those things that have to be put over on the other side of the Columbia ledger to make up for the occasional Frank Capra picture that goes on the right side. It's a mystery, but at the conclusion the only mystery is why the talents of Ralph Bellamy, a good trouper, were wasted on such inconsequential mediocrity, and why a capable director like Lambert Hillyer was called on to struggle with it.

Bellamy is seen as an inspector who is given incredibly stupid clues to unravel. The story revolves about the murder of a heavyweight champion in a vacant apartment, closed by a mortgage and a meanie old banker. Two janitors and a radio start things going, helped out by a constantly moving elevator, which is far more mysterious than any of the humans in the story who are supposed to be under suspicion.

Shirley Grey is seen as a homeless little stenographer who broke into the apartment seeking a place to sleep. Isn't that too pitiful? And, of course, she is caught up in the web of circumstantial evidence. Rita LeRoy is a two-timing wife, and all the innocent but very suspicious characters are eventually proven okay by Inspector Bellamy after a series of strange characters run up and down stairs and in and out of doors like agitated cuckoo-birds.

Incidentally, there is a thoroughly inane romance between Ralph Bellamy and Shirley Grey, but anything that is said about anything in the picture must be charged to the situations and story which are only childish attempts to baffle a long-suffering public.

Just take it as it comes, Mr. Exhibitor. And don't say "Au Revoir." It might be more appropriate to say, "Good night!"

Para. Foreigners Back

New York.—Two foreign Paramount execs return to town tomorrow on the Olympic, John W. Hicks, vice-president of Paramount International Corporation, and Morris Simpson, special representative of the same corporation.

Mike Simmons East

Mike Simmons, completing his writing trick with Edward Small on "Catalina," boarded a plane for New York to arrange for the production of a play.

Agnes deMille Here

Agnes deMille reached town Saturday night from London. Today she takes a featured spot in "Cleopatra," at Paramount.

Was He Mortified?

Louis B. Mayer received the following wire from Jimmy Durante as the latter left Albuquerque, en route East: "What a time getting away. They tore the clothes off my back. In fact I got on the train in tatters; but finally got away from the Indians without buying a blanket."

Paramount Puts Up Bars Against Visitors

Paramount today installs stringent pass regulations which will eliminate all visitors from the plant and allow admittance only to people doing business with the studio.

The lot has become so crowded recently that pictures have been delayed by visitors on the stages and in the lunch room getting in the way of players. Several extra studio policemen have been hired to enforce the new regulations.

Universal Sets One

"Bread Upon the Waters" will be the next Stanley Bergerman production at Universal on the completion of "Embarrassing Moments," now in work. The Edith Wharton story is being scripted by Gladys Unger. Chester Morris will probably have the lead, with no director set as yet.

'Blue Steel' Finishing

Monogram's western unit, on location in Kernville since last Monday, returned Saturday and will finish "Blue Steel" in the next couple of days. Then R. N. Bradbury, the director, will get "The Man from Utah" into work.

RCA Drops Bombshell

RCA they will be accorded unusual privileges of stretching the initial payments for equipment over a period of time, instead of having to plank down a large first sum on receipt of the equipment.

Secondly, plan involves the inclusion of extra spare parts such as loud speakers as part of the regular standard equipment, and third, an extension of the emergency service for such equipment under certain conditions without extra charge.

An angle of importance in the new deal is the fact that numerous small chains throughout the country may now find it possible to bring sound equipment up to date with latest scientific developments, a move that has been impossible to many of them because of fear of initial costs.

Studios, on the whole, have kept pace with sound developments, while theatres have found the cost problem a stumbling block.

Picture Men Now At Capital Jittery

Washington.—The representatives of the picture industry now here were rather jittery last night over what may happen at the monopoly protest hearings, which start before Clarence Darrow's Small Industry board this morning.

No one knows just what will develop, as the board has kept its list of witnesses secret, but plenty of fireworks are expected. Another cause for worry is that this board reports direct to President Roosevelt personally.

Pinchon Will Write Radio's Murietta Yarn

Edgcumb Pinchon, co-author of "Viva Villa," was signed Saturday by Radio to write an original story based on the career of Joaquin Murietta, early California bandit, who will be portrayed by Francis Lederer. Jane Murfin is supervising this production. The deal was set by Bert Marx of the Phil Berg office.

Ruskin on 'Florette'

Paramount Saturday assigned Harry Ruskin to the script, "Fifty-two Weeks for Florette," the W. C. Fields vehicle which Alfred Werker will direct. Picture is scheduled to follow "Grease Paint," which goes into work next week.

Stoloff-Krasna Trip

Ben Stoloff and Norman Krasna leave today on a week's visit to Catalina Island, where the director and writer will soak in local color for the sake of the Reliance production which will have the resort as the background.

Alexander for 'Hat'

MGM is testing Ross Alexander, newly signed term player, for one of the top spots in the Constance Bennett starrer, "The Green Hat." Company figures the youngster may be another Robert Montgomery.

Estelle Taylor Hits

Miami.—Estelle Taylor, appearing at the Palm Casino here, has been extended another two weeks. Will make a total of four weeks at the one spot.

Warners Change Title

"Personality Kid" is the new label for "One Man Woman," the Gene Towne-Graham Baker story which Alan Crosland directed at Warners some time ago.

Mayer Leaves Para.

Turning in his script on "Here in My Heart," Edwin Justus Mayer checked off the payroll at Paramount Saturday.

Foy Seeks New Title

Bryan Foy Saturday discarded the title, "Life Ends," for his picture and has posted a $25 offer for a new tag.

Ginger Rogers in 'Divorcee' Top Spot

Ginger Rogers rates the top spot alongside Fred Astaire in "Gay Divorcee," as a result of the success of the team in "Flying Down to Rio." Helen Broderick gets a featured spot.

Dorothy Yost got a Radio writing ticket Saturday, checking in at the studio to collaborate with George Marion Jr. on the script.

Preston Foster Set

Fox has set Preston Foster for the next picture teaming Jimmy Dunn and Sally Eilers, "Going Straight." Edward Paramore is writing the script, and Harry Lachman is slated to direct when Miss Eilers returns to active work.

Dave Gould at Radio

Radio has signed Dave Gould to stage the dances and musical numbers for "Down to Their Last Yacht," which Paul Sloane will direct and Lou Brock will produce. Sidney Fox, Mary Boland, Sidney Blackmer and Polly Moran comprise the cast.

Rainger-Robin Set

Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin were assigned to the B. P. Schulberg unit Saturday, where they will write the music numbers for "Kiss and Make Up."

New Stage Production

Olson and Johnson are shaping up plans to produce "Take a Chance" at the Mayan and are dickering with Lilian Miles for one of the leading roles.

Big Pics Jam Broadway

jors worried because they fear delays that will have some of their big bets running into June and July weather about the time they are turned loose to the bulk of the customers. It's a problem.

Here's Broadway's situation: The Astor is tied up on "House of Rothschild" and no prophet in town will attempt to say when that picture will end its run. So that means one show window closed.

The Capitol is tied up on regular MGM releases, which must be played here on date in order to turn them loose for the subsequent revenue, so MGM is in a spot on "Viva Villa," which is roadshow calibre and not to be wasted on a routine Broadway engagement. This forces MGM to make a deal for another company's house, the Criterion, to get a bow on "Villa." It will open there April 6.

And then Paramount. This company has "Scarlet Empress" straining at the leash and with big expectations. With the Criterion sold to MGM, the Rivoli booked heavily on money-making United Artists pictures, starting with "Looking for Trouble," where to put the "Empress"?

The final decision was to use the New York Paramount, ordinarily a one or at best two week steady customer house, and put an extra heavy exploitation campaign behind the picture to give it the rating Paramount officials feel it deserves as a show. The opening date has not been set.

REELING around LONDON

Well, the Joyces were finally returned to you, America; and, save for an occasional broad "a" and some new clothes, they are just the same. . . . The Charlie Laughtons, the Jack Votions, Bill O'Bryan, Bill Linnitt and the Harold Youngs amongst those seeing them off—and quite a mob of people did not show up, all on account of the fact that they had already been to the station three times before on one of those Joyce alarms. . . . Pierre Fresnay, French actor, will take over the Noel Coward part, opposite Yvonne Printemps in "Conversation Piece." . . . Greta Nissen rehearsing for the new Nelson Keys revue and Al Kaufman sending his regards to the latter—in memory of happy early Plaza days. . . . Diana Cotton and Glennis Lordner selling victrola records for the Trade Charity show.

Howard Welch at the Florida early in the morning. . . . Billy Watts, featured player here, is currently filming his sixth consecutive newspaper reporter role—'twould appear Mister Watts must be a pretty good screen scribe. . . Doris Zinkeisen completed the costumes for Anna Neagle's "Nell Gwynne" film, in spite of the fact that she is terribly ill in bed. . . . Harold M. Young threw a spaghetti party the other night for a bunch of Hollywoodians in town. . . . Irving Asher brought along Laura LaPlante. . . . Arthur Hornbeck no sooner got in to town when he was hurried from his train over to another platform to say goodbye to other Hollywood homescrammers. . . . Tim Whelan sending deputies to meet Fred Newmeyer—no, we don't mean the cops—but Tim couldn't get along himself.

Herbert Wilcox took a look-see at "Cat and the Fiddle," and so did Victor "I Was a Spy" Savile. . . . Incidentally Bill Howard did his best to get a spot of movement into Jeanette MacDonald's lift song in this pic—idea being, if you can't move the artiste move the background, huh? . . . Elsa Lanchester says this column should be written in English and not hooey American. . . . Okay, Elsa, why don't you come up and write it for us some time? . . . Val Guest, in an attempt to talk to a girl friend at the Mayfair, was accidentally put through to Mae Murray, and the conversation was vurry, vurry funny. . . . Jimmie Barker's party the other evening got its full quota of Californians, Lloyd Knechtel, Wee Georgie Harriss, Rae Dagette and Bob Wyler all present; not forgetting the Dorchester dames! . . . June has taken over the Lili Damita role in the musical show "Here's How!" . . . Says Leslie (Universal) Williams: "When he's good he's very, very good; when he's bad, he's bader—Dave Bader!!" ouch!!

Marian Marsh (and Momma) have gone to Paris for a short vacation. . . . A bunch of the boys telephoned John Paddy Carstairs at 4 a.m. and put an American girl on the line, who told Paddy it was Joan Marsh—that she'd just arrived, and how was he and when could they get together. Paddy almost fell for it—until he realized that the girl said "Joan" and not "Jo-an"!! . . . Gertie Lawrence and dotter off to Majorca for a holiday, prior to Gertie's going into a legit show with Junior Fairbanks. . . . The Owen Nares boys dancing at the Cafe de la Paix of an evening. . . . Raymond Griffith went to the olden time music hall show here but got a bigger kick out of the street beggars' warblings. . . . Gibson Gowland and his press agent at "outs." . . . Columbia getting behind "It Happened One Night" with a good press splurge.

French Organize Against Foreigners

Paris.—Seven federations comprising all the branches of the French film trade, producers, directors, etc., formed some months ago a national syndicate. The co-operation will now be conducted still more closely since the seven, a few days ago, decided to form a national board in which each federation is represented by two members. President of the executive board is Andre Berthomieu.

It will be one of the objects of the Union to protect the French producers from being outnumbered by foreigners. This, however, does not mean that France is opposed to the co-operation with foreigners, but that she wants to regulate the labor engaged in the French film trade.

LaGuardia May Drop Theatre Bar for Kids

New York.—If motion picture theatre owners will follow the advice of Mayor LaGuardia, there is a chance that the present law, prohibiting children under 16 from attending picture theatres unless accompanied by parents, will be amended.

The Mayor, speaking at a meeting of the ITOA at the Hotel Astor, declared he will sponsor an amendment permitting youngsters to attend theatres alone on afternoons and holidays if the theatres will maintain matrons and only show certain types of pictures.

Society Girl for Pix

London.—Sam Spiegel, of British and Continental Films, has signed Penelope Dudley Ward to play opposite Emil Jannings in a picture to be made at Elstree in April. Story is by the French dramatist, Yves Mirande, with a British script by Guy Bolton. Miss Ward is an 18-year-old society girl.

Double Board Duties

New York.—The Code Authority is now trying to set up a provision whereby all local grievance boards will become compliance boards with power to hear complaints on pictures, vaudeville, burlesque, etc. This would obviate the necessity for maintaining the present State compliance boards.

CAMERAMEN ON THE AIR

West Coast N. B. C. . . . Station K. F. I. . . . (Announcer) . . . "And now the spotlight swings to Johnny Arnold . . ." Why the spotlight in a radio station . . . I don't know. I do know, however, that Johnny Arnold, head of MGM's camera department and President of the American Society of Cinematographers delivered one of the snappiest and most intelligent interviews ever sent over the ether waves . . . and naturally Johnny talked about cameramen . . . their work . . . their problems . . . their ambitions. He painted a vivid word picture of camera achievements . . . a picture drawn for the public who buys tickets at the box office. This is swell stuff . . . not alone helpful to the cameramen but, of greater importance, to the producer who can afford a new public or fan-interest. Building up additional interest in photography won't hurt anyone . . . and it might do a lot of good. These broadcasts will be repeated from time to time and we bow to the good taste and logic of the sponsor (not in the M. P. business) who selected John Arnold for the job.

"Reunion in Hollywood"

Theodor Sparkuhl, Paramount cameraman, who was loaned to Fox for one picture, received as his first assignment "Gypsy Melody," which is also initial job of Eric Charrell, European director imported by the Movietone City bosses. Sparkuhl and Charrell were co-workers and friends in Europe for many years; consequently this reunion is a most happy one. Charrell's directorial effort which is most familiar to American audiences and which brought him recognition here is "Congress Dances." Sparkuhl made overnight reputation for himself on his initial camera work in this country, which he performed for Paramount.

Gertzman Promoted

Maury Gertzman, long-time assistant cameraman to Norbert Brodine, has won his patiently sought promotion, and is now operative cameraman for Charles Stumar. Universal.

"Bondage" Bows Blimp

"Of Human Bondage," RKO production starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis, with Henry Gerrard ("Little Women") at the camera, bows in initial use of the new sound camera blimp developed and perfected by William Eglinton, chief of the Arkayo camera department, Harry Cunningham and their respective associates. Results up to expectations. Looks like a nice achievement—certainly a credit to the entire camera and technical staff at the Radio plant.

Costumers Revived

Nothing to the rumor that costume pictures are dead. Wheeler and Woolsey will prove it when they start production about mid-week on "Cock-Eyed Cavaliers" for Radio. Dave Abel, veteran of the camera, draws the assignment on this one, which leaves Wheeler and Woolsey only one worry—that of getting the laughs.

Haskin Moves Up

When Fred Jackman, chief of Warner Bros. Projection Background, Miniature and Trick Departments, pulled anchor at San Pedro last week for a world cruise with his family, his spot in the Warner-First National plant was filled by Byron Haskin, who has been associated with the photographic department of Warner Bros. for the past ten years. Associate first cameramen continuing in cooperation with "Bun" are Hans Koenekamp, Rex Wimpy and Willard Van Enger. Fred Jackman, Jr., younger member of the Trick and Effects Department staff, went along with the voyagers and will shoot background shots from interesting ports throughout the world.

Mescall With Marin

Johnny Mescall will direct the photography on the Ed Marin Universal production, "The Affairs of A Gentleman."

Six pictures in production here; Jack Stevens busy with another Warren Doane comedy, Gil Warrenton, George Robinson, Norbert Brodine and Charlie Stumar directing photography on the other four.

TRAVEL NOTE

"Treasure Island" in production at MGM being photographed by Ray June. Present plans call for Clyde DeVinna to take over camera work at time entire company goes to Honolulu for exteriors. Dan Clark, sent on last month to start photography of special exterior shots, remains in the Islands to continue at lens with De Vinna.

the BUZZER

(NOTE: Each week, sales and service representatives of J. E. Brulatour, Inc. will ask a number of cameramen the same question. The question will be given and then the answers verbatim.)

QUESTION:

WHEN DO YOU USE FILTERS?

DAVE ABEL (RKO): Only when color correction is necessary. To overcome flatness I prefer to use an aerial filter to increase contrast.

NORBERT BRODINE (Universal): The use of filters is very essential for some things; for instance, by the use of the neutrals and 3N5 and 5N5 it enables me to overcome undesirable contrast, which makes it possible for us to obtain better results.

SOL POLITO (Warner Bros.): To me the use of filters is a very interesting subject. There can be no definite ruling on the specific use of certain filters. On marine scenes I have been most fortunate in obtaining acceptable results with a "G." On foggy mornings to increase the separation between sky and water I used a 23A.

BOB PLANCK (Fox): I find it necessary to use the combination aero and neutral density filters on exteriors when the scene has more than average contrast. Long shorts with back-lit skies sometimes require a so-called heavier filter, such as a G or 23A.

CLYDE DE VINNA (M. G. M.): I make the 3N5 almost as much a part of my camera as the lens when shooting all ordinary exteriors. As all cameramen know, a certain amount of over-correction is very pleasing on certain types of pictorial long shots. Especially those showing heavy banks of clouds and those with very decided objects in the foreground and middle distance. I find that the heavier types of filters are very useful in Southern California because of the prevalence of water haze which generally obscures the horizon. It is imperative that a filter be used when shooting under these conditions, especially so if the haze is back-lighted.

JOE VALENTINE (Fox): On days with good lighting conditions I find that with the present supersensitive films very little added correction is necessary. The 3N5 filter is a great help when the general lighting is too contrasty.

DARROW USES BIG STICK

TRADEVIEWS by ROBERT WELSH

•WE hope the news from Washington concerning Clarence Darrow's big stick massaging of Administrator Sol Rosenblatt will be read by a few local committees that have been entrusted with the operation of the NRA code in picture studios.

We have no quarrel with their decisions, because they haven't made any. We have no quarrel with their activities, because they have not been active. And it is even possible that, when they do get into operation, we would find ourselves in agreement with everything they did.

But in all kindness of heart we think a word of caution is needed for anybody blissfully trying to KID Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The Roosevelt "Big Stick" tradition is apparently an inheritance of the name.

Loaned to Clarence Darrow, no mean citizen himself, it yesterday descended on the cranium of Sol A. Rosenblatt. When the master takes it back to do his own swinging, it may hit heads promiscuously.

And so—this word to the wise.

Except for the Extra Committee, under Mrs. Mabel Kinney, which has at least TRIED to get into action, there hasn't been a darned thing happening in Hollywood in relation to the NRA and the motion picture industry since the beneficent visit of the infallible Rosenblatt in our midst.

Mr. Creel, Mr. Casey and Mr. Rosenblatt exchange politely vague telegrams every few days, issue them to the press, and give another ticket on the merry-go-round to one Franklin D. Roosevelt.

With present indications being that a perpetual motion gadget has been hitched up to the merry-go-round.

For our part, when we start giving merry-go-round rides away, we'll avoid fellows whose very names are synonymous with the phrase, "The Big Stick."

Robinson's 'Mystery Man' Is Eddie Himself

The much publicized "mystery man" who has been engaged by Warners to play one of the important roles in the Edward G. Robinson picture, "Dark Tower," is none other than Edward G. Robinson, who has a dual role. We're letting you in on this just to be a bunch of old meanies.

Para. Attorneys File To Shake Fetters

New York.—Attorneys for Paramount have filed a petition in Federal courts here asking that the company be discharged from bankruptcy.

While it is the belief here that it will not be long before a reorganization plan is set up that will lift Paramount bankruptcy, the legal move behind yesterday's plea is the fact that a corporation has to file such an application within a year from the date of bankruptcy to assure retaining its corporate name for the future.

Miriam Hopkins To Be 'Delilah' in Para. Film

Cecil B. DeMille will make "Samson and Delilah" as his next picture for Paramount, following "Cleopatra," with Miriam Hopkins and Henry Wilcoxon sharing the top honors.

The story is now being written by Jeanie MacPherson.

Dove of Peace Lights

Warners and George Brent have settled their difficulties with the player back in the good graces of the studio once more and waiting for an assignment. Brent refused to do the role offered him in "Mandalay" five months ago and started suit to recover salary due on his contract.

Sets Rosenblatt Down Hard And Will Call Code Authority Members And Sales Heads

Washington.—The National Recovery Review Board, headed by Clarence Darrow, and operating independently under direct appointment from President Roosevelt, yesterday took Sol Rosenblatt, heretofore czar of picture code conditions, for a long, hard ride over very hot coals. And after Rosenblatt squirmed, dodged and twisted on a very hard witness chair, the meeting terminated with the announcement from Darrow that every member of the film industry's Code Authority would be subpoenaed before the board for hearings starting Thurs-

George Raft's Wife Sues For Divorce

New York.—Mrs. Grace Mulrooney Raft, wife of George Raft, Paramount star, has filed suit for divorce through her attorneys, Mackey, Herrlich and Breen. The papers were served yesterday.

Mrs. Raft asserts that her husband has been earning at the rate of $300,000 a year and that, when they separated in 1932, George agreed to give her 10 per cent of his earnings. She alleges further that he will get $150,000 for his next three pictures, and she asks $1200 a week alimony.

The reports of Raft's association with Virginia Peine Lehmann, she says, have caused her great humiliation.

MGM-Bickford Dicker

MGM is negotiating with Charles Bickford on a term deal. If the deal is concluded, player will probably get the top spot in "Soviet."

Set Deal for Wurtzel To Do Big Pictures

New York.—Hollywood reports that Sol Wurtzel would be rewarded with greater production opportunities have been confirmed in New York. As a result of conferences with Sidney Kent the official okay has been given to include a number of more expensive pictures in the Western Avenue output, with stars, directors, etc., on a par with the output from the Sheehan fortress at Westwood Hills.

Zeppo Marx Buys Into Bren-Orsatti Agency

Zeppo Marx became an artists' manager yesterday at a cost of $75,000 to himself, paying that sum for a third interest in the Bren-Orsatti firm. The office has 77 clients.

'Cath' Still London Best

London.—Three pictures were held over here this week. They are Paramount's "Bolero"; the British film, "Catherine the Great," which runs on and on, and "Emperor Jones."

"The Cat and the Fiddle" went into the Empire. "Blood Money" opened at the New Gallery, and "Advice to the Lovelorn" at the Tivoli.

Coward to Produce

New York.—Noel Coward is seen behind the formation of a new stage producing company by John C. Wilson, Coward's manager, to produce in New York and London. The firm has acquired Keith Winter's play, "The Ringmaster."

Trem Carr Goes East

Trem Carr leaves by train today for Atlantic City and the Monogram convention, which will be held there April 4 to 7. Floyd St. John, San Francisco franchise owner, and J. T. Sheffield, of Seattle, will join him in Salt Lake City

'ROTHSCHILD' BRINGS DAYS OF '29 BACK TO BROADWAY

New York.—United Artists yesterday exercised its option on the Astor Theatre until August 1, with the betting still on Broadway that this is only the first half of a run of "House of Rothschild" that will extend around to the next Christmas holidays.

The Zanuck picture did a sell-out over the week-end, with the prospects

New York.—Crosby Gaige, in conjunction with A. G. Montague and Harry Levey, plans to turn vacant legit houses in New York into places where programs of amateur radio talent will be offered to the public at small admissions. If a bank okays the deal the Selwyn Theatre will be the first used.

DARROW USES BIG STICK ON DEPUTY ROSENBLATT

day morning. In addition to the Code Authority members, the sales manager of every national distributor will be handed a piece of paper requiring his presence to answer searching questions.

It all happened this way: The Darrow committee is named for the specific purpose of hearing the kicks of small business men in every line who assert that various codes are monopolistic in tendency.

The Allied exhibitor group, and a number of independent theatre men who haven't been able to get to first base with Johnson, Rosenblatt or the Code Authority set-up in the picture business, bided their time. And yesterday they walked in, flanked by an important investigator for the Department of Justice, with their guns loaded for bear.

The hearings opened with Rosenblatt the first asked to testify. And it was immediately evident that Rosy was in for a grilling. After complaining that the board had not consulted him or his files, he asked permission to make a short preliminary address, which was met with the statement that no speeches were desired.

Rosy countered this with the statement that he had never been given notice of the meetings. To which Darrow snapped: "Why did you come at all, if you were not invited?"

That settled skirmish Number 1. Rosenblatt then asked to be excused until he could consult with General Johnson. This was granted, but the hearings ended last night with Rosenblatt still declaring he was unable to find Johnson, who was resting after his arduous labors with the auto makers.

Russell Hardy, who has been with the Department of Justice since 1914 and who has supervised all investigations of the industry made since that time, was the next witness. He stated that the Department had received more restraint of trade complaints from the picture industry than from any other in the country—even before the NRA was thought of.

Further questioning of Hardy brought out the general nature of the complaints: Inability of exhibitors to buy product they desired; excessive protection periods to favored first runs; insistence on block booking, and cornering of the available supply in competitive situations by the major circuits.

The boycott provision in the picture code by which distributors would refuse to sell theatres that did not live up to Grievance Board decisions was also strenuously objected to by the Department of Justice representative. Further testimony brought out the fact that the Government has brought suits against the picture industry three times, won two, and has a third pending. "If it were not for the NRA," Hardy said, "conditions as now set up by the Code Authority would again be cause for Government anti-trust action."

Abram Myers, counsel for Allied, was the next witness, his testimony aiming to show that independents had been given no voice in the formation of the code, and to question the appointments of R. H. Cochrane and Ed Kuykendall as "unaffiliated," as well as that of Charles O'Reilly, who sells candy slot machines to major circuits. He ridiculed the present cancellation provisions of the code

Thornton Kelly, of the Grant Lee Theatre, Palisades, New Jersey, and William Biggio, of the Grand Theatre, Steubenville, Ohio, testified as to the independent exhibitors' problems in competition with Fox, Warner and Paramount circuits.

The Code Authority has an official meeting scheduled for Thursday. If the members and the sales managers don't show up in response to Darrow's summons, he announces that "he doesn't care," but will with pleasure send the absentees' names on to President Roosevelt. If they do show up—they are in for fireworks, if the humiliating reception given Rosenblatt yesterday is any guide.

'FINISHING SCHOOL' JUST FAIR; 'TELL THE WORLD' ALL TRACY

Weak Story Hurts Otherwise Good Pic

"FINISHING SCHOOL"
(RKO-Radio)

Direction .....Wanda Tuchock and George Nicholls, Jr.
Original .....David Hempstead
Screen Play.....Wanda Tuchock and Laird Doyle
Photography.....J. Roy Hunt
Cast: Frances Dee, Billie Burke, Ginger Rogers, Bruce Cabot, John Halliday, Beulah Bondi, Sara Haden, Marjory Lytell, Adalyn Doyle, Dawn O'Day.

Nice large "A's" can be given the complete cast, the directors, the dialogue writers and the photographer of "Finishing School." But the story rates nothing more than a D minus.

Smart production in every department only makes more apparent the shortcomings of the plot. A lot of talent has been literally thrown away in attempting to breathe new life into a threadworn theme. Better far to have thrown the story away in the first place.

The situation is this: A young girl is brought by her mother to an ultra-ultra finishing school. The girl takes the rules of the institution seriously until she learns appearances, not essentials, are all that count. A hospital interne working as a waiter in a cheap hotel rescues her from the unwelcome attentions of a Yale halfback.

Up until this point, "Finishing School" is dandy entertainment. Not every picture establishes its premise and sets the scene as interestingly. Then comes the Christmas vacation and the girl's parents have other engagements, so she must spend the holidays at the school. The boy hears of her abandonment and calls to see her. At midnight, they meet in the boathouse—and the snow has covered their footsteps by dawn. And he a doctor, too.

Nor is the balance of the yarn any more original. It is all there, the same old familiar routine, even to the lad's timely arrival just as the girl is about to commit suicide. Had "Finishing School" preceded instead of followed "Eight Girls in a Boat" and all the others, it might have had a chance. As it is, there can't be much hope.

Frances Dee does a beautifully sincere job as the girl. Bruce Cabot is acceptable as the boy. Unfortunately his playing does not make you lose sight of the fact that it would have been a pretty poor school that would not have attempted to keep the lovers apart.

That Ginger Rogers gal takes another large slice of a picture for herself. It's getting to be a habit. Billie Burke is utterly delightful in one of her characterizations of a brittle, flighty social nitwit. John Halliday, in for only two brief scenes, makes both count.

Beulah Bondi scores as the head of the school, Sara Haden does well by an instructress, and the three school kids are neatly played by Marjory Lytell, Adalyn Doyle and Dawn O'Day.

Direction is frequently brilliant, as are moments in the dialogue. Photography maintains a high standard.

You will have no trouble selling "Finishing School" to the public. But maybe it won't like being sold if you claim the picture is more than a program attraction. It should have been better than that.

Cocktails Offered For Baby Star Votes

The Wampas Baby Star campaigns this year set a new record. Every Wampas member has been deluged with letters, phone calls and wires, asking his vote, and yesterday a cocktail party was thrown for one of the candidates. Another example of women in politics.

Hays Meeting Just The Usual Routine

New York—The Hays meeting yesterday was just as routine as a Hays meeting could be expected to be, from the hackneyed familiarity of the annual report down to the election of officers.

Will Hays was reelected president, with Carl Milliken, secretary, and Fred L. Herron, treasurer. Directors ae M. H. Aylesworth, R. H. Cochrane, Jack Cohn, Cecil DeMille, Earl Hammons, Fred Herron, Nicholas Schenck, Adolph Zukor and H. M. and J. L. Warner.

The report was the usual stuff about the great job the movies had done to take the people's minds off the depression, the great number of films endorsed by educators as fit for children, and how there was no excuse for vulgar pictures.

Rosenblatt Wires Mrs. Kinney Authority

Sol A. Rosenblatt yesterday wired Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Code Committee for Extras, that her committee is officially to handle the code complaints of the extra players as per instructions of the code.

This wire was in reply to one sent by Mrs. Kinney, asking him to clear the tangle brought about by the visit of George Creel, who heard complaints against the extras committee and then ordered Judge Lindsey to hear the ones that have already been filed by extras.

Radio Signs Clive and Makes Bid for Wynyard

Radio yesterday signed Colin Clive for a leading role in "Sour Grapes," at the same time placing a bid with MGM for the loan of Diana Wynyard for a starring role in the production. Myles Connolly is supervising the picture.

'U' Picture Fast And Full of Comedy

"I'LL TELL THE WORLD"
(Universal)

Direction .....Edward Sedgwick
Story .....Lincoln Quarberg
Adaptation.....Dale Van Every and Frank Wead
Photography .....Jerome Ash
Cast: Lee Tracy, Gloria Stuart, Roger Pryor, Onslow Stevens, Alec B. Francis, Lawrence Grant.

There will be enough excitement attending the first Lee Tracy picture to be released in a long time to carry over Universal's "I'll Tell the World."

In addition to the natural interest, exhibitors can bank on plenty of comedy, splendid direction and a story that holds interest. The faults of the film are entirely in the construction. It starts with a bang, sags in the middle and ends with a bang. The world news reporting angle is handled with fascinating speed, but what the reporter has to report—mythical kingdom, attempted assassinations of the Archduke, and a Brooklyn girl turning out to be the Queen—might be better told and presented.

Tracy is the star reporter of United Press and he is sent to Europe to find out why so many attempts have been made on the life of Archduke Ferdinand. He becomes enamored of an American girl, Gloria Stuart, and trails her around, never dreaming that he is in love with the solution of the whole royal mystery. How he finally learns of her identity, persuades her to go back to her country and be a good queen, discovers a sinister plot to murder her, rescues her, etc., etc., is the story. Tracy, as usual, works at top speed, turning in a corking good performance.

Roger Pryor, as his rival reporter, is a swell comedy mate, ringing true in all scenes. Gloria Stuart is charming as the poor little queen; Onslow Stevens is well cast as the prince, and Alec B. Francis and Lawrence Grant have smaller roles.

Edward Sedgwick brought a grand tempo to his direction, which runs briskly and effectively along. Lincoln Quarberg let his imagination run riot on the story, and the actual United Press angle is good stuff. Jerome Ash photographed it exceptionally well.

The picture will undoubtedly be cut and compressed in the middle and when it is it will be a pretty safe bet, what with Tracy and the comedy.

Moss Hart Goes East

Moss Hart, who has been in Palm Springs ever since he arrived on the West Coast, has turned down picture offers in order to return to New York to write a play for Max Gordon, with whom he already had made a verbal agreement.

Grainger on Way Here

New York.—James R. Grainger left here by train yesterday, headed for production conferences on the Coast. He arrives there Saturday after stopping off at Chicago and Kansas City Grainger stays at the studio for about three weeks.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

New York is really an exciting place for tourists these days, as returning Hollywoodites will undoubtedly tell you. There are more strikes going on than you can wave a banner at, and the taxi drivers break out in a rash all over the city at once, which kind of keeps the police wagon in a dither over whether it should patrol Forty-Second Street, Thirty-Fourth or the Waldorf-Astoria. Gregory LaCava had a cab pulled right out from under him the other evening when striking drivers pulled the doors off the taxi, pulled the driver out of his seat and beat him up pretty. Nat Goldstone and his bride had to get out and walk on the very good advice of a coupla fellers who had just decided that New York was no place for working taxis. Nat and Bernie took in the Empire State building while they were here and Nat gave Bernie something to remember New York by—a brand new mink coat.

Also, an old, old custom is about to vanish from New York. Mayor LaGuardia has decided he doesn't like the musicians on ferry boats, (as if anyone ever did), and it looks as though they'll be abolished or they'll give the job to Symphony orchestras. But no Symphony will ever collect as much for playing as old-timers did to make them stop . . . And Jimmy Durante now finds he has been spouting poetry all these years, what with Alfred Kreybourg suing him for plagiarism or may be it's alienation of the public's affections.

Remember Nicholas Soussanin, that grand actor of whom Lubitsch made such good use? Well, he's a producer and director now, and his play, "The House of Remsen" is scheduled to open sometime during Easter week. James Kirkwood and Francesca Bruning have the leads . . . Mary and Mel Baker gave a cocktail party to introduce Jayne Shattuck to Kirkland's fine friends in New York and the gal stood the test right well. Leland Hayward, Ruth Weston, Margaret and Bernie Fineman, Humphrey Bogart, John Byram, Gil Gabriel, Aline Bernstein, Ben Wasson, Paul Gangelin, Arthur Kober among the greeters.

After all that fine talk about not letting their stars go on the air, MGM is about to take advantage of their advertising value and allow them to do it. Clark Gable will be the first, just for an evening. Radio agents burn every time a star goes on the air to be interviewed by a colyumnists . . . free of charge . . . Note to Carl Laemmle, Jr. What ever became of that grand story, "One Glamorous Night"? . . . Greenwich Village is booming again ever since the Left Bank hadda move back to the U. S. on account of the dollar . . . There is more in back of "New Faces" than meets the eye and it's the nicest gesture of the year . . . Marquee sign: "Easy to Love" "All of Me."

JOKE ON ANTI-HURD MEN IN CAMERA UNION FIGHT

A lot of Hollywood cameramen were laughing yesterday, and many more were figuratively tearing their hair, when it became known that a considerable number of union members who voted at Sunday night's meeting to retain Business Representative Howard Hurd really didn't mean to do so.

From the sidewalk conferences, which were both plenty and hot yesterday, leaked the information that many members didn't even realize what they had done until they read the papers yesterday morning. And then the squawks started. But it was too late.

It seems that the wording of the motion that was meant to oust Hurd from his IATSE job is what confused a lot of the cameramen. The motion was to "vacate the office of business representative." A number of the boys figured that this would create a situation whereby the union would have no head. So they voted against it. When the ballots were counted there were 100 against vacating the office and 74 for vacating it. And Hurd was thus retained in office.

Yesterday there was more argument and more bitterness expressed around the union than in many months. Many members who had fought to oust Hurd were declaring they will not rest until there is another meeting at which a clear motion will be voted upon. The anti-Hurd group is riled for fair and gives indications of starting a rebellion that bodes ill for someone.

Wampas Will Pick Baby Stars Tonight

From a field of 38 candidates, the Wampas will elect its 13 Baby Stars for 1934 tonight at a special meeting at the Writers' Club.

This year's election has attracted more than usual interest because of the unprecedented competition, in number and qualifications of the nominees. Prior to the balloting, the aspiring young actresses will be introduced to the Wampas members in a stage presentation to be conducted by George Landy, president. Each of the 38 candidates will take a bow and make a personal bid for votes.

This will be the eleventh crop of Baby Stars which the Wampas has launched to potential film fame since the custom was inaugurated in 1922. Only free-lance actresses are eligible for baby stardom this year.

Ambitious plans are already under way for the public presentation of the 13 Baby Stars. A number of projects are being considered, including a nationwide radio broadcast, and a Frolic and Ball, which may be staged in the East this year after a transcontinental junket for the Baby Stars on a special train.

The Baby Star candidates come from 18 different states, from Canada, and from England. They range in age from 16 to 25, with an average age of 19. They include blondes, brunettes, and red-heads, with blondes predominating. All have had some experience before the cameras, and a number of them have had outstanding success on the stage.

Besides choosing the Baby Stars, the Wampas will elect a new president tonight, settling a tie vote between Sam W. B. Cohn and Phil Gersdorf.

New Sound Group Must Go Into Union

The new Society of Sound Engineers, a group of sound men recently formed with the expressed purpose of having no affiliation with any labor union, now finds itself in a spot where the leaders and members are wondering just where their trail leads.

Due to the agreement between the major studios and the IBEW, the latter organization has jurisdiction for the next two years. The sound engineers have been dickering with Local 40, IBEW, for some time to see what can be done. The latest, it is reported, was the ultimatum that the new organization will have to affiliate with the local, and that perhaps later it may be able to get a separate IBEW charter.

Five Added to Cast As 'Cat's Paw' Resumes

Harold Lloyd put "The Cat's Paw" back into work Sunday, a day prior to the scheduled start, and signed Noel Madison, Fuzzy Knight, Herman Bing, Michael Visaroff and Richard Cramer for featured spots.

Jewell-MGM Split

Sam Wood Starting

Sam Wood starts work today at MGM on the filming of "One Hundred Per Cent Pure."

Tough Luck for Margie

Margie White gets the lead opposite the three Healy stooges in their first Columbia short, which Archie Gottler is writing under Zion Myers' supervision.

MGM Unties Knot On 'Men in White'

New York.—MGM has begun to work its way out of the jam over having a completed picture which it is unable to release. Because of a deal that "Men in White" could not be exhibited until the closing of the show in New York the picture has been gathering dust on the shelves. Yesterday a deal was closed to release the picture out of town on April 1, and in New York June 1.

Erwin Set for Lead In 'No More Ladies'

Stuart Erwin has been set for the lead in the film version of the Broadway play, "No More Ladies," which MGM recently acquired.

Lucille Watson, who was signed by MGM to a term contract and is now playing the lead in the stage play, will have the same role on the screen.

Sheldon Takes 'R.U.R.'

E. Lloyd Sheldon has been assigned as associate producer on "R.U.R.," the Capek robot play of which Waldemar Young is writing the screen play. Mitchell Leisen is up for the directorial spot.

Producers Deny Lindsey Authority

The major picture producing companies of Hollywood yesterday told Judge Ben Lindsey, special NRA Labor Compliance Officer, that they will not go before him for hearings on the more than 100 complaints of alleged violations of the film code.

Furthermore, through their spokesman, Pat Casey, they put it up to the Judge to make the next move, telling him that he has no jurisdiction in the matter; that the Studio Labor Committee and the Code Committee for Extras were appointed by Sol Rosenblatt to handle these problems. Casey told the Judge that if he wants to go further in the matter he must get in touch with Rosenblatt and ask him for a ruling as to who has jurisdiction.

"Now I want a showdown," said Judge Lindsey last night. "I have sent word to George Creel, who appointed me, and have asked him to get in touch with Rosenblatt at once and get a final decision. I have tried to be patient. I worked out a simple system to settle the troubles around the table. I can go no further in the picture code and shall wait to hear from Rosenblatt."

One for Weingarten

Larry Weingarten has taken over the supervisory reins on "California," which will serve as a co-starring vehicle for Wallace Beery and Clark Gable. Ray Doyle wrote the screen play.

'Wonder Bar's' Record Gives It Another Week

Because it smashed house records at the Warner Downtown with a take of $20,500, Warners will hold "Wonder Bar" at both its local theatres for a third week.

Business at the Hollywood house has been good, but has not broken records. The ticket sales at the downtown were $1,500 over the record set by "Forty-second Street."

for the second week about $21,600, in a house where $19,000 is real capacity. The figure will also be about $1500 over the first week. All this in the face of taxi strikes, riots, and such aids to Broadway business.

Indications are the initial exploitation campaign and other expense will all be back in about four weeks, after which weeks of only $14,000 would show a clear $10,000 a week profit to the producers. Ten weeks, $100,000—out of ONE engagement on the picture.

HOW IT WORKS

1. An Annuity is a "life income," for one or more persons, written and guaranteed by an "old line" Life Insurance Company.
2. Next month you can receive your first life income check, by investing a sum of money now.
3. You can buy an Annuity by saving any convenient amount of money each month. Then select the future date, or age, at wihch your monthly income checks are to begin.
4. All the payments can be made in advance by one or several checks.
5. Annuities have a large "cash" or "loan" value during the savings period, thereby furnishing a splendid "emergency fund."
6. Your family is protected, should you die, either by the return of the savings, plus dividends, or by the continuance of the annuity checks to your wife.
7. Annuities guarantee that you will never be "broke." Is this important?

Rating: UNUSUAL

Dexterously employing European angles which give to his first American-made production a continental flavor of light fantasy and pathetic reality, Dr. Eugene Frenke has given a worthwhile account of himself in "The Girl in the Case." . . . Particularly is the opening of the picture fascinating. . . . The net result is a picture that should, because of its many humorous situations, excellent photography and artistic compositions, give a good accounting for itself before the great king, the box-office. . . A new technique that makes his handful of characters blend into the scenery and causes his exceptional musical score to become a vital part of the passing show. . . . A picture that warrants consideration.

It has a curious European flavor, despite the fact that it was made in Hollywood. Its humor and technique are novel, aimed at chuckles rather than guffaws, and it gathers a fair amount of laughs. Savo's comedy is artful and different from anything currently on the American screen. In spots it will be relished for its practiced pantomime. Photography is good and in some spots exceptional. Freshness and unique quality. . . .

"GIRL IN THE CASE" MAKES SAVO CHAPLIN HEIR

I don't know just when Broadway will be privileged to see "The Girl in the Case"—but my tip to you is to wait for it. It saw it at a preview the other evening and it is, by all odds, a motion picture designed to stir the utmost enthusiasm. . . . If ever there is a successor to Chaplin, if the great Charlot decides to call it quits, you'll find him in Savo. That's a bold statement—but wait until you see "The Girl in the Case" and then judge for yourself. I'm certain you'll agree with me. . . . This Dr. Eugene Frenke, who directed, has a flare for the camera and an appreciation of cinematic methods and technique. . . . It is an artistic production—and I don't want to damn the picture by such praise. For a typical East Side audience saw the film and went into howls of laughter at each comedy moment and into enthusiastic applause when it ended.

Here is about the most unique bit of film entertainment that has yet been turned out. . . Savo's different type of comedy will prove amusing.

—THE BILLBOARD, New York.

A bold departure from the cut-and-dried Hollywood technique, this six-reel comedy brings new and welcome note to the screen. It also serves to introduce that premier buffoon, Jimmy Savo, the nearest thing to Chaplin this reviewer has ever seen. He has the same combination of pathos and unconscious comedy that has always proven a popular combination in those rare instances when it was found. Photography has imagination and the whole treatment is one which patrons will find refreshingly different. Directed by Dr. Eugene Frenke.

—BOX OFFICE, New York.

If laughter and applause may be accepted as a criterion the preview audience thoroughly enjoyed "The Girl in the Case," a motion picture venture conducted entirely by Dr. Eugene Frenke. . . . In itself it is pleasant enough entertainment to satisfy any audience. It presents a newcomer to the screen, Jimmy Savo, whose pantomime is delicious. In him Frenke has discovered someone who should become a great screen favorite. Photography is excellent, particularly in the opening sequence in which there is superb composition. . . It is a novel offering, one that indicates that Frenke has a great deal to contribute to the screen.

EXECS MAY DEFY DARROW

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•IN our jaunt to and from New York last week we were confronted with some of the most astonishing reporting on pictures that we have ever seen in this business. We saw eighteen different newspaper reviews on "It Happened One Night" in states and cities ranging from New York to Denver and in NOT ONE of those reviews was the name of Frank Capra or Bob Riskin mentioned. There was not a single reviewer who found the story of sufficient interest to comment on its adaptor or originator, and neither did any reviewer make any mention of the direction, good, bad or indifferent.

Maybe we asked too much in expecting comment on the efforts of the writer and director; maybe that's of too little interest to newspaper readers; maybe the reviewers are up against the proposition of not knowing where good writing begins or ends in a picture and where the work of the director starts or finishes and, for this reason, skip comment on both.

And, too, the reviewer on the newspaper, no doubt, feels it his sole duty to report whether the picture is good or bad and who's in it to catch the fancy of the fans. The author or director holds little interest for him or the men and women who read his report. If that is the situation, it's a pretty tough one for the creators of motion pictures, resulting not so much from the lack of critical opinion on the part of the reviewer, but from the stupidity of the creators themselves that permits such reporting.

What's to be done about it? How are the creators to get around such reporting? How can it be corrected and should it be corrected?

Answering the last question first we would say that it should be corrected. Writers and directors account for 75 per cent of the production of any picture and their work is of that much importance. For that reason the public should be acquainted with their activities, should be more contented to buy a picture written by a certain writer or directed by a certain director than is the case now with all interest in the star. A good writer or a good director should be a more certain tipoff to the qualities of the

THE LOW DOWN

One of the town's better-known medicos had his slumbers disturbed around 4 o'clock the other morning, we hear—but that's not all. The call was from the home of a certain actor who had been staging "the battle of the century" with his frau. There had been quite a shooting match, too. When the doctor arrived, the walls of the living-room were nicely decorated with bullet holes. The husband had been shot in the arm. The wife said the wound was self-inflicted. The husband said the wife shot him. Such a loving couple. The wife, whether she did any shooting or not, had been beaten quite thoroughly but, of course, only had two black eyes because "that's all there is—there isn't any more!"

With Tullio Carminati back in town, we are reminded of an incident which befell him a couple of years ago when Tullio, appearing on the stage in New York, was approached to take a part in a show which Al Jolson was doing at the time. Carminati didn't like the part and said so.

"But," said the manager of the Jolson company, "don't you realize what it means to play with Jolson?—Why, in this country he's a tremendous star. It's like playing with Duse. Do you realize what it means to play with Duse?"

"Yes," answered Tullio, "I played with Duse for three years!"

Sandra Shaw Cooper was interviewing cooks the other day on account of she needed a new one. Finally she reached one applicant who had very fine references and asked her why she had left her last job. The cook explained that there had been three other servants at the home where she'd been working and almost floored Mrs. Cooper when she added, "They had me fired, M'am, because I don't play cards and I couldn't make a fourth at bridge."

New York REVIEWS

"GOOD DAME"

Paramount prod.; director, Marion Gering; writers, William Lipman, Vincent Lawrence, Frank Partos, Sam Hellman.

Paramount Theatre

World-Telegram: When you go to see it, forget that it required four adaptors to whip it into shape for the screen and go only on the understanding that you'll be seeing a couple of good actors wasting their talents in a desperate effort to sustain a story that is only half-way worthy of them. Miss Sidney and Mr. March do what they can to make their roles seem less trite than they are, but they are so handicapped by poorly written and characterized parts that their efforts are of no avail.

Journal: "Good Dame" is whimsical banter tossed back and forth between Sylvia Sidney and Fredric March, who do the tossing expertly enough even if the material assigned to them is mildly diverting.

American: This film belongs in the "Bad Girl" category and, while story and dialogue are pretty uninspired, snappy direction and excellent characterizations by Miss Sidney and Mr. March elevate the offering to a level wlel calculated to score with the great movie-going public.

News: March's interpretation is technically all right, but the brilliance which usually emanates from a March characterization is missing. Miss Sidney adds another one of her miserably put upon heroines to her collection. She, too, is all right in her performance, but the story is lacking in variety.

Sun: "Good Dame" has a plot too involved in its action to be a highly effective film. In spite of some entertaining moments, it is not one of March's better pictures.

Mirror: Both March and Miss Sidney are attractive personalities and skilled performers. They make the watching less tedious. Supported by an interesting company, given sprightly dialogue, directed with imagination, these two stars contrive to make their conventional story material mildly entertaining. Sylvia is especially fine, radiantly pretty and entirely sincere.

Times: Sylvia Sidney creates a warm, sympathetic character as the girl. Fredric March is so far beneath his usual standard that his performance must be attributed to the part he is forced to play.

Post: Except when they are saddled with an embarrassingly implausible finale, both Miss Sidney and Mr. March manage to do a good job with their material. The story is deadly in its obvious pattern, but it is equipped with racy dialogue and it is saved from complete banality by the liveliness of the acting.

Herald-Tribune: Among all the dullness and feebleness of the story, the two stars fight their way along nobly, managing to keep afloat surprisingly well. It wouldn't have been a bad idea, though, if they had a story to work in.

Del Ruth Wanted For 'Gay Divorcee'

Radio is dickering for Roy Del Ruth to direct "Gay Divorcee," the Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers picture, which Pandro Berman is supervising.

The only thing holding up the deal is the amount asked by the director, which is $40,000, but the deal is expected to be closed any day now. Del Ruth is under contract to Twentieth Century, but will make this picture during the shutdown period.

entertainment than any cast name. Stars are made through the publicity given to their efforts; writers and directors mean nothing to the public because of the lack of that publicity.

We would suggest to writers, members of the Writers' Guild, that in that organization there should be some way to build up newspaper interest in writers. As for the directors, the situation is not so easy because there is no such organization of directors. If we were a good director, we would certainly have an intelligent publicist acquainting newspapers with our activities in the hope of winning some of the publicity that means more than any of them think.

The undersigned, when in Washington, was given a letter by Rosenblatt stating that the final draft of the Code would provide for limitation of hours for cameramen. "Rosenblatt stated the International presidents prevailed upon him to withdraw it. Our International President emphatically denies having consented or being notified of this omission. Rosenblatt while here set up a Code Labor Committee to investigate studio conditions. Committee, except Richard L'Estrange, refuses to function, claiming appointment not official. Judge Ben Lindsey, NRA compliance director for Code, has been refused recognition by employers' representative. Code absolutely no benefit to us because of non-cooperation by Administration agents in Washington.

Cast: George Raft, Adolphe Menjou, Frances Drake, Sidney Toler, Edward Ellis, Nydia Westman, Douglas Wood, Lillian Elliott, Katherine De Mille, Frances McDonald.

Paramount had all the material in the world to work with to make "The Trumpet Blows" an outstanding picture. But, unfortunately, the film is a swell example of how bad dialogue and weak direction can muff any set-up.

The basic plot, although there is too much of it, is good, workable, dramatic stuff. The Mexican setting is colorful. The bull fights are gorgeous to watch and are very cleverly handled to retain all possible thrills for the audience and yet not to offend the more humanely inclined.

BUT—interpreting the story and wandering around among the beautiful patios and haciendas are characters who attain nothing but hazy outlines all the way through and speak in utterly unnatural, trite, clipped, awkward, undistinguished and miserably meaningless lines. Once in a while, a flowery speech is slipped in to accent the Mexican setting.

Two or three rivulets of plot divide the interest. The strongest is the love of Adolphe Menjou, a famous bandit, for his Americanized brother, George Raft. The next is Raft's love for the girl his brother loves, Frances Drake, and the other is how Raft overcomes his fear of the bulls.

The ending is just an old Spanish custom. The two men go home with their forgiving and brotherly arms around each other, taking the girl with them, presumably to divide up.

Raft, although his cape work in the bull ring is graceful, is miscast. However, he is hampered by some of the toughest lines an actor ever had to speak. Menjou is more at home in his part, and Frances Drake's dancing is a lot more acceptable than her acting. Sidney Toler's comedy is forced. Katherine DeMille is beautifully outstanding and clever in a small role.

Stephen Roberts directed; Porter Emerson Browne and J. Parker Read Jr. wrote the story; Wallace Smith is responsible for the adaptation, and Bartlett Cormack did the screen play. The art direction, by Hans Dreier and W. B. Ihnen, is about the best feature of the film, although Harry Fischbeck's photography is stunning.

You'll get the Raft fans, but your audiences will probably be as apathetic as the one that watched the preview showing in a dead, dull silence.

Gillmore Remains Equity President

New York.—Frank Gillmore yesterday was re-elected president of Equity. The vice-presidents are Osgood Perkins, Florence Reed, Arthur Byron and Peggy Wood. Paul Dullzell is treasurer, and Louise Curley, secretary.

New Pictures on B'way This Week

New York.—Local picture houses are expecting big grosses the coming week, with good pictures and added attractions in most of the houses. "Wild Cargo" opens tomorrow at the Music Hall, with Frank Buck making a personal appearance, plus a special Easter show and Disney's "Funny Little Bunnies."

"Rip Tide" goes into the Capitol Friday, with Paul Whiteman, the Biltmore orchestra and a collection of radio stars. "Melody in Spring" opens at the Paramount Friday, with George Raft on the stage. The Roxy will have "The Countess of Monte Cristo" Friday, and "The Lost Patrol" goes to the Rialto the same day. "Ever Since Eve" opened Monday night at the Mayfair.

Phil Gersdorf New Wampas President

Phil Gersdorf, publicity man for Samuel Goldwyn, was elected presidet of the Wampas last night, at the meeting, primarily called to elect the Wampas Baby Stars, but which served also as the opportunity to settle the tie vote between Gersdorf and Sam W. B. Cohn, which was the result of the first voting.

The results of the election of the thirteen Baby Stars from among 38 candidates will not be made known until tonight. This year's Baby Star election was by far the most exciting the Wampas ever has held, and Earl Carroll, who was a guest of the organization, complimented it on the beauty of the candidates.

'McFadden' Deal Closed

New York.—The deal was officially closed yesterday with Gus Hill by which Charles Rogers can make "McFadden's Flats" in talkies. The subject has been on the producer's tentative schedule for some time without the details being ironed out.

Al Hall Sick, But Sticks

Second laryngitis victim in the "Halfway Decent" company at Paramount is the picture's director, Al Hall, who is continuing his work in spite of it. Dorothy Dell was the first victim.

Marshall Set for 'Hat'

Herbert Marshall was definitely set yesterday by MGM for the leading spot opposite Constance Bennett in "The Green Hat," which Irving Thalberg produces.

Acad. Chiefs Swing Into Action Again

The producers put their full strength behind the revival of the Academy last night when the Executive Committee of the Producers' Branch of that organization met with the Executive Committees of the Actors and Technicians branches and the Assistant Directors Section to lay plans for resumption of negotiations between producers and these branches which were interrupted by film code negotiations.

Committees were appointed to begin discussions on relations between assistant directors and producers, and to discuss the practical operation of the Actor-Producer Basic Agreement of 1930. They will meet next week. L. B. Mayer was named chairman of the producers' committee to meet with the assistant directors. Scott Beal was named for the assistant directors. Henry Herzbrun heads the producers group and Lionel Atwill the actors in meetings of those two groups.

Members of Executive Committee of the Producers Branch who attended last night's meeting were: B. B. Kahane, chairman; Samuel Briskin, Henry Herzbrun, William Koenig, Jesse Lasky and Louis B. Mayer.

Pommer Coming to Fox Plant in April

New York.—Erich Pommer, in charge of Fox production in Europe, which is at present at pretty much of a standstill, will come to Hollywood for the making of two pictures.

The former Ufa head sails from Europe April 4.

Ethel Merman Signed For Cantor Picture

Samuel Goldwyn yesterday signed Ethel Merman for one of the leads in the next Eddie Cantor picture, which is being written by Arthur Sheekman and Nat Perrin.

Miss Merman has just finished a featured role in the Bing Crosby picture, "We're Not Dressing," at Paramount, and leaves for New York next week to return in about a month.

Ceballos with Para.

Larry Ceballos was assigned by Paramount yesterday to finish the dance numbers in "Murder at the Vanities," taking over Leroy Prinz's task, owing to the moving of the latter to the DeMille picture, "Cleopatra."

Kaufman-Kraft East

H. S. Kraft and George S. Kaufman leave tonight by train for New York. They will write the finishing touches on their play, which will be produced on Broadway early next Fall.

Lillian Moore Signed

Paramount yesterday signed Lillian Moore to a long term contract. She was formerly at Roach. Deal was negotiated by the Frances Bailie office.

Yesterday in New York with HELEN GWYNNE

They gave Rabbi Stephen S. Wise a huge testimonial dinner here in New York on the occasion of his sixtieth birthday. The money that was collected will be donated by Rabbi Wise to the anti-Nazi cause in America. But the object of mentioning the thing at all is to get in the fact that practically anyone of any importance to the stage, screen, business or religion was present, including Eddie Cantor, in connection with whom is a funny story. Wise wired to Cantor while he was in Florida asking him to act as master of ceremonies at this dinner that was to be given for Wise. Eddie, in a whirl in Florida, forgot all about answering the request, and about a week later got another wire from Wise which read: "When a Rabbi calls a Cantor should answer."

Hal Horne, out of the goodness of his heart, had a fast one pulled on him the other day. Hal is in Miami at present, recuperating from a tough siege of illness and trying his best to be a man of leisure. Soooo U. A. decided to give "The House of Rothschild" the big opening down in Miami and Horne made a terrific discovery about it that he thought warranted a long distance call. And he called up Al Lichtman very excitedly all the way from Miami and said: "I've just found out that the tickets for the opening of 'The House of Rothschild' haven't been marked. What shall I do?" And Lichtman casually replied, "Mark them." And promptly hung up.

They almost tagged Gregory LaCava for a spy or something while he was in Chicago on his way here. It seems that LaCava once studied painting in that fair city and in the Chicago Institute hangs a Whistler that was always his favorite, and so LaCava has never failed to make a pilgrimage every time he's in Chicago to see it. This time, he didn't know whether he could make it or not, but after twelve silver fizzes, he not only decided to go, but to take a still-camera along with him to photograph the picture. And the guard in the institute must have thought Gregory was the Black Hand or something because he almost had him arrested.

MGM has finally made arrangements to release "Men in White" OUTSIDE of New York with N. Y. waiting for the play to close, but the cast has just taken cuts for the summer. . . . And speaking of cuts, Frank Joyce on his way to consult with specialists about whether he should have an operation was advised by Dora not to be led into accepting any "cuts." . . . Our favorite name of the season, Katherine Pift-Jones, or as Winchell would put it, Phfft-Jones. . . . You should see the new stream-line trolleys on Lexington avenue. . . . Harry Rosenthal celebrates his son's birthday every month with a cocktail party. There have been four of them so far.

"NUMBERS ARE ALL SMASH CALIBRE. Sylvia Froos clicks in 'Broadway's Gone Hill Billy.' Aunt Jemima does the opening number, 'I'm Laughin',' that is a socko and it gets the film off to a fast pace. Nick Foran does 'Laughin' and 'Out of the Red,' the latter a George M. Cohan type of show closer. John Boles does a sweet tune, "Our Last Night Together,' which looks like a real song hit."
—VARIETY, March 19, 1934.

"THE MUSIC IS FULLY UP TO HIGH STANDARD OF THE REST OF THE PICTURE. Among the songs that, judging by their reception, must be labeled as hits, are 'Our Last Night Together,' featuring John Boles, the Dunn-Temple number, 'Baby Take a Bow,' 'I'm Laughin',' 'Broadway's Gone Hill Billy,' and the finale 'Out of the Red.'
"The title does not do justice to the picture. It should have been called 'Out of the Red.' The climaxing song, featuring the grand finale of men and women of all occupations in a triumphant march back to prosperity hits an extremely popular note and should be one of the smashing successes of the year.
"No especial credit can be given any one person. It must be shared by Winfield Sheehan, the producer; the director, Hamilton MacFadden, Lew Brown and Jay Gorney who did the music, Will Rogers and Philip Klein, who suggested the original idea, and in fact, every one who had anything to do with the success it is destined to be."

Lewis, of Talisman, East For Monogram Meeting

Harold Lewis, of Talisman Studios, is a member of the Monogram party, including Lou Ostrow and Howard Stubbins, which leaves Los Angeles today for the Atlantic City convention of the organization.

The Lewis jaunt is interesting in view of the fact that it was he who brought the Monogram business to the Metropolitan, now General Service, lot. There have been rumors that Monogram would shift bases on completion of this year's program.

Mary the Rhino For Personals in East

MGM gave Mary, the Rhino, a big send-off yesterday, including a brass band and other trimmings. Mary goes East for personal appearances ic onjunction with "Tarzan and His Mate."

Indies to Discuss Writer Proposals

Unofficial negotiations between the free lance writers of the Screen Writers Guild and the Independent producers have been launched, the writers submitting their version of a standard basic contract.

Belief of the indies yesterday was that the contract would have to be revised before they will talk turkey. A special meeting of the IMPPA will be called within the next few days to discuss it. Pact's objectionable features, according to one producer, are a provision giving the writer the rights to his work after five years with the exception of picture rights, and the privilege of deciding how his credits shall read. The contract provides a week-to-week basis.

Execs May Defy Darrow

the Darrow edict. They base their attitude on these claims: The picture industry has set up its code machinery in faithful adherence to the rules laid down by the NRA; the real purpose of the NRA is to allow industrial self-government; and, lastly, the code machinery has had no chance to function so that criticism of it is begging the question.

Cooler heads are afraid of the headlines and the biting tongue of Clarence Darrow if they fail to show up for the Thursday hearing. They point out that Darrow is very close to President Roosevelt, and that there is more than a gesture in his statement that he "does not care whether they come or not, he will just pass on the names of the absentees to the President." That would make headline material which the execs do not relish, despite the type of legal advice that is saying, "they can't put you in jail," to the prisoner already behind the bars.

The session ended with nothing decided, except that the execs would meet again today to spend a few hours trying to reach a united attitude in the event that they do respond to the Darrow summons.

It is important to note that the Darrow committee, while holding its appointment direct from the President, has no actual power of subpoena. You can respond or not, and just take your chance on the publicity accruing from your absence.

Radio Will Have Five In Work Next Week

Coming out of a lull with the start of "Cockeyed Cavaliers" tomorrow, the Radio lot will have all available space in use by the middle of next week, with overflow production being taken care of on the ranch and the Pathe lot. By next Wednesday the studio will have five pictures in work and will be preparing sets for at least one more.

"Virgie Winters," with Al Santell directing, "Sour Grapes," Worthington Miner and George Nicholls Jr. megging, and "Murder on the Blackboard," which George Archainbaud handles, get under way Monday. "Virgie Winters" will work at the Radio ranch, with the other two subjects shooting on the Radio lot.

John Robertson handles "Family Man," which goes before the cameras a week from today, being followed a week later by "Down To Their Last Yacht," which Paul Sloane handles. Latter picture will be shoved over to the Pathe lot.

'Rip Tide' Getting Heavy Break Over Air

MGM is getting in a heavy radio plug on "Rip Tide." Norma Shearer will be interviewed by Kenneth Niles from KHJ tonight, with Herbert Marshall, Adrian, Arthur Jarrett and Shirley Ross on the same program.

From New York tomorrow night, Robert Montgomery will broadcast, KFI getting it locally. On another program, the same night, a "Rip Tide" air-trailer will be broadcast.

Roach Comedy Starts

With Oscar Apfel, May Wallace and Marian Byron signed for the cast, Hal Roach put "It Happened One Day," a Charley Chase comedy, into work yesterday with Charles Parrott directing. The Byron deal was negotiated by the Bernard, Mieklejohn and McCall agency.

'Little Danny' Back

Daniel Paul, known to the industry as "Little Danny," has returned to Hollywood after an absence of two years. He is free-lancing. He made a name for himself among the extras when he appeared at the film code hearing in Washington and pleaded in behalf of the extra players.

Noah Beery to Radio

Radio yesterday ticketed Noah Beery for a role in "Cockeyed Cavaliers," the Wheeler and Woolsey vehicle which goes into work tomorrow with Mark Sandrich directing. Thelma Todd and Dorothy Lee have leads in the Lou Brock production.

Unger Name Omitted

An error in the listing of credits on Universal's picture, "Glamour," omitted the name of Gladys Unger, who should have been credited with continuity and dialogue on the B. F. Zeidman production.

Commandini to Majors

MGM yesterday signed Adele Commandini to script an untitled story which Larry Weingarten will produce. Deal was set by Fritz Tidden, of the Hoffman-Schlager agency.

Paramount Sets Five For 'College Rhythm'

Changing "Here's Your Quarterback" to "College Rhythm," Paramount yesterday placed Lanny Ross, Jack Oakie, Richard Arlen, Lyda Roberta and Paul Jerritz in the top spots.

Walter de Leon and John McDermott have been assigned to write the screen play of the George Marion Jr. yarn.

Barney McGill Abroad To Film 'Sons o' Guns'

Barney McGill, Twentieth Century cameraman, has been signed by British and Dominions Productions to go to London on a one-picture deal.

The picture he will photograph will likely be "Sons o' Guns," which will be directed by Sidney Lanfield.

Howard Greens East

Set for another writing assignment with Paramount, Howard J. Green bids the studio good-bye for a six-week hop to New York today. His wife accompanies him, both returning May 6.

PLAYWRIGHT LAWSON HAS TWO FAILURES IN ONE WEEK

'Gentlewoman' Is Confusing Drama

The Group Theatre, in association with D. A. Doran, presents "Gentlewoman," by John Howard Lawson; directed by Lee Strasberg; settings by Mordecai Gorelik. Cast: Claudia Morgan, Lewis Leverett, Russell Collins, Morris Carnovsky, Samah Cunningham, Stella Adler, Roman Bohnen, Lloyd Nolan, Neill O'Malley, Frances Williams.

New York.—John Howard Lawson has become a very confused and confusing playwright. Evidently, Mr. Lawson has been giving a great deal of thought recently to the world we live in and the problems it presents to individual members of a decadent society. And evidently, he is still thinking about it, mostly out loud on a stage without much clarification of that same thought, without much direction and lacking any conclusion.

Perhaps if Mr. Lawson had confined himself to the story of the impoverished Lady, the rough, red genius and the genteel "pushover" who was just beginning to realize she wasn't having much fun; or if he had discarded his evident fear of having his play labelled "propaganda" and stuck to the social problems of today and tomorrow, he might have written a good play. As it is, love and sex and politics are pretty badly mixed up in a lot of fine talk and nothing happens that matters.

Stella Adler (pretty much under the influence of the idea that she has inherited the cloak of Sarah Bernhardt) is the Society Girl who, after her husband kills himself and leaves her penniless, decides to try love in an attic with a very attractive radical. It doesn't work out, however, when they finally admit that he is West and she is Westhampton, and never the twain shall meet. So, in spite of the fact that she is going to have a baby, she sends him off to Iowa to help the farmers and decides to have the child in order to give her life some purpose and to help along the revolution.

That sounds fairly vague and involved, but so does the play. Wandering in and out is the social flapper, 1934 version, who is jealous of the fact that the Lady can be so thrilled by an affaire. And there's a psychoanalyst and a wealthy aunt of Victorian vintage but with an alert mind conditioned by Freud.

The play could easily be reduced to a fairly convincing tear-jerker for pictures of the type that Helen Hayes and Irene Dunne have stalked the screen in, or to make it look sophisticated, Ann Harding or Norma Shearer. But when you've admitted that about the play, you've acknowledged the fact that as a play it fails in its purpose.

Two Shorts for Austin

Hal Austin is en route to location in Arizona, where he will make two short subjects with Lew Seiler's backing. Same combination produced "Eat 'Em Alive."

Summing It Up

David Lewis passes it on—but the story is that someone asked Mrs. Pat Campbell how she liked her experiences in the movies and she replied: "My dear, all the movies mean to me is Cash and Climate."

'Etienne' Revived As 'Another Love'

Milton Stiefel and Frank Lewis present "Another Love," by Jacques Deval; translated and adapted from the French by George Oppenheimer. Cast: Iris Whitney, Raymond Walburn, Mary Servoss, Romaine Callender, Suzanne Caubaye, France Bendsten, Ethel Strickland and Alfred Corn. At the Vanderbilt.

New York—Formerly titled 'Etienne" and under that name now in its fourth revival in Paris,this play has been kicked around theatrical offices here and on the road, on and off, for a couple of seasons. It is still being kicked around on the New York stage as this is written, with the chances good for its being stopped before this is printed.

Mr. Deval gives us the French idea of "Seventeen," which is that of a young boy who loves his mother and hates his father because dear papa causes dear mamma much pain with his chicken chasing. The son of the house takes it upon his sensitive self to cure his father of his night wanderings and, in the process, appropriates for himself what was potentially a mistress for papa and emerges from the encounter a Man. The idea is that the ending is a happy one.

The idea used in the play has always been a good one and, in the French, it is probably still good, but the translation given it is so literal that all the joints creak and the whole production is a weak attempt by Americans to play French bourgeois—strictly in the manner of Sinclair Lewis. The hardest working member of the company was the prompter.

Doris Anderson in Job To Buy the Baby's Shoes

Completely recovered from the effects of becoming a mother recently, Doris Anderson was handed a new writing ticket for the B. F. Zeidman unit at Universal yesterday, the Selznick-Joyce office setting it.

Writer will handle the screen play for the Vicki Baum story, "I Give My Love," which will have Wynne Gibson in a top spot.

Leslie Howard to Lose Troublesome Tonsils

Leslie Howard will head straight for the hospital to have his tonsils removed on completion of his picture, "Of Human Bondage," which he is now making for Radio.

The operation will set back the starting date of his first Warner picture, "British Agent," which is scheduled to get under way in about ten days.

'Pure in Heart' Sad And Sophomoric

Richard Aldrich and Alfred DeLiagre, Jr., present "The Pure in Heart," by John Howard Lawson; music by Richard Myers; staged by Edward Massey; settings by Jo Mielziner. Cast: Dorothy Hall, James Bell, Tom Powers, Joseph Allenton, Owen Martin, Ara Gerald, Peter Donald, Jr., Janet Young, Harold Vermilyea, Charles C. Leatherbee and Albertina Rasch dancers. At the Longacre Theatre.

New York.—Tripe. Made worse by the fact that Mr. Lawson saw fit to inject an apologetic note in the program the last lines of which read: "This is not the poetry of blank verse and measured sentences. It is the poetry of the New York streets, the turbulent crude rhythm of the world in which we live." And when it is thought necessary thus to confuse the issue before a line is spoken, you're in for a pretty tough struggle with the drayma.

Briefly, it is the story of a stage-struck small town gal in the big city, willing to "pay and pay, and pay" in order to be a star. Before she can give her all to every member of the company, however, she crosses the leading lady of the show by giving too much to that lady's boy friend. And the leading lady has her fired. So the stage-struck one falls in love with an ex-convict and murderer (who also has a heart of gold beneath it all), and the two of them are killed as "the show goes on!"

The play is full of sophomoric mouthings about "Life" and "What are we all here for?" and very deliberate epigrams about Love and Death. There is also a torch song injected into the piece, the sources of which could have been a whole lot better, but whose English is pure, being the first torch song that ever said, "WHOM shall I go to?" James Bell and Ara Gerald are still good actors and prove it by overcoming a terrific amount of banal lines.

The movies for the past three years have been giving this theme, the "poetry of the New York streets, the turbulent crude rhythm of the world in which we live," a whole lot better in a series of backstage musicals.

Two for Gregory Gaye

Universal and Fox each signed Gregory Gaye yesterday for individual assignments on Beyer-MacArthur office tickets, former getting him for "Affairs of a Gentleman," latter for "Merry Andrew."

Mrs. Brooke Under Knife

Mrs. Tyler Brooke underwent an appendectomy yesterday at the Hollywood Hospital and her condition is reported fine. Dr. Franklyn Thorpe performed the operation.

Wallace Ford in Person

Wallace Ford leaves in two weeks for a six weeks' personal appearance tour in the East. He has three weeks booked for New York and three more in other Eastern cities.

Junior Writers Get New Trial at MGM

The junior writers group idea has been given a temporary lease on life at MGM. Maurice Revnes has taken on the added duties of supervising the work of the prospective contract men imported from colleges and other sources of supply.

Revnes is understood to have been given the power to boil the group down to only those showing positive proof of ability, studio deciding that the experiment should not continue for more than another six months. Group has been in existence for more than a year.

List includes Robert Pirosh, George Seaton, Arthur Bloch, Jesse Burns, Roger Porter and Lewis Waller. Of this number, Seaton and Bloch recently sold the original story,"Student Tour," which Jimmy Durante and Charles Butterworth will do under Monta Bell.

Hub Robinson Quits Warner Theatre Group

Vacating the post of publicity and advertising director for Warner theatres after holding it for more than six years, Hubbard G. Robinson takes the work that went with the job along with him to his own art-work company, the Mercury Advertising Agency.

Warners made the arrangement with him in accepting his resignation. Tommy MacLeod will handle special publicity for the theatre group.

Guests for Warners

With Dolores Del Rio as hostess and William Koenig and Manuel Reachi as hosts, Warners entertained Abelardo Racus, his wife and Senora Lopez Figueroa at a dinner last night and showed them the Spanish talker, "The Fortune Teller." Racus is Brazilian ambassador to Mexico and Senora Figueroa is a social leader in Mexico City.

Seek Lead for Howard

Warners are looking for a feminine lead to play opposite Leslie Howard in "British Agent," which is scheduled to get under way as soon as Howard finishes "Of Human Bondage" at Radio. Michael Curtiz will direct the picturization of the H. Bruce Lockhart novel.

New Role for Sidney

B. P. Schulberg yesterday scheduled Sylvia Sidney to star in a picture for Paramount, tentatively titled "The Notorious Miss X." William R. Lipman and Gladys Lehman are teaming on the story.

Hanemann on Old Job

H. W. Hanemann has again been assigned to the screen play of "Hide in the Dark" at Radio, going back to work on a script that he had been working on previously. David Lewis is supervising the production.

Wood in Crosby Pic

Douglas Wood has been assigned for a role in the Bing Crosby picture, "She Loves Me Not," which gets under way tomorrow with Miriam Hopkins in the feminine lead and Elliott Nugent directing.

TRUCE IN DARROW WAR

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•AFTER we saw the Twentieth Century production of "Rothschild" we rushed to the phone to tell Darryl Zanuck, "The picture will do a bigger gross in Greater New York than is being done throughout all of America by 85 per cent of today's pictures." Zanuck laughed; would have liked to believe it, but didn't.

Forgetting that we authored the original thought, the Century production head rushed at us yesterday with: "Do you know that 'Rothschild' will do more business in New York than 50 per cent of our product has done in its entire American gross this year?" And when we replied—Yes!—he did not know what to make of it.

And if you don't believe it, add these figures.

The picture, in its second week at the Astor Theatre in New York, played to over $1,600 more than it did the opening week. That in itself is some kind of a new record for present-day business. To do that business it had to gross $22,340 for the seven days. In doing that it had to play to full capacity for two shows a day, four on Saturday and three on Sunday and THEN stand up over $4,000 worth of customers for the shows.

The picture is set for a long run at the Astor. It will go better than six months, and at even a third less business each week will do around $400,000 at the B.O. for that run (paying U.A. around $200,000 plus all its exploitation expense), and after that run it is safe to estimate that the picture will gather another $400,000 (at least) from the circuits and neighborhood runs in the big city. And how many pictures are grossing $800,000 in America today?

All of which proves—"Give the public what it wants, etc., etc.," and you have a great business. "Rothschild" was no accident; it was well conceived and planned to do just what it is doing. A showman picked the yarn, believing that it had all the elements of a winner, and the finished product turned out to be a swell show.

But how little showmanship there is in this picture business!

Music Hall Aches

New York.—Local report has it there are considerable headaches among the Radio-RKO higher-ups over what has happened to the Music Hall since the departure of Rothafel. Too many $65,000 weeks in a house that needs close to $100,000 to meet the nut.

Majors Start Day At Odds With Review Board But End By Getting Hearing Delayed

New York.—The Code Authority offices buzzed, the legal departments fumed, and the long distance wires to Washington hummed yesterday. The day started with some members of the Authority ready to defy Clarence Darrow's summons and go through with their scheduled meeting for Thursday, regardless of the fact that this date conflicted with the Darrow ukase. Then a wiser head suggested: "Suppose we tell Darrow we must hold this meeting and ask for a postponement of the session. Maybe he will grant it." And, lo and behold, Darrow did grant an indefnite postponement.

LOOSE TALK MAY KILL CAMERAMEN'S MERGER

Plans of a conservative group of cameramen, members of both the ASC and the IATSE, for a movement that would bring about an amicable merging of the groups have been knocked into a cocked hat because someone talked too soon.

New York REVIEWS

"THE SHOW-OFF"

MGM prod.; director, Charles F. Reisner; writers, George Kelly and Herman J. Mankiewicz.

Capitol Theatre

Post: In spite of its treatment, the story manages to hold together, and the blundering buffooneries of Aubrey Piper lend a touch which verges on a mild and harmless kind of farce. The performances of the cast are better than the material which has been fashioned for them.

Times: Although the film undoubtedly lacks the nimble wit and subtle shadings of the original, it still possesses a generous fund of laughable incidents. Mr. Tracy gives a capital performance and, if the picture does not come up to expectations, it is not his fault, for it would be difficult to select another play who could do as well by the part.

News: Moves with speed and dispatch through several chapters in the life of a glib, garrulous railroad office clerk. Madge Evans is seen at her loveliest in this film, her performance being a capable complement to Tracy's way of handling himself.

American: It is, perhaps, a trifle dated, and, as in most photographed stage plays, the story is carried more in the dialogue than by action sequences which are the life of motion pictures. But a fine cast and the humor native to the piece make it come through as good program entertainment. Mr. Reisner has done will with the direction.

Journal: The dialogue is bright and Tracy's supporting cast is capable. Miss Evans is charming.

World-Telegram: A nicely played, amusingly spoken talking picture, it may be seen for the week at the Capitol, where it provides sufficiently light and agreeable screen entertainment. Satisfactory program entertainment, thanks to Spencer Tracy, is the verdict on "The Show-Off."

Sun: The dialogue is crisp and penetrating, the surrounding cast quietly effective. It may not be quite George Kelly's "The Show-Off," but it's a good picture.

Herald-Tribune: The picture is almost entirely a monologue for Mr. Tracy, so that the other characters are of slight importance. It is at present just a pleasant little minor comedy, rather than a distinguished piece of American observation.

New York.—Out of town openings in Cleveland and Boston have been set for "The House of Rothschild," Harry Buckley leaving New York today for the Ohio spot, and Monroe Greenthal for the Hub, where the picture opens Saturday.

LAUREL AND HARDY STEAL MGM'S 'HOLLYWOOD PARTY'

Comics Highlight Dull Musical Pic

"HOLLYWOOD PARTY"
(MGM)

Direction .....Alan Dwan et al
Written by.....Howard Dietz and Arthur Kober
Music and Lyrics by: Rodgers and Hart, Brown and Freed, Donaldson and Kahn.
Photographed by....James Wong Howe
Cast: Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Laurel and Hardy, Polly Moran, Charles Butterworth, Jack Pearl, Richard Carle, June Clyde, Eddie Quillan, George Givit and Mickey Mouse.

One of the funniest sequences seen in pictures in many a day is to be found in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Hollywood Party," with Oliver Hardy, Stan Laurel and Lupe Velez furnishing the laughs. It had last night's preview audience rolling in the aisles and actually sobbing with laughter.

That sequence is worth the price of admission and is the highlight in an otherwise dull musical, that occasionally sticks its head above water with a chuckle or two or an exceedingly bright conception of screen entertainment. But patched end to end, and it is pretty much of a patchwork, the picture hardly rates the time and money that MGM has expended. It will do on the average program, but will not stand up under any other recommendation than "Laurel and Hardy have a gag in —— etc., etc., etc."

The Mickey Mouse number that expands into the "Red Hot Chocolate Soldier" number, written by Brown and Freed, was another stand-out sequence. It is done entirely in the three-color Technicolor process and will cause comment.

Of the other bits, the song number sung by June Clyde and Eddie Quillan, "My One Big Moment," and the Jimmy Durante number, "Reincarnation," were the best.

There are plenty of names to play with and a promise of one of the greatest and longest belly laughs seen for a long time, but our suggestion is to treat the whole thing lightly.

Screen Actors' Guild Takes Up Extras' Case

The Screen Actors' Guild last night wired President Eddie Cantor a request that he reach Sol Rosenblatt at once in behalf of the extras, for the operation of whose code no machinery is yet able to function.

The Guild wants all complaints acted upon at once and asks that Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Extras Committee, be empowered to function and also to appoint Judge Lindsey to hear and dispose of all complaints.

Bing-Carole on Air

Bing Crosby and Carole Lombard will give scenes and songs from their latest Paramount picture, "We're Not Dressing," on Crosby's radio program next Monday night. Program goes over the entire CBS and is released locally by KHJ.

Gene Raymond Sings

The "Sadie McKee" unit at MGM is broadcasting the news that the picture will uncover a new and brilliant crooner in the person of Gene Raymond.

Studio made tests of hundreds of crooners to sing the two Brown and Freed numbers in the yarn, none of whom met the requirements. Larry Weingarten asked Raymond if he could sing and the player replied "I'll try." And he did.

Rogers Sets Robinson

Charles R. Rogers at Paramount has assigned Casey Robinson to script "The Woman God Forgot," which was formerly titled "Lizzie Skerrit." No director has been set as yet, though it is possible Robinson may get the assignment.

Chandler Sprague has been signed by Paramount on a one-picture deal to write the screen play of a story which is being supervised by Bayard Veiller.

Wampas Announces Baby Star Winners

Following the most spirited election in the history of the organization, the Wampas last night announced the following girls as those chosen to be this year's "Baby Stars":

Judith Arlen, Betty Bryson, Jean Carmen, Helene Cohan, Dorothy Drake, Jean Gale, Hazel Hayes, Ann Hovey, Lucille Lund, Lu Ann Meredith, Gi Gi Parrish, Jacqueline Wells and Katherine Williams.

The following six were chosen as alternates: Jean Chatburn, Dorothy Granger, Neoma Judge, Leonore Keefe, Mary Kornman and Irene Ware. This is the first time more than two alternates have been chosen, and was due to the fact that the six girls tied for the two places.

It was announced the Wampas is considering a possible national radio broadcast, a cross-country cruise with personal appearances, and other ideas for presenting the girls to the public.

Vidor Starts First As Indie Monday

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

There's one thing about Cecil De Mille, even his own publicity department has fun with him in the stories they send out. A few weeks ago they handed around the old story about St. Peter worrying about God because God thought he was Cecil DeMille, and just the other day they sent out a note, headed "Believe it or not," which read: "A full day's work under Cecil B. DeMille's direction, and Claudette Colbert found three gray hairs in the long auburn wig she wears in 'Cleopatra.' " . . . . And we think it's fun that Paramount thinks C. B. is fun. But they haven't given out yet with one of the best stories which concerns Vincent Lawrence and a story conference with C. B. Lawrence was called in to lighten the script and C. B. decided to give him a general idea of what he thought Mark Antony should be. So, while Lawrence sat in the office with his feet comfortably propped up on the desk, DeMille described Mark Antony as a big muscle man, six foot two in height, hairy-chested, a devil with the women, a great hero in battle, a marvelous athlete, a remarkable lover, etc., etc., and at the end of TWO hours he stopped and said to Lawrence: "Well, what do you think of Antony?" And Lawrence, after a moment of thought, looked up and said: "I think he's a sissy!"

There's a portrait painter in town who has been pestering the life out of Al Jolson and the reason for it is H. M. Warner. Just before Harry Warner sailed, Jolson went in to see him and found Warner very busy posing for his portrait. Warner, in the course of conversation, remarked that everyone seemed to think that he and Al weren't on very good speaking terms and, in order to prove that wasn't so and to also prove Warner's affection for Jolson, he wanted Jolson to have his portrait painted at Warner's expense. But Jolson won't do it—says they'll have to pay him for posing, he doesn't like portraits.

Jayne Shadduck and Jack Kirkland sneaked off to New Jersey to be quietly married and were only followed by two photographers — the rest caught up with them at Tony's later. . . . Jayne, incidentally, was asked by a colyumist out in Hollywood (who could have it arranged) whether she wouldn't like to be the first to have her wedding broadcast in a church that has recently gone to a lot of trouble to have itself wired for sound for just such occasions as marriages. . . . New York is a whole lot quieter since Louis Bromfield sailed for Europe. . . . Elsa Maxwell seems to be the smart thing to say in plays about the elite these days; she's in all of them. Elsa is about to do a series of Satiddy night entertainments for the Casino. . . . Buddy DeSylva planning to write a new show, but NOT with Peter Arno. . . . Corey Ford is planning a three months trip to Alaska this summer; says he wants to see if they have any good Barrymore pelts and may write a book exposing the place called "There's No Place Like Nome."

Truce on Darrow War

So there is a temporary truce. Just when the session before Darrow will take place is still something of a question. Aside from the desire to hold its regular meeting voiced by the Code Authority, the most pressing reason for the postponement was the fact that many members, and the sales managers subpoenaed, are out of town. But no major would admit last night that he has summoned his sales manager back from the road to stand by for Darrow's inquisition.

Washington.—All the lobbyists and friends the picture business ever had are being rallied to the cause here and wires being pulled without number to try to heal the breach between the constituted picture industry code machinery and the free-lance Review Board, headed by Clarence Darrow.

Sol Rosenblatt departed for New York to attend the Code Authority meeting, refusing to make any statement, and apparently at that time not knowing definitely whether the picture body had secured a postponement from Darrow or was going to defy him by ignoring his summons.

Darrow is being flooded with additional complaints regarding the code machinery, especially from New York. These are believed to be from the New York indie group headed by Harry Brandt, which has so far refused to assent to the code.

Brent Entertains Press; Says 'Uncle'

George Brent said "Uncle" at the behest of the Warner Brothers yesterday, and gave a party for a couple of score press representatives so that they could hear him say it. His formal statement, following his row with the company, was:

"I am happy to be back again with Warners and am grateful to them for giving me this opportunity to continue my screen career."

At the same time he issued this statement relative to his separation from Ruth Chatterton: "I have learned my lesson and that is that two people engaged in the same line of endeavor and both intent upon carving careers should never be married to each other."

Talk May Kill Merger

spired twist to the report which had it that "the ASC is taking over the union and paying its debts, with the approval of President Elliott."

"In the first place," these members declared, "Ellitt's approval or disapproval doesn't mean a darn thing, because the American Federation of Labor rules make a two-thirds vote of the local's membership the deciding faction in any question. In the second place, we don't need anyone to pay our debts, because we haven't any, and still have a healthy treasury. In the third place, the ASC needs us almost as much as we need them, because, while they have the backing of the producers and a working agreement, as long as they have no union charter they must continue to alibi to their bosses when location trips come up."

The reaction from many of the ASC was almost an echo, "We don't need the union." In addition, the ASC found itself on the spot with some of the producers who sponsored the recent agreement and do not now relish the idea that, after being tied to numerous contracts with strike-breaking cameramen and to a blanket agreement with the ASC, they might suddenly find themselves once more at the mercy of an IATSE local."

So, all in all, somebody is due to be a goat for having talked as fact something that was largely a hope.

40 MILLION PEOPLE visited the Public Libraries last year. How many of them were actors in the comedy, the tragedy, the melodrama that seethes in the vortex of that great melting pot?

Ask the little librarian in my story—THE PUBLIC LIBRARY—she knows—only too well.

LINDSEY CRACKS WHIP

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE motion picture industry is still staggering around, punch drunk, from the effects of double features. That one great evil is sending more people away from the box office and keeping them at home, than all other lesser evils of our trade. But nothing is done about it, the ruinous practice continues, with the major circuits, the big chains, the theatres owned by the producers and distributors, the chief offenders.

All the combined production genius of this business can not turn out one good picture a week. People pay to see good pictures, are attracted to the theatre with the hope of being entertained. If they are not, it's tough to attract them to spend again for some time, resulting in bad business.

In suggesting that this business can not make one good picture a week, we are a bit optimistic and would be more to the point in saying that it can not turn out one good picture a MONTH. However, be that as it may, why must the theatres drive away paying customers by giving them not one bad picture on a program, BUT TWO BAD PICTURES and a few shorts and newsreels thrown in to exhaust them?

Occasionally when a really good picture is made, the double feature houses (and there are thousands of them) sandwich it in with a bad picture, those shorts and newsreels, with the result that the patron is too tired, too annoyed, to enjoy the picture he paid his money to see.

The double feature idea was originated in the brain of a man who never made a quarter in this business and is not in the business now. He conceived that form of program as a fighting gesture against his opposition, which immediately followed the idea to get even with the originator—and other theatres came into line. None of them has ever made a dime with the policy, but one won't stop because of the fear that the opposition might continue it.

Two features on the same program show up the production weakness of this business more than would the principle of giving the patrons a single picture with a newsreel and maybe a carefully selected short. And the business can't afford to be shown

DuPonts Close In?

Information received by the Hollywood Reporter from New York last night stated that a deal was consummated there yesterday by which the DuPont interests took over Columbia Pictures. No verification of the story could be had last night. Harry Cohn, president of Columbia, denied it. The story also stated that the DuPonts had purchased 3,000 feet of property on Cole avenue and planned to build a laboratory to compete with Consolidated. The property was said to have been bought from MGM.

'Nate' Mentioned In New Para. Deal

New York.—The name of N. L. Nathanson is being heard around Paramount corridors again. Some of the insiders are of the opinion that "Nate" will have a big berth in the reorganization, with Adolph Zukor's position strengthened as a result of that acquisition.

It is known that Kuhn-Loeb is particularly anxious to have Nathanson in a strong executive capacity at Paramount.

Para. Quits French Pics

Paris—Latest understanding here is that Paramount does not plan to resume its own production at the Joinville plant, but will place the facilities at the disposal of independent producers.

Jack Alicoate Here

Jack Alicoate, publisher of the Film Daily, is in town on his annual visit to look over production conditions. He will probably remain over for the MPTOA convention.

Following Darrow Lead Judge Issues Demand On All Studios To Answer Labor Kicks Monday

Following the receipt of orders from George Creel, State NRA Administrator, to go ahead and hear all complaints charging film code violations that have been filed with the Studio Labor Committee and which have not been acted upon, Judge Ben B. Lindsey yesterday mailed notices to ten major studios and two independents ordering them to have representatives appear for the first of the hearings next Tuesday morning.

While Judge Lindsey would make no announcement, it was authoritatively learned that the notices were sent to Fox, Warner-First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Radio, Para-

Otto Kahn's Death Shocks Industry

New York.—The death of Otto Kahn here yesterday was a great shock to the motion picture industry, particularly to the Paramount organization, with which he has been closely affiliated for many years.

Kahn and Adolph Zukor formed the closest association between a motion picture company and the banking element that has ever existed in this business.

J. E. Otterson Here

J. E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, is here for a short stay contacting studio heads.

Harry Cohn Leaving

Harry Cohn, of Columbia, is scheduled to trek eastward late next week on one of his periodic hops.

Dual Features May Boost Major Lists

New York.—With Loew's circuit turning over six important houses to double features this week, it looks as though the majors, to keep the indies from getting all the extra dates created by duals, may have to step up their product lists next year.

Aside from Loew's, double features are gaining in popularity throughout the East, despite the declarations at the start of the season by the major sales managers that they would kill off the evil.

'U' Borrows May Robson On One-Picture Deal

Universal yesterday put through a deal with MGM to borrow May Robson for one picture, at the same time closing with Edward Ludwig, through the Small-Landau office, to direct her. Choice of a vehicle remains to be made.

Ludwig has given Warners a sixty-day extension on their option on his services for a long-term ticket. Henry Henigson produces the Robson picture.

Jolson Rests a Year

New York.—Al Jolson won't make another picture for at least a year, according to announcement here today. He leaves for California on April 13, to watch Ruby Keeler's work on current pictures.

Mrs. Beery in Hospital

Mrs. Wallace Beery has gone to the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital and will be under obervation for the next few days. Dr. E. C. Moore is attending her.

Delay 'Villa' Opening

New York.—Because of additional time requested by the studio to finish the first print, the opening of "Viva Villa" at the Criterion has been postponed until April 10.

ROXY BACK AT THE ROXY, STARTING SEPTEMBER 1

New York.—Before he left here yesterday on the first hop of his Paramount tour, S. L. Rothafel came to an agreement with the bondholders of the Roxy Theatre to take over the management of that house, starting September 1.

The present receiver, Howard Cullinan, denies that an agreement has been reached between the bondholders and Roxy with the same vehemence

Lon Young Will Ask 'Baby Star' Recount

Lon Young, Educational's publicity director and Wampas member, is leading a move to ask for a recount of the Baby Star balloting at the next official Wampas meeting.

Young doesn't question the integrity of the official counters, but wants to know the exact returns and the qualifications of each voter.

THE LOWDOWN

Why Movie Stars Go Mad. The other night, as he was leaving the Ambassador, Gary Cooper was stopped by an elderly, gray-haired man, who seemed to be a gentleman. He wanted Gary's autograph and, holding out a large calling card of his own, asked for the signature. Gary willingly took the card to sign, asking "Have you a pencil?"

"Whaddaya mean?" snarled the autograph-seeker, "Don't you carry your own equipment?" (!)

The daily chuckle. A friend of ours, who was entraining for the East the other day, didn't expect a certain director down at the station for goodbyes because he was in a story conference. Just before the train pulled out, however, he dashed breathlessly into the station.

"How come?" we asked, "How could you get away from the conference?"

"Oh," answered the director, "I just excused myself for a moment and rushed down here to say goodble."

"But won't they miss you?" we asked.

"Oh, no," he answered, "When I left, the execs hadn't even decided yet where to put their FEET during the conference!"

The biggest kick about the Wampas Baby Star election is also an indirect tribute to the boys. Because the one girl of the crowd who had the nerve to tell the boys the other night, in very delicately chosen words and hair-line satire, what she thought of their actions at the election—was ELECTED one of the stars. Katherine Williams is the girl, and the orchid she gets bounces to the Wampas boys for showing they can take it.

CAMERAMEN'S LOCAL PLANNING TO OUST HURD

If the plans of the Board of Executives carry through as expected, Howard E. Hurd, business representative and storm center of Local 659, IATSE, will not take over the reins of management of the cameramen's local next Monday, even though he did win a vote to retain him at the general meeting last Sunday night.

Because of the stormy bickerings and personal bitterness that flared constantly at meetings of the Board when it attempted to bring about a settlement of Hurd's contract, a special committee has been appointed to deal with him. This committee is now trying to get rid of him and his contract between now and Monday when he is supposed to take over the business management that has been handled by Ed Estabrook for the past few months. The Board is standing by for a call for a special meeting to approve its action.

The entire matter now hinges, it was learned from a union official last night, on the matter of how much Hurd will take and how much the union will pay him. Hurd's contract still calls for a total of approximately $25,000, to run over eighteen months. Those close to the situation say he has demanded $10,000 to quit. At first the Board wanted to pay SOMETHING. Now the general feeling is he should be paid NOTHING. However, an officer of the Local last night declared that Hurd will get something as a settlement.

A large number of the Local members have been outspoken in their feelings regarding Hurd ever since the meeting last Sunday, when he won a surprise victory by a vote of 100 to 74.

The Board of Executives met last night and discussed the proposed merger of the ASC and the Local. Opinion was divided as to the advisability. Nothing was done, so the members declared, in an official way. Just discussion.

Yesterday carpenters were at work revamping the main office of the union in preparation for the cut down Monday from the ten offices the union now holds to only three.

Three for Schnitzer

Joseph I. Schnitzer, arriving from New York yesterday, will immediately go into preparation on three features, planned for major release, with Erpi backing on the production end. Pictures will be shot at the General Service studios.

Sam Goldwyn has okayed the script Dwight Taylor turned in on "Barbary Coast" and has extended the writer's deal to include the dialogue assignment, which will have Taylor working on the set with William Wellman, who directs.

Baby Stars Placed

Paramount late last night closed the deal by which the thirteen Wampas Baby Stars will be spotted into the coming production, "Kiss and Make Up." This is the Hungarian play originally on the schedule as "Cosmetics."

Major Productions Cast 'Broadway Virgin'

Dorothy Burgess, Kenneth Thomson and George Meeker have been signed by Major Productions for "Broadway Virgin." Betty Compson, Dorothy Granger and William Bakewell head the cast.

Frank Good was signed as cameraman and Harry Knight as assistant production manager.

Roberts on Vacation, 'Honor Bright' in Air

Stephen Roberts has obtained a four weeks leave of absence from Paramount and leaves tonight for Oregon for a rest.

This leaves the Gary Cooper starring vehicle, "Honor Bright," which will get under way in two weeks, without a director.

Ray McKee Embarrassed

Raymond McKee, picture veteran, was never in the million dollar class, but he finds that many newspaper readers are confusing him with the Raymond McKee of Richfield Oil, who has just started to serve a sentence at San Quentin for frauds that brought him yachts and what not. Ray is anxious to tell the folks he is still an actor.

Castings for 'Stooge'

Leo Chalzel, Ferdinand Munier, Valerie Stevens and Jerry Fletcher have been signed for the Joe Mankiewicz and Claude Binyon play, "The Stooge," which will be produced at the Threshold Theatre, 244 South Robertson, Beverly Hills, in the near future.

Baker on 'Angel'

Universal yesterday signed Melville Baker to script "Angel," the French play by Melchoir Lengyel, which John Stahl will direct. Margaret Sullavan will have the lead.

'Rip Tide' Is A Sensation At Its First 2 Openings

Philadelphia.—The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production of "Rip Tide" opened at the Boyd Wednesday and broke all existing records for that house for the past three years with a take of $4,200. This is astounding business in view of the fact that the house has been averaging around $10,000 for seven day runs.

Miami.—The Thalberg-MGM production of "Rip Tide" had a $1.10 opening here Monday to standing room only and indications are that it will rip any record for the town for the past five years.

New York.—"Rip Tide" opens at the Capitol here today and makes its bow in 29 key spots at the same time.

DARROW REHEARSES FOR BIG SHOTS BY HEARING INDIES

Brandt, of N. Y., Steals Limelight

Washington. — Even though the Code Authority and the high powered sales executives begged off, the Darrow National Recovery Review Board went ahead today with its probing into the picture industry, and it was a field day for the indies, with no one to oppose them.

The highlight of the day was the way in which Harry Brandt, president of the independent theatre owners' group in New York, stepped into the limelight, and then, by virtue of apparently being the only witness who could explain the intricacies of picture terminology so that board members could understand the business, became the star of the day.

Brandt opened the day's testimony, and was kept overtime on the stand by sympathetic questioning from Darrow. On behalf of the independents he painted a picture of the code as a document that entrenched monopoly, authored by Sol Rosenblatt, who took his advice from Charles O'Reilly, who was termed just a "stooge" for the big interests because of his sideline of handling candy vending machines.

Milton Wiseman, the indie exhibs' lawyer, aided Lowell Mason, the able attorney for the Board, in the questioning.

Abram Myers and Allied members from points as far distant as Texas were there to back up Brandt's testimony and show that his kicks did not apply to New York alone.

Brandt got the biggest human interest reaction of the day when, after he had asserted that of the country's sixteen thousand theatres, thirteen thousand were independent, he was asked by a member of the Board: "Why doesn't this vast group go into the production of pictures?"

Brandt replied, "Because the 'Big Eight' has burned the bankers so thoroughly already, it is impossible to interest new banking capital in the industry."

Brandt was even recalled to the stand to help explain some technical points to the Board.

H. M. Ritchey, Allied's Detroit manager, and Col. H. A. Cole, of Texas, one time head of the MPTOA organization, were other witnesses, all talking in the same vein.

The Board also heard from a few lay reformers ready to back up the exhibitor claim that block booking is the root of all the industry's evils.

The big fireworks come Monday. Then it is that the higher-ups who are members of the Code Authority, and the sales managers of all the majors, are expected to respond to the Darrow summons. And the Board spent a busy day taking notes of the testimony from the indies to be primed for the big shots.

New Song for Lasky

Jay Gorney and Don Hartman have written a new number, entitled 'Forbidden Lips," which will be used in the Jesse L. Lasky-Fox production, 'Springtime for Henry."

Can't Take It

New York.—First results of the Darrow blasts about the picture business were seen in the statement today by the Code Authority that it would go easy for a time enforcing the 10 percent cancellation provisions of the code literally. Local boards have been instructed to "use their judgment."

'Cat and Fiddle' Hit In London Showing

London.—MGM's picture, "The Cat and the Fiddle," hit the taste of British theatregoers and is being held over for another week.

Newcomers at local picture palaces are: "Sorrel and Son," Leicester Square; "Only Yesterday," New Gallery; "Scandals," at the Capitol; "Death Takes a Holiday," Carlton; "The World Changes," Regal; "Good Dame," Plaza; and the Anna Sten "Lady of the Boulevards," known in America as "Nana," at the Tivoli.

Paramount Getting Two Ready for Tracy

Paramount is preparing two scripts for immediate production, and the first finished will be Lee Tracy's first starring vehicle.

The two are "Son Comes Home," the Julian Josephson original story, which will be directed by Charles Vidor, and the Tiffany Thayer yarn, "One Woman," which will be directed by James Flood. Miriam Hopkins will be co-starred with Tracy in the latter story.

Joe Sherman Promoted To Scenario Staff

Joseph Sherman, assistant to Howard Strickling, MGM publicity director, has returned from his six weeks vacation, and was notified that he was promoted to the MGM scenario staff.

Sherman returns to work immediately and will get his initial writing assignment the first of the week.

Wyler Plans for Future

William Wyler's first picture under the renewal of his contract with Universal will be based on Marcel Pagnol's story, "Fanny," on which Preston Sturges is now doing the screen play. This will be followed with the big special, "Sutter's Gold." Wyler's new deal at the "U" has called for a big jump in salary.

Polo Match Tomorrow

The Los Amigos polo team meets the U.S.C. aggregation at the Warner ranch tomorrow afternoon. Michael Curtiz, Cy Bartlett, Niven Busch and Herman Dryer compose the Amigos group.

Columbia Caster East

With power to sign up people he considers possible star material, William Perlberg, Columbia casting chief, hops off for the East tomorrow. He will be gone for two weeks.

Extras' Committee To Have Funds Soon

Funds that will enable the Code Committee for Extras to function will be in the hands of the committee within the next week, according to a telegram from Eddie Cantor to the Screen Actors' Guild yesterday.

Cantor said that he had taken up the matter of the extra situation at the code meeting in New York yesterday morning and that Sidney Kent and others had assured him they will look into the extras' complaints immediately. He stated that Rosenblatt expressed confidence in Mrs. Mabel Kinney, chairman of the Extras' Committee, and had requested that she decide in all complaints.

Zanuck Replaced on Academy Committees

Due to the fact that he plans to leave for a lengthy stay in Europe shortly, Darryl Zanuck this week asked that he be relieved from duties as a member of the Board of Governors and the Producers Branch Executive Committee of the Academy.

Yesterday it was announced that Jack L. Warner had been elected to fill his post on the Board of Governors, and William Koenig to fill his place on the Producers Branch Executive Committee.

Invincible Changes Title to 'Reunion'

Maury Cohen, producer of Invincible pictures, yesterday changed the title of his current production from "Together Again" to "Reunion." Picture features Lila Lee, Onslow Stevens, Claude Gillingwater and Dickie Moore, and was directed by Frank Strayer.

Warners-Doyle Split

Unable to get together on salary terms under a term writing ticket, Laird Doyle and Warners parted company yesterday. Writer, handing in his screen play on "British Agent," checked out to take up a deal with a prominent advertising agency to write material for radio broadcasting.

Duna in 'Sour Grapes'

Steffi Duna has been assigned one of the leading roles in the Clive Brook-Diana Wynyard picture, "Sour Grapes," as her first with Radio. Worthington Miner and George Nicholls Jr. will co-direct, under the supervision of Myles Connolly.

New Warner Title

Warners have changed the title on the Joan Blondell-James Cagney vehicle, "Without Honor," to "He Was Her Man." Picture was finished about two weeks ago with Lloyd Bacon megging.

Jack Haley Arrives

Jack Haley returned to Hollywood last night on The Chief and will start preparation immediately for his picture, "Here Comes The Groom," for Charles R. Rogers.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

It is now three months or more since prohibition was repealed and it looks as though it's going to take New York at least three years to get over it. This town is just as crazily patterned now as it was the day legal liquor came back, and it's a red letter day that doesn't see the grand opening of a new bar. In fact, there's one hotel that is about to have the third grand opening of its own particular bar, in the fond hope that after one of them, the thing will become the place to go and so far they haven't won a game.

And the play season is by no means dead—just dull with the prospect of eight new shows making their bow Easter week and the possibility of New York once again seeing "Romeo and Juliet," this time with an all-Negro cast. Possibly the fact that "Juliet" was supposed to have been so spiritual gave them the idea. And people keep asking where all the money is coming from to produce. . . Well, in one instance a couple of weeks ago, some people got together and opened a show for the benefit of a beloved producer. The highest salary paid was supposed to have been forty dollars a week and all the material was contributed, with the idea that, if it is a success, the profits will be worked out on a percentage basis. Another finally came to town because the leading character in it has a family anxious to have an accredited star in the old homestead. And still another was financed by the author himself after having kicked around several theatrical offices. Picture companies are still heavily interested in backing plays although not one of them will admit it, the latest rumor being Columbia financing Al Woods' production of "The Red Cat" for which Mr. Woods will try to lure a movie star back to the stage. But the person most often spoken of as the backer of both plays and pictures, Jock Whitney, has thus far contributed not one cent to any set-up. It must be just the magic of his name.

There's a new game being played around town that was started by Tallulah Bankhead and Ann Andrews. Frst you think of a person and then you pin the name of a show or picture on him that best fits. Or you can try the whole thing vice versa. It's plenty fun and, after five minutes, unprintable. Tallulah sails for England Saturday on the Bremen for a trip that may last for years or may just be a three months vacation. . . . Howard Dietz is telling the story on an extra on the MGM lot who was relating tall tales of the old days in Mexico and finally got around to saying, "Now, you take this fellow Villa. Why, I knew VIVA, personally."

MGM BLANKETS COUNTRY BY 'RIP TIDE' BROADCAST

Norma Shearer clicked with one of the best radio tie-ups yet recorded over a national hook-up in a strong scene from "Rip Tide" with Herbert Marshall yesterday afternoon. It was a sustaining program that was the culmination of a radio blanket laid by MGM for the Irving Thalberg production.

On the same day, Robert Montgomery, announced as "appearing currently with Norma Shearer in "Rip Tide'," was on the Vallee national program, and again on another national hook-up at 7:45. Today will find the picture on the air for a number of breaks, with KFI, KNX, and KGFJ among the stations enlisted.

Radio statisticians figure that an audience of eighty millions is being reached by the "Rip Tide" air tie-ups. Adrian, speaking on the gowns in the picture, Arthur Jarrett, Kay Thompson and the Rhythm Kings, and Raymond Paige's orchestra were other features of the program with Miss Shearer.

Townley Will Produce Comedy Shorts for 'U'

Jack Townley has formed a new producing company to make two-reel comedies for Universal release.

Contracts were signed yesterday, under which Townley will make, as his initial group, six musical featurettes in co-operation with the Thalians. Production scheduled to start about the middle of April. No director set as yet.

Jimmy Fidler Boosted

Jimmy Fidler, who has been delivering Hollywood gossip on Radio's "Hollywood on the Air" over NBC, has been commissioned to write a daily news letter to all the NBC stations throughout the country to be called "Jimmy Fidler's Hollywood Tattle." It will be broadcast at some time during the day.

After finishing the 12 weeks' tour with his Gang for Paramount, Roxy will spend six weeks in England on that theatre project he started there and will return in mid-August to start preparations for his new duties.

There is hardly a doubt that many of his adherents, now employed in the Music Hall, will jump those traces and join their old boss at the Seventh Avenue theatre.

The Executive Board of the Writers' Guild announces that no nominating ballots received after Monday evening, April 2, will be considered. Nominations may, of course, still be made from the floor on the night of the meeting, April 8.

Sten Trade Show Gets London Rave

London.—A front page break in the News-Chronicle, with a circulation of a million and a half, was one of the results of the trade showing here of Anna Sten in Sam Goldwyn's "Nana" —known here, because of censor desires, as "Lady of the Boulevards."

Other dailies and the film papers also gave space to raves about the new star. Among the comments were:

"She is the most beautiful creature who has ever appeared on the screen." —News-Chronicle.

"A beautiful and voluptuous new personality who appears in a story which enables her to express every emotion known to the screen."—Evening News.

"Goldwyn has again backed a winner."—Evening Standard.

"Sten is here to stay. She is provocative, alluring, electric."—Daily Film Renter.

"Bewitching Anna Sten held rapt attention of London critics. Her future work will be awaited with eager interest."—The Cinema.

Laughton Sends Thanks To Academy for Award

The Academy made public yesterday a telegram from Charles Laughton, sent when he received notification of his selection by the cAademy for the outstanding performance of the past year. The telegram follows:

"The charming and generous gesture on the part of my American friends and co-workers finds me unable to express in words my real feelings. I only hope that I will be able to do a real good part in America which might be good enough to make a lot of money for whoever produces it."

Margaret Lindsay Set

Warners have assigned Margaret Lindsay to the lead opposite James Cagney and Pat O'Brien in "Hey Sailor," which Lloyd Bacon puts into production Monday. Studio also slated Dorothy Tree and Frank McHugh for spots. Picture will be Miss Lindsay's first since her operation about a month ago.

Eilers Out of Cast

Sally Eilers, who is "expecting," has been taken out of the cast of "Always Honest" by Sol Wurtzel at Fox. Claire Trevor replaces her.

mount, Universal, Hal Roach, Columbia, United Artists and Twentieth Century Pictures, in addition to the two independent producing companies.

Apparently taking a cue from Clarence Darrow's policy in Washington, Judge Lindsey finally quit his long attempts to get studio representatives to meet with him and complaining labor around a "round table" to try to settle the complaints peacefully and with as little difficulty as possible. Now the studios will find themselves smack up against the Code Authority if they refuse to comply with the Judge's notices.

Among the complaints and issues that are slated to be threshed out will be the matter of wage scale for the sound men which is now governed by the studio contract wtih the IBEW. The sound men claim Rosenblatt promised them that if they could show contracts dating from last August with the independent companies that the wage scale therein would be the one to govern the entire industry.

Local 37, IATSE has four complaints filed. One has to do with limitation of hours for "key men." Another charges studios are juggling classification of men and their duties in order to get around the code. Then there is a complant that many studios are using apprentice painters to do the work of experts. Film loaders have a complaint about their pay scale. Cameramen have a protest concerning limitation of hours, and there are many more.

For weeks Judge Lindsey, who was appointed Special Labor Compliance Officer, has been trying to get together with the studios. But there has been a grand stalling party which ended this week when Pat Casey, speaking for the major studios, told Judge Lindsey that the studios liked the Judge but could not submit to have him hear their cases. Now the Judge will go ahead and hear them, render his decisions, and then the question will be whether or not the studios will accept the decisions.

up. It should, right at this period, puts its best foot forward in an effort to bring customers back to the box office. But this won't be done, for the simple reason that our big exhibitors, the operators of the producer-distributor - chain - circuits will not discontinue the policy for fear their small opposition will get the best of them.

The shutdown on double features will lessen the demand for pictures, that lessened demand will give producers here more time for thought and conception in an effort to make better pictures. And we must have BETTER PICTURES.

PREDICT EXIT FOR 'ROSY'

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•THE days of the real exhibitor conventions passed out of the picture after that famous meeting in Minneapolis where Adolph Zukor was put on the stand and subjected to one of the most cruel lashings that we have ever witnessed.

At Minneapolis, and at all exhibitor meetings before that time, the actions of these gatherings were of the greatest importance to independent theatre owners and to the whole motion picture industry. But since Minneapolis, most of the conventions have amounted to nothing, as all results were ordained at a round table conclave in the Hays office in New York long before the meetings.

The minute that the big distributors felt that the exhibitor organization was getting too important, the heads of the companies started their tampering and political bickering, with the result that almost all of the important showmen refused to attend the meets, figuring they could gain more by staying at home. And that was the beginning of the end of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

This year looks as if much of that old fighting spirit of Minneapolis will be revived. The independent theatre owner has been taught a terrible lesson as a result of the NRA code conferences held in Washington with Mr. Rosenblatt at the helm. Those showmen realize that they have to fight for their rights, and we look to see some revolutionary measures passed at the forthcoming meeting here on April 10, 11 and 12.

The depression (brought on by bad pictures) has sort of changed the exhibition map. Many of the big chain-owned houses are back in the hands of independent owners. There are some strings still attached by the major distributors, but not sufficient to tie the hands of the present operators. Accordingly, all of the things that the "indies" thought they would get from the NRA will be battled for on the convention floor to the utter disregard of any and all codes.

New Deal Helps

Detroit.—Fifty-five theatres in this city have advanced admission prices due to improved economic conditions. The move came immediately after the shadow of possible strikes passed away.

Pics Have Fair Week on B'way

New York.—Business at New York theatres for the past week hit so close to the general averages of recent weeks that it is hard to say whether the attractions were good enough to overcome the Holy Week slump, or that there just wasn't any slump.

"Bottoms Up" drew $68,000 to the Music Hall, a few thousand better than "Scandals" but not healthy for this house by a long shot. Other figures were: "Show-Off," second week, Capitol, $30,000; "Catherine the Great," second week, Rivoli, $29,000; "Come On Marines," Paramount, $22,500; "Jimmy the Gent," $18,000, Strand; "Hold That Girl," $16,500, Roxy; "Once to Every Woman," $10,000, Rialto; "Ever Since Eve," $9,000 at the Mayfair.

Ginsberg to Honolulu

Henry Ginsberg, vice-president of Hal Roach studio, leaves tonight on the Malola for Honolulu, where he will join his wife, who is returning from a six-weeks tour of the Orient. Ginsberg will remain there ten days before returning.

'Rothschild' Sell-out

With only a little over 350 tickets left yesterday, a complete sellout for "The House of Rothschild" premiere at Grauman's Chinese next Tuesday appeared certain.

New York Exhibs Gloat After Return From Darrow Hearing And See Entire Code Revision

New York.—Independent exhibitors returning here today were frankly exultant after their experience before Clarence Darrow, of the National Recovery Review Board, and outspoken in their forecasts of the dynamite that will explode next Tuesday when Administrator Rosenblatt and the members of the Code Authority are put on the grid before the same inquisitor.

The New York exhibitors predict that not only will the code be reopened and rewritten in its entirety, but that developments may also see a new

New York.—Despite the troubles of Good Friday and Passover, "Rip Tide" managed to get off to a good start on Broadway at the Capitol yesterday, while "Wild Cargo" and the personal appearance of George Raft at the Paramount also brought fair business. The rest of the street was pretty hard hit, however.

Fairbanks May Make Second Film Abroad

Clarence E. Erickson, business manager of the Douglas Fairbanks Picture Corporation, arrived in Hollywood from London, where he completed arrangements for release of Fairbanks' picture.

New York REVIEWS

"COMING OUT PARTY"

Fox prod.; director, John Blystone; writers, Becky Gardiner, Gladys Unger, Jesse Lasky, Jr.

Roxy Theatre

News: The plot of "Coming Out Party" has been worn so threadbare that, in spite of its glittering settings in its Park Avenue locale, it presents a shabby appearance on the Roxy screen. It is the first production Jesse Lasky has made for Fox which falls below the high standard he has set for himself by his other pictures.

Herald-Tribune: Jesse Lasky's latest effort as an individual producer is, for some reason, disappointing. Disappointing because the story has an original twist, with a frequently moving screen portrayal. The direction, too, is competent, and the staging handsome.

Times: It is a well-acted picture, but the story is little more than one misunderstanding after another.

Post: It is our quiet suspicion that the picture was produced because of such interest which might be aroused in the subject matter rather than the story.

Mirror: It is a naive and artless story, which wastes the talent of a fine cast and a strong director. The cast is really a fine one. Despite the utterly banal dialogue, each member of it contrives to lend some sympathy and plausibility to the characters.

Journal: It's all, as one would say in describing a movie premiere, very gala, and the scenes of socialites at play serve as a background for the plot. And while the plot is pretty stereotyped, Miss Dee is lovely to look at.

American: A fairly entertaining program picture has been wrought from this stereotyped yarn. The film is handsomely invested, and this, plus the presence of those appealing youngsters, Frances Dee and Gene Raymond, in its cast, overcome the story fault of obvious pampering to class antagonisms and the faint "Flaming Youth" aura that tinges the drama.

World-Telegram: Jesse L. Lasky, the producer, has fashioned a mildly entertaining little picture, better written and played than the average program-run of films, but still a photoplay of the so-so sort. All told, this "Coming Out Party" is satisfactory program entertainment.

"WINE, WOMEN AND SONG"

Syndicate prod.; director, Herbert Brenon; story, Leon D'Usseau; music and lyrics, Con Conrad.

Mayfair Theatre

American: It is as juvenile an affair as any coming to attention of patient film shoppers during the current season. The embarrassed players struggle valiantly with lines and situations dating from way back yonder, nor may it be said that Director Brenon has been able to imbue the piece with any semblance of reality.

Mirror: Evidently not intended as a burlesque on the melodrama of the gaslight era, the picture nevertheless borders on the ludicrous.

Sun: "Wine, Women and Song" is concerned with just. Its tale is quite as lurid as its name, its production as old-fashioned. And this is more than a little sad. Herbert Breon's name on this is the most unhappy thing about the whole business.

News: The chief fault seems to be that someone forgot to include a story in "Wine, Women and Song." A film blurred by a series of ridiculous situations and dialogue straight from the horse and carriage days.

Post: We never saw a picture that made such hearty use of old screen material as does this "Wine, Women and Song." A little girl named Marjorie Moore is charming. She is, in fact, much better than the picture deserves.

Times: After witnessing "Wine, Women and Song," the current picture at the Mayfair, one is apt to conclude that the director and the players have treated this story with the disdain it deserves. A tawdry, amateurish and frequently offensive back-stage hodgepodge.

Administrator for the picture industry.

The speakers base their belief on the reaction by Darrow and his committee to the testimony of Harry Brandt and others, and their evident desire to learn all they could of the technical phases of buying and selling pictures. This attitude they couple with the known close friendship of President Roosevelt and Darrow.

LIBERTY'S 'NO RANSOM' JUST A TRITE, OUT-DATED STORY

Robt. McWade the Only Bright Spot

"NO RANSOM"
(Liberty)

Direction .....Fred Newmeyer
Based on Story by.....Damon Runyon
Screen Play.....Albert DeMond
Photography .....Harry Neumann
Cast: Leila Hyams, Phillips Holmes, Jack LaRue, Robert McWade, Hedda Hopper, Vince Barnett, Eddie Nugent, Carl Miller, Irving Bacon, Christian Rub, Garry Owen, Fritzi Ridgeway, Mary Foy, Arthur Hoyt.

Except for the sympathy Robert McWade manages to obtain in his characterization of a millionaire neglected by his family, "No Ransom" holds little appeal for a metropolitan audience. The story is of that very dated John Golden school wherein sweetness and light bring a lot of wayward people to their senses just before the curtain descends. In its utter lack of sophistication, the picture is nearly a museum piece.

Coming about ten years after we have stopped discussing psycho-analysis and applied psychology, the interest of the millionaire's wife in the subject makes the first reel quite boring. Things do not pick up at all until the husband calls upon a gangster, offering thirty thousand dollars to be killed. The gangster likes the old gentleman and evolves a substitute scheme. He will have him kidnaped and the anxious family may reform. The scheme works, as such plans are in the habit of doing in plays of the kind. The son goes to work, the daughter accepts the right man for her to marry and the wife forgets there is a psycho-analysis—even as you and I have forgotten.

Their parts lick every one of the players with the noted exception of McWade, and Vince Barnett. Phillips Holmes, in for three scenes, causes wonder as to what he did with the afternoon of the day he worked.

Direction and screen play are both spotty, rising occasionally for an enjoyable moment such as the walk into the woods when McWade believes Jack La Rue is going to kill him. Sets and photography are above average for pictures of the class.

In small community theatres, "No Ransom" may get by if for no other reason than it gives its audiences the opportunity of feeling superior to millionaires.

Yesterday in NEW YORK with HELEN GWYNNE

It is astonishing and somewhat gratifying to us to find out what a "cause celebre" the case of Katharine Hepburn vs. Radio has become to people you'd never suspect cared. Since we've been back in this supposedly thoughtless town, the first question that everyone has asked us is whether we knew if Radio would meet the demands of the brightest meteor that has flashed across cinema skies in years, and if not, why not. It seems to us that if Hepburn's screen career is of that much importance to Mr. and Mrs. Fan, Hepburn MUST be worth anything and everything she's asking for.

Just consider the gal's career thus far. She has made five pictures: "Bill of Divorcement," "Christopher Strong," "Morning Glory," "Little Women" and "Spitfire." With the exception of "Bill of Divorcement," (which she stole from an accredited star) and "Little Women," the success of her pictures has depended solely on Hepburn. Hepburn's dynamic personality and truly fine characterizations have carried the entire burden of three productions to tremendous financial success and have made her one of the very few genuine STARS in the business. She is one of the few people whom it is not necessary to surround with an all-star cast in order to whet the public's appetite, therefore it would seem that the gal is entitled to something very nearly approximating the combined salaries of a number of expensive players, because Hepburn is enough for any picture and that is worth PLENTY.

But the most important and significant thing of all, is the fact that the public wants her to the extent of fighting her battles for her. To the extent that, even though they've been aroused to envious indignation over star salaries, they believe that Hepburn has EARNED the right to whatever increase she asks for. Above all, they want to see Hepburn, and if Radio lets her go, they will have quibbled over a few thousands with potential millions at stake. We know there are two sides to every question, and a contract is a contract, etc, etc., but viewed purely as a business proposition from either side, Hepburn is worth paying for and keeping.

TAX CUTS BRITISH BUSINESS $30,000,000 IN TWO YEARS

Exhibs Appeal to Govt. for Relief

London.—British exhibitors have lost a little more than $30,000,000 during the past two years because of the government entertainment tax, it was revealed at the C.E.A. annual meeting here, and they have appealed to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for relief.

T. Ormiston, who addressed the meeting and gave out the details, declared that investigation shows that patronage at the picture houses started dropping immediately upon the application of the present entertainment tax, and has continued to decrease until it has reached a point 21 per cent off in two years.

Theatre owners are faced with a serious problem, and if their appeal for aid is ignored by the government, it looks as though a lot of them will have to close their doors. In a resolution passed at the meeting they asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to remit the tax on seats up to and including sixpence. The tax ranges all the way from 16 2/3 per cent to 33 1/3 per cent, the latter figure being the tax on the cheaper threepenny seats.

It was pointed out at the meeting that the government was unfair to those patrons who cannot afford the expensive seats, as they pay a tax of twice the amount charged on the higher-priced seats.

German-Austrian Film Agreement Extended

Brussels.—Belgian distributors have received the government's approval for tax reductions on admission tickets. Government's move was dictated by the difficult exploitation conditions under which local men are suffering.

D'Arcy Not for 'Widow'

Ray D'Arcy's hopes to re-enact his original role of the heavy in "Merry Widow" were lost yesterday when Irving Thalberg decided the new version of the operetta had eliminated the villain part.

Stothart on Lehar Score

Herbert Stothart, MGM's music department head, took over the task of adapting the Franz Lehar score for the "Merry Widow" personally.

All Stars Look Alike To the Archbishop

London.—The Archbishop of Canterbury was one of the guests of honor the other evening at a dinner of some 500 exhibitors, and brought down the house when he told the assembled theatre men that he was unacquainted with the stars in the film firmament, "but judging by their pictures I cannot see that one star differs from another."

Hollywood Idea of Paris Burns French

Paris.—If Hollywood's film producers would limit their Parisian backgrounds to establishing shots of the Eifel tower they would find France a much more prolific user of their motion pictures.

The local opinion of Hollywood's idea of Paris causes a burn-up in most Frenchmen's minds, and frequently makes them break loose and show their disgust by tearing up the theatre seats.

At best, the French market for pictures is a ticklish one. The French exhibitors refuse to consider any type of film which they are not exactly certain will be a howling success. Pictures like "Invisible Man," "Back Street," "Kid from Spain," "Henry VIII" and any Charlie Chaplin picture fit right into the local exhibitor scheme of things. Other types have to take a chance.

Expansion Planned By Fox in England

London.—Fox Film Company is planning an expansion of its film production activities in this country in the very near future, according to authoritative reports in film circles here.

It is believed the company plans a considerable increase in the number of films produced here. The first step towards this expansion has already been taken in the removal of the Fox production staff from Berners Street to much larger offices in Newman Street.

Discus Champion Gets 'Treasure Island' Role

John Anderson, former national discus tossing champ, graduates from the Hinsdale School into a featured spot in "Treasure Island" at MGM.

Sound on British Lots

London.—Of the 23 British picture studios now in operation, eight are equipped with RCA recording equipment, five with independent, four with Visatone, three with British Acoustic and three with Erpi.

Drastic Changes in Pittaluga Set-up

Rome.—After the change in the board of directors which took place a few months ago in the Pittaluga concern, a plan of internal modifications has now been worked out and part of the company's staff substituted.

The initiator of the reorganization is Paolo Giordani. He wants to give more independence to the several departments of the concern (studios, distribution, theatre exploitation) each of them being forced to work on a remunerative basis. The Pittaluga concern has made a contract with United Artists, whose complete production it will distribute in Italy.

Three New Foreign Houses For Paris

Paris.—The number of foreign film theatres in Paris is to be increased by three. They will be used principally for foreign films presented in the original language.

One of the three new theatres, the Crystal Palace, has started already with the Radio film, "Christopher Strong." The theatre has 250 seats. The next theatre to be opened is the Studio d'Artois, while the third, Studio Bertrand, is being built. Paris has 30 foreign theatres.

U. S. Film Firms Might Produce in Australia

Sydney.—J. W. Loeb, former partner of William Fox, on arrival here on a tourist cruise, intimated that, in the event of the Australian Federal Government legislating a film quota, it might have the effect of forcing American film producing companies to establish studios in Australia.

"The introduction of a local quota system might easily result in American producers taking the same action as they did with France and Egland and manufacture pictures in Australia," he said.

Duchy of Luxemburg Utopia for Pictures

Washington.—That the Grand Duchy of Luxemburg is an unusually good market for American motion pictures is the assertion of American Consul C. P. Waller, in a report to the Department of Commerce.

Waller points out that 29 of the 30 theatres in the Grand Duchy are wired for sound, the country is one of the most prosperous in the world and there is no censorship of any kind on pictures.

PRODUCERS DOUBLE-CROSS ON MPTOA ENTERTAINMENT

Scrap Agreement, Make Own Plans

With original plans to give one big blow-out for the visiting exhibitors of the MPTOA during their convention here, the major producers are now split hgh, wide and handsome, each trying to outdo the other in planning entertainment for the theatre owners.

At a meeting of the Producers Association some time ago, it was agreed that all major lots should chip in and foot the bill for a big dinner-dance to be held on one of the big stages at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. After this agreement it became known that Warners intended to walk out on those arrangements and stage an affair themselves at their own lot. Hearing this, Junior Laemmle started plans for a big show, food and dancing at Universal City, and now the whole thing is in a jamboree, with some affairs doubling up on the same night.

Warners explain their defection was due to the fact that Abe Warner had already committed the Warner plant to their party before the agreement was reached by the local producers, and Junior Laemmle feels that, if Warners are out to grab that individual attention, he is not going to stand by and see Universal dished. The affair is going on at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer even if MGM has to foot the bill. Paramount was busy with plans yesterday for something of its own. So, between the bunch the visiting exhibitors will not want for food, drink or feminine entertainment.

Baum Writes for Sten

Sam Goldwyn yesterday placed Vicki Baum under a writing contract, with an assignment immediately lined up for the author of "Grand Hotel." This will be an original story for Anna Sten which Goldwyn plans to put into production immediately following the completion of "Resurrection."

Hitchcock to Goldwyn

Eddie Hitchcock, former member of the MGM advertising staff, has joined the Sam Goldwyn publicity staff to handle the exploitation on "Nana" for the west coast.

Mrs. Gledhill Ill

Mrs. Margaret Gledhill, wife of Donald Gledhill, executive secretary of the Academy, was operated on yesterday at the Wilshire Hospital.

'Little Women' Helps

New York.—Some of the value of "Little Women" to the motion picture industry can be seen in the fact that 1500 Catholic Sisters will be guests at a special showing in the RKO Center Theatre next Monday morning.

Van Dyke Will Start 'Thin Man' Thursday

W. S. Van Dyke will wind up his work on "Manhattan Melodrama" Tuesday, two days under schedule, and will take over the reins of "The Thin Man" Thursday. The Jack Conway unit on "Manhattan Melodrama" still has ten days of work. Jerry Sackheim is the associate producer on the MGM picture.

Buck in Person Will Boost 'Wild Cargo'

New York.—The new Frank Buck picture, "Wild Cargo," is being counted on by some of the circuit heads as one of the show bets of the year. To insure a flying start, Sam Dembow, of Paramount Theatres, yesterday closed a deal with Frank Buck for an indefinite number of personal appearances.

The explorer-producer will try the act out in the Paramount houses in Dallas, San Antonio and Fort Worth, starting April 20.

Wilson and Farrow on 'Mutiny on the Bounty'

Irving Thalberg has assigned Carey Wilson and John Farrow to collaborate on the script of "Mutiny on the Bounty," which MGM recently acquired.

Frank Lloyd will swing over from the Fox lot to direct this picture when the script is ready.

Playhouse Cuts Scale

Starting Monday, prices at the Hollywood Playhouse, where the stage play "White Cargo" is playing, will be 25 and 40 cents, according to an announcement from E. E. Clive, the producer. Clive further announces these will be the prices for other shows slated for future production there.

Eddy Set for 'Duchess'

First big spot for Nelson Eddy is slated to be the leading role opposite Jeanette MacDonald in "Duchess of Delmonico's," which Walter Wanger is producing for MGM. James M. Cain is on the screen play.

Hatton with Liberty

Raymond Hatton has been signed by M. H. Hoffman for the Liberty production, "Mad Honeymoon," featuring Marian Nixon and Neil Hamilton. William Nigh is directing.

Receipts Justify Roach Added Costs

Henry Ginsberg, Hal Roach general manager, announced yesterday that, during the year just concluded, MGM has lined up 1000 additional exhibitors for the Roach comedies. Studio has expended $100,000 more than last year and returns have justified the expenditure.

"Regardless of double feature bills, comedies will be played if they are properly made and are entertaining. That is why we have increased our budget and expanded our production facilities," Ginsberg stated.

Ferber Finishes One, Starts New Original

Nat Ferber has completed his original screen play on "Little Napoleon" and has been assigned to write an original for Wallace Beery and Marie Dressler, based on the famous railroad character, "Roundhouse Annie."

"Little Napoleon" will have Beery and Gable in the top spots and will follow "Mutiny on the Bounty" into production. Laurence Weingarten produces for MGM.

Para. Sets Hathaway To Direct 'Is Zat So?'

Because of the success of "Come On Marines," his first crack at directing a picture outside of westerns, Henry Hathaway has definitely been taken out of the western class by Paramount and has been handed the script of "Is Zat So?" as his next assignment.

Jack Oakie and either Roscoe Karns or William Frawley will have the top spots in this prizefighter yarn.

Maxine Doyle to Stage

Maxine Doyle, Warner contract player, has obtained a four-weeks leave of absence from the studio to accept the lead in "Take a Chance," which stars Olsen and Johnson. The show will open at the Mayan Theatre soon.

New Writer for Radio

Radio has brought Allan Scott from New York to write the screen play of "Ringstrasse," a Viennese play which was recently purchased by the studio, dealing with a traveling salesman in Vienna. The Selznick-Joyce office made the deal.

Two for Card Short

Muriel Evans and Irene Hervey have been assigned the leads in the trick card short, featuring Lewis Zingone, sleight of hand artist, which is being directed by Jack Cummings. Pete Smith's monologue will be used.

Fort on Mystery Yarn

Garrett Fort has been signed by Paramount to write the screen play of "The Strange Case of Mrs. Ames," which is being supervised by Bayard Veiller. Carole Lombard is slated for the top spot.

OPEN FORUM

March 26, 1934.

The Hollywood Reporter:

It is interesting to know that Warner Bros. have organized what is called the Warner Club. The dues are twenty-five cents per month. Any single person belonging to the club who gets married receives $25 and any married person who has an addition to the family receives $50. The idea of the club is to promote more marriages and more children.

A certain employee, who is about to become a mother, asked for a leave of absence of three weeks. She couldn't afford to quit her job, as her husband is out of work and has been out of work for three months. She was refused the leave and also the right to join the club.

Maybe the good fellowship the club is sponsoring is so much higher than the average person can understand that it will take one of the high powered executives of the theatre department to explain why they couldn't give a kid like this a break.

What's your idea?

READER.

March 29, 1934.

Dear Wilkerson:

If you will throw your brain in reverse and go back about ten years, you'll be looking at the Fairbanks picture, "Robin Hood." If you go back a little farther, you'll be in the midst of a condition of public apathy toward pictures which was a kind of sketch plan for the recent and present circumstances. Come forward and you'll find the condition rapidly disappearing. "Robin Hood" started 'em coming back.

It is obvious that "Rothschild" will do the same thing. It will bring back to the theatre a lot of people who have been listening to radio, playing bridge or just looking after their winter's fishing. They'll want to see pictures—but they won't keep on wanting to unless they get good ones —so we get back to the question, What is a good one? Here is a possible answer:

A good picture concerns things that are important to most people and tells about them in a way that most people can understand.

Try this on "Lady for a Day," "It Happened One Night" and "Little Women."

Yours,
HARRY CHANDLEE.

The BOOKWORLD

English Offerings Gain Attention This Week

Several English volumes come to the attention of this department this week. One of the most interesting is "I Was a German," by Ernst Toller, the German dramatist, who tells the story of his life. The introduction is dated "The day my books were burnt in Germany," and he dedicates the volume to "My nephew, who shot himself at the age of eighteen years in 1928."

Another outstanding book is Louise Redfield Peattie's "Wife to Caliban," which tells of Crispin de Castro, a hunchback who had "the elements of God knows what saints and beasts caked up together in him." Crispin marries Eva Carey, who is desperately poor and ill in a hospital, and takes her to his lovely palace overlooking the Mediterranean. His long, torturing fight to keep Eva is handled with literary beauty and taste by Miss Peattie.

"A Law Unto Themselves," by Loveday Prior, is her first novel. It tells of the wanderings of the troubadours in the thirteenth century; the plunderings of the robber bands; the tournaments and pageants of chivalry; kings and cardinals; of murder and glittering battles.

Books published in America this week are extraordinarily fine. Of the books reviewed this week, not more than four or five are mediocre. The rest are in the superlative class.

"The Story of a Country Boy"

Author, Dawn Powell; publisher, Farrar and Rinehart.

Here is the simple, vivid story of a country boy who rose to financial heights in the big city but never rid himself of the feeling that he was just a farmer and one of the boys.

How this attitude reacted on his $25 a week employees and how Chris finally became the target for their irritation is the plot basis for Miss Powell's best novel to date.

"Strange Harvest"

Author, Inez Haynes Irwin; publisher, Bobbs-Merrill.

Mrs. Irwin writes of seven sisters, each of whom has her own personal problem to solve.

Martha, who is slowly going blind, finds that her husband has taken unto himself a mistress; Francie is the victim of a disease which threatens her beauty; Lydia has the problem of her husband's incipient insanity to wrestle with; Sukey is childless, and Eunice finds her romance wrecked because Denny, Boston's most eligible bachelor, has no sympathy for her ideals and convictions.

The book is carefully written, but leans a little heavily on coincidence.

"So Stood I"

Author, Jane Culver; publisher, Houghton Mifflin.

Completely intimidated by her nurse's awful insistence on "God's punishment" and "God's Will," little Nancy grows up with a large black shadow of fear hanging over her.

Her mother was a flighty, not-too-careful person; her father was a Protestant and Nancy never could get over the idea that she had to pray consistently for his conversion; her sister thought of herself as a unique sort of genius, and there was no one left for Nancy but her brother, Stephen.

Miss Culver has done a swell job with Nancy and Stephen, and her writing throughout is sly and brilliant.

"Dark Angel"

Author, Gina Kaus; publisher, Macmillan.

Eden and Cedar Paul have translated this dramatic, brutal, harsh novel of Alexander, Lottie and Irene.

It is not a pretty story, but it is a strong one: Alexander has married Irene, although he falls in love with her sister, Lottie, after they were married. When he comes back from the war, he finds that the child that he has worshipped is not his wife's at all, but Lottie's. His sudden outburst of jealousy opens his wife's eyes to the fact that he loves Lottie, but the situation is further heightened by the terrible admission from Irene that she has, in order to brng Alexander to her, brought up a child that, as a matter of fact, is her husband's as well as her sister's.

Aside from the essential plot, the book is a pictorial masterpiece of Vienna during and just after the war.

"In Sight of Eden"

Author, Roger Vercel; publisher, Harcourt, Brace.

Here is another translation, this time of the first novel to receive the America-France award, and is done by Alvah C. Bessie, to whom all praises should go for a sensitized piece of work.

It is the story of two Breton seamen, whose friendship for each other, against the loneliness of the sea, is stronger than the ordinary affection most men have for each other.

The friendship is built up slowly and deeply, with the result that the tragedy of their final parting, and the insanity of one of them, is a tremendous thing. The breaking up of their trust and faith in each other is accomplished by a vicious seaman who persuades Rochard that his wife has been unfaithful to him for two years—and with his friend.

There is depth and strength to this book and it stands as a particularly noteworthy achievement.

"The Chronicle of Caroline Quellen, Centenarian"

Author, Seton Peacey; publisher, Harrison Smith and Robert Haas.

Mr. Peacey has written a lively and zestful history of five generations of people who lived between 1797 and 1901.

The pivot is Caroline, an exceedingly interesting, frank, energetic, fascinating young girl who loses nothing of her frankness or energy or gustiness when she reaches a ripe old age.

She is unconventional for the age in which she lived, taking over her husband's business when he died, retaining always her attraction for men, and invariably drawn to the wildest and most impossible of her many children and grandchildren.

All the interesting characters of that time are in the book, with the historic occasions—the ascent of Sadler's balloon, and the hectic trip of the first "steam carriage."

This "chronicle" is a triumphant thing.

"Children of the Poor"

Author, Anonymous; publisher Vanguard.

Here is a human document whose significance and importance cannot be over-rated.

The author, preferring to remain anonymous, has written of his boyhood, miserably poor, in New Zealand, but the place makes no difference. It is the story of a child thief in the making, and, in the case of his sister, a woman of the streets. It is a bitter, sarcastic and sincere picture of abject poverty and complete desperation.

With its beautiful prose, its mature backward glances at a dark boyhood, and its superb characterizations, the book deserves a wide circulation.

"I Have Touched the Earth"

Author, Sylvia Chatfield Bates; publisher, Bobbs-Merrill.

This is the story of Stella, whose childhood was torn between an extraordinarily deep love for her father and an unreasoning, frantic fear of his tremendous rages.

The victim of his coarse jokes and cruel jibes, Stella found relief in an ardent but innocent attachment to another girl, Julie. But her father spoiled even that. Finally, however, Stella breaks away, with the help of her Aunt Ellen, when Julie lies dying in a sanatorium in Colorado.

But the real tragedy comes when the father, prey to a tormenting loneliness, and Stella, still victim of her father's strange attraction for her, become dependent upon each other.

"The Fighting Danites"

Author, Dane Coolidge; publisher, E. P. Dutton.

This book has the value of a seldom used scene of American history—Utah in the 1870's under Brigham Young.

The story has to do with a young army officer who accidentally tells Brigham Young's daughter some secret plans of the government for Young's suppression. He is discharged from the Army but is promised reinstatement if he can find the unidentified Mormon leader who commanded the Indians and Danite ruffians at the Mountain Meadows Massacre.

"But Not the End"

Author, Frederick Nebel; publisher, Little, Brown.

Poor Fabian!

Harrassed by the most mercenary wife in literature, he allows himself to be swallowed in a money-making business, never emerging long enough or with a mind clear enough to find out that she is frequently and thoroughoughly unfaithful to him.

When the crash comes in 1929, she leaves him and goes to Paris for a divorce, where an unexpected punishment is meted out to her.

The incidents in the book are deftly handled and the characterizations are extremely well drawn.

"The Bright Lexicon"

Author, Donald Culcross Peattie; publisher, G. P. Putnam's Sons.

A child prodigy, as learned as an encyclopedia but curiously dumb about the affairs of life, is the central character in this book.

Speaking five languages when he was ten years old, and learning a new one each month; lecturing at Heidelberg, playing the world's best chess players; hailed all around the earth as the possessor of a prodigious brain, Kyril nevertheless has the mentality of a child about the art of living. All of which takes him into some curious adventures.

The point with which the author concerns himself is: What will happen to Kyril? And he draws an interesting parallel. . . . Kyril's story being the story of mankind—too much learning and no happiness.

Entirely readable and worthwhile.

Mystery Tales Of Week Rate Unusually High

Ten mysteries are in the publishing output of the week for the lover of chills and clues, and on the whole a batch that rates unusually good in quality. Outstanding is the steady improvement shown by Dorothy Sayers, whose latest, "The Nine Tailors," is rated her best. The latest American favorite, Valentine Williams, is also represented on the week's list.

"The Nine Tailors"

Author, Dorothy L. Sayers; publisher, Harcourt, Brace.

Dorothy Sayers outdoes herself in this mystery. It is the best of her books so far.

Lord Peter Wimsey substitutes one day for one of the regular ringers of the bells of Fenchurch St. Paul in the Fen country of East Anglia, and these bells have an important part in helping Lord Peter to unravel the mystery surrounding an unidentified corpse that is found in a grave that didn't belong to it.

Besides writing a story that is fascinating from cover to cover, Miss Sayers writes delightfully of the ancient art of change-ringing.

"The Portcullis Room"

Author, Valentine Williams; publisher, Houghton Mifflin.

Stephen Garrison, an American millionaire playboy, is horrified to discover the murdered body of Vicomte D'Arenne in a room that is supposed to be haunted in ancient Toray Castle that Stephen is trying to buy.

Suspicion falls on Stephen, because he has quarreled with the Vicomte over Phyllis Dean, an American girl. But there are many other people who had very good reasons for wishing the old rake dead.

One of the interesting angles of the book is that some gangsters take over the investigation and because they are armed while the others are not, and the island is cut off from all outside communication because of a heavy storm, they are able to do pretty much as they like.

"The Case of the Fifth Key"

Author, Gregory Dean; publisher, Covici, Friede.

Samuel Marks is found dead with seven bullets in his body.

And he had just about that many enemies, but they all have such perfect alibis that they are suspected doubly.

No headway at all is made until Deputy Commissioner Simon comes back from his vacation and once more gets the old brain working.

Exciting and well built up.

"London Calling"

Author, Val Gielgud and Holt Marvell; publisher, Doubleday, Doran.

Murder in the British Broadcasting company.

The murderee is nobody but a poor, unnoticed actor playing a small part in a drama of the air, who is strangled by one of the other characters in the play when he is supposed to be strangled as called for by the script.

The actor, however, is supposed to be alone with the microphone while he plays this scene, and the director, listening from the control room, notes nothing out of the way.

Inspector Spears of Scotland Yard is the brainy sleuth.

"The Mystery of the Fiddling Cracksman"

Author, Harry Stephen Kaaler; publisher, E. P. Dutton.

Here is a fantastic one. Billy Hemple, who has just sold his first book, no more than cashes his advance royalty check than he is embroiled in a series of adventures that make his own book read like a girl scout volume. Very complicated, but readable.

"The Lesser Antilles Case"

Author, Rufus King; publisher, Doubleday, Doran.

A survivor of the wreck of the yacht Helsinor charges that the owner and the third mate were murdered, and Lieutenant Valcour is unable to make any headway toward solving the mystery until another survivor of the wreck is murdered in New York.

He unearths the murderer by chartering another yacht and taking all the remaining survivors to the scene of the wreck.

"Weeping Willow Murders"

Author, Charles Koonce; publisher, Burton Pub. Co.

Here are a couple of killings, involving Lillie Browne, who just happened to see them; Grandfather Yarr whose greatest joy in life is disinheriting people; Toddy McLean, his granddaughter; Detective Finch, and several lovers of Toddy.

Author, Elizabeth Jordan; publisher, Appleton-Century.

When Bruce Pomeroy, a wealthy young man, tries to help a young lady who is being insulted in a park, he gets knocked out, taken to an island by a bunch of gangsters and finds himself with a number of Russian aristocrats.

This is fast and picturesque.

"Information Received"

Author, E. R. Punshon; publisher, Houghton Mifflin Co.

A robbery and a murder are committed simultaneously. To complicate matters still further, the murdered man had made a will leaving his large fortune to his daughter, Jennie, unless she marries. And the trouble is, she is already married secretly to Peter Carsley.

GOSSIP OF AUTHORS

Major Herbert O. Yardley, who has been halted in his revelations concerning wartime Secret Service work, has turned his attention to the writing of spy fiction. His first, "The Blonde Countess," will be published in April by Longmans, Green and company.

Ann Bridge, who won the $10,000 Atlantic Novel Prize in 1932 with "Peking Picnic," has written a new book about a little wild Manchurian pony. It is called "The Ginger Griffin," griffin being the name of these ponies.

The same day that the first edition of 3,000 copies of "Nijinsky" was published, the edition was exhausted. Simon and Schuster are issuing immediately a second printing of 3,000 copies.

William Faulkner has temporarily suspended work on both the Snopes saga and "Requiem for a Nun," and has started a new novel called "Dark House."

Dodd, Mead has just received the manuscript of George Bernard Shaw's new collection of short stories. The title will be "Scraps, Shavings and Short Stories." Published May 2.

The library at Teachers' College, Columbia University, has banned "Tobacco Road," and "God's Little Acre," by Erskine Caldwell, although both books are on required reading lists in some courses at the university.

Another banned book is Louis Adamic's "The Native's Return." Government decree has banned the book in Jugoslavia, and any one having the book in his possession is liable to two years' imprisonment. The penalty for bringing it into the country is from five to ten years. No newspaper or magazine is allowed even to mention it.

Arnold Zweig and Stefan Zweig are not related. Arnold is German and Stefan is Austrian.

A new magazine is about to hit the newsstands. It is Pollen, edited by Walker Winslow, Lawrence A. Harper and Irene Kilbourne, and it is published right here in Los Angeles at 1046½ Ingraham street.

Peter Neagoe does something new. Instead of announcing that all the characters in his book are fictitious, he comes right out and says that all of the people in his novel, "Easter Sun," are real, and that he was once in love with the principal character, Ileana.

Samuel Hopkins Adams will stay in New York until after the publication, in April, of his new novel, "Gorgeous Hussy," after which he will return to his home in Auburn.

Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art" is creeping up on Hervey Allens "Anthony Adverse," although the latter is still rated by Baker and Taylor as the best renter.

Biography And Adventure in Non-Fiction of Week

"Nijinsky"

Author, Romola de Pulszky Nijinsky; publisher, Simon and Schuster.

Nijinsky danced; duels were fought; Carl Van Vechten was severely beaten; Pavlowa fainted because he received more applause than she did; a prince fought for him; Diaghilev kept him under the sinister guard of a bearded moujik valet . . . and his wife, Romola, writes the story of his life.

Today Nijinsky sits in an insane asylum in Switzerland, muttering to himself and making little circles in the sand . . . and his wife has dipped her pen in the blood of her heart and has written one of the most poignantly moving, heroically conceived and utterly stunning books of the year.

Romola has written of Nijinsky's rise in the ballet; of her desperate wooing of this strange man; of Diaghilev's powerful influence; and of the tragic end of the world's greatest dancer.

This is a biography that tops any that have been released this season. For sheer human drama it is unparalleled.

"The Incurable Filibuster"

Author, Colonel Dean Ivan Lamb; publisher, Farrar and Rinehart.

There probably were a few wars since 1906 that Colonel Dean Ivan Lamb didn't take part in, but they were going on in another section of the globe while he was fighting somewhere else, and he just couldn't make them.

Lamb calls himself "the incurable filibuster," and his book is a gusty, lively account of his adventures.

Besides fighting, he wandered around the world gambling, working in the Canal Zone, mining, and flying.

The book is a grand adventure to read and it is important also as a comment on Central and South American situations.

"No One To Blame: An African Adventure"

Author, Margaret Corson Hubbard; publisher, Minton, Balch.

Something new in African books—the author hasn't a single photograph of herself posing with the big black savages.

Mrs. Hubbard tells of a trip to Africa that failed. The Hubbards' "movie operator" had taken only one picture before, and that of a horse-race; visitors from home descended upon them and ate up their slim supply of food and borrowed their money; there was a mutiny, a minor jungle war, the river rose forty feet, and the biggest accomplishment of the whole trip was getting out of it alive.

Mrs. Hubbard writes easily and humorously, and the book is a tack in the balloon-tire school of African adventure.

IATSE GOES INTO ACTION

TRADE VIEWS by W. R. WILKERSON

•NEVER, in the long history of this picture business, have conditions pertaining to the production of pictures been in such an upset state. Pictures of any quality made under those conditions are the exceptions rather than the rule. A continuation of the present condition will spell wreck and ruin for 90 per cent of the companies now struggling under their administrations.

And the remarkable part of it all is that, instead of fighting to eliminate the evils, more evils are being heaped up.

It all starts with the story and its adaptation for a picture. In most plants, writers are looked on with contempt. Directors, good directors, are given as little credit. There is no attempt to build personalities, to encourage performance, to promote good casting. Costs of production are twice and three times as much as they should be for the reason that no one cares—there is no penalty. Production control is turned over to men who, for the most part, should not even be in the business.

Yet salaries are paid each and every week and the business goes on. It must be earning its way.

This is, truly, a great business. It zooms on with hardly any effort, any capable effort. What would it be, what would be its returns, if production were handled intelligently by men and women who knew what it was all about; by individuals interested in promoting progress, in making good pictures?

This business is wide open for an organization whose combined executives have no other thought than the making of good pictures, of making them at a reasonable price, of being honest with all the people working with them, of rewarding any forward suggestion or advance on the part of their creators. The industry is pleading for better pictures and is offering more money than has ever been paid for entertainment, for successful accomplishments. But most of our present producers are not attracted by it, because they can't see it, they don't understand the business, they don't know how to go about it. They can't make good pictures.

Para. Convention Here

New York.—Paramount has decided on holding its annual sales convention in Los Angeles, with representation from all the country, abandoning the plan for regional meetings. The date is June 20.

RKO 'Elephant' Still on Its Hands

New York. — RKO's white elephant, the Center Theatre, is producing more headaches. It is now reported that officials of the Philharmonic and Metropolitan Opera House, who tested the theatre acoustics last week, report it will not do for concert or opera because of excessive echo and reverberation.

It is thought this is caused by the unusually large number of ribbon loud speakers installed in the house for amplification.

Hays Orders Rewrite Of Cain's 'Postman'

New York.—The Hays office has informed MGM that it will not approve the James M. Cain story, "The Postman Always Rings Twice," unless it is re-written to meet the approval of the censors.

It looks as though the studio is stuck for its $25,000, the purchase price. Two associate producers have refused to date to handle the picture unless the orginal story line is used.

Postpone Erpi Suit

Wilmington.—At the request of Erpi, a three week's postponement has been granted of the suit against that company by the Stanley Circuit of Philadelphia and General Talking Pictures. Hearings were scheduled to start today.

Appeals To Federal Attorney General, Asking Prosecution Of Majors On NRA Violation

Washington.—Clear up to United States Attorney General Cummings the IATSE sound men's local of Hollywood has carried its fight for recognition and establishment of the old wage scale, with the prospect strong here, according to insiders, that in line with procedure in other industries the Federal department will take action on the kick.

The union demands prosecution of the producers in the Federal Courts for alleged violations of Section 7A of the NRA code governing the motion picture industry. The complaint was filed in Los Angeles with Pierson M. Hall, United States Attorney, and he in turn filed an official complaint with

Weekend Rain Hits Broadway Grosses

New York.—Theatre grosses on Broadway this week won't mean much in the comparative tables, so just make a note of it now. Heavy rain Saturday crippled the first hope the picture companies had for recovery from the Holy Week slump, and then it kept right on through Easter Sunday to effectually ruin the first half of the week's business.

Local theatres now figure at least two-thirds of the week's gross in the tills between the Friday opening day and the last show Sunday.

'Bugle Sounds' Again

Joel Sayre joins the MGM writing staff to write a new screen play for "Bugle Sounds," the studio's prize on-again off-again production.

Para. Will Release 14 British Pictures

New York.—Following the conferences now on with Emanuel Cohen on Paramount's Coast production plans for next year, announcement will also be made that Paramount will include fourteen British-made pictures in its coming schedule.

It is not decided yet whether Paramount will enter into production association itself for the pictures or select the list from product of established British producers.

'Rip Tide' Breaks All Loew's State Records

"Rip Tide," the Irving Thalberg production for MGM, with Norma Shearer starred, set a new record for Loew's State Theatre Saturday and then topped that figure yesterday. Saturday was several hundred dollars ahead of the "Tugboat Annie" gross, which held the record previously.

Radio After Chatterton

Pan Berman is negotiating with Ruth Chatterton for the star spot in "By Your Leave" at Radio, deal hinging on the treatment of the play by Sam Mintz, since the player wants to okay her own stories.

GTE Receiver Stays

Wilmington.—Efforts of a stockholder, Emma A. Shaffer, to secure the removal of Daniel O. Hastings as ancillary receiver of General Theatre Equipment, Inc., were denied by Judge Patterson Saturday.

HARRY COHN FIGHTS TO REMAIN WITH COLUMBIA

New York.—With Harry Cohn on his way here for final disposition of the majority stock in Columbia Pictures Corp., it is understood that he will make all efforts to block the sale unless he is retained as the Columbia production head.

The deal as it is now set provides for both Harry and Jack Cohn to dispose of their entire stock holdings which are believed to represent about

THE LOW DOWN

Funny story behind the recent sale of "I'll Sell Anything" to Warners. Seems that a while back, the Fox studio wanted an "auctioneer story" for Will Rogers, so it called upon Albert J. Cohen and Terry Shannon and suggested that they write up the idea. So the writers, after due time, returned to Fox with their story, which consisted of only a few typewritten pages. So the big, bad Fox said there wasn't enough to it—why, it was only an idea, etc., and turned them away. When Warners cast an eye on this same brainchild, they leaped to the newness of the idea with great glee, and bought it immediately. So now everybody owes a vote of thanks to Fox for planting the idea in the first place.

Friends of Adela Rogers St. John will tell you that she's here to rush proceedings for divorce from her husband—and that she's in a big hurry. And they'll also tell you that the reason for the rush is that Adela plans to marry Rudy Vallee the minute she's free! Yeah, honest! And Rudy's life-story, authored by Adela, has started in Liberty.

There's going to be plenty of dust raised around here by the clients of a certain agent who are fed up with his recent tactics. In fact, there's been quite some dust raised already by indignant actors, etc., who are refusing to pay commissions, and deserting this fellow's management. The agent took himself an outside job, and went east, leaving his business affairs in the hands of one (we are told) big cluck—and when the clients complained and cut off the commissions, the agent, from New York, started attaching their salaries. Naturally the clients are in an uproar—to say nothing of the agent's business!

New York REVIEWS

"BOTTOMS UP"

Fox prod.; director, David Butler; writers, B. G. DeSylva, David Butler, Sid Silvers; music and lyrics, Harold Adamson, Gus Kahn, Burton Lane, Richard Whiting.

Music Hall

Mirror: This gay and spirited little comedy is real entertainment. It is packed with laughs. It is played by a great comedy cast. The background of the film is authentic Hollywood, with its landmarks, its quaint social customs and its erratic natives.

World-Telegram: Here, in "Bttoms Up," is a musical film so thoroughly tuneful and amusing, so thoroughly free from the usual spectacular song and dance numbers lavished on such productions, that it is one of the special cinema delights of recent weeks. There are several ingratiating songs in "Bottoms Up," the dance numbers are expertly staged and the acting of the entire cast, notably that of Spencer Tracy, is excellent.

Post: A bright and prankish story is rendered somewhat less bright by the evident reluctance of the authors to let got of t once they had whipped it into plot form. It is too long for comfort, and the spots where it sags have an inevitable tendency to slow up the pace. But, there is imagination in the telling, smoothness in the direction and some first-class comedy by Spencer Tracy, Herbert Mundin, Sid Silvers and Harry Green.

Times: It is a neat, carefree piece of work, which is helped greatly by Spencer Tracy, Pat Paterson, an English actress who here makes her American picture bow, Herbert Mundin, Harry Green, and, to a lesser extent, by John Boles. It is an artless little tale, which, like many of its ilk, proves to be thoroughly entertaining.

Herald-Tribune: Here is an amiable, inoffensive little musical comedy with sentimental leanings, considerably brightened by the presence in the cast of Spencer Tracy and Sid Silvers. Its story is no more original than any retelling of a national folk legend. "Bottoms Up" is a good enough program musical.

News: While there are five song numbers in the film, the director, David Butler, has wisely refrained from using too much footage in the presentation of these numbers. He has made the story of paramount interest and he has presented it in a most amusing manner. The plot is far from new, but is presented in a fresh and amusing manner that makes it thoroughly entertaining.

Journal: A pleasantly diverting comedy with music, set behind the scenes of the cinema studios. The song numbers are amiably introduced as part of the story and there are consequently no conventional chorus routines photographed from the ceiling.

American: It depicts the Sunkist City and its home-folk, not as glamorously wicked, not as ludicrously funny, but as just plain, ordinary unadulterated dull. And with the exception of a few bright spots, the same may be said of the picture. The photography is fine and the production lavish out of all proportion to the entertainment value of the work.
